SPAN DIRECTORS REVISE WARNING

Action Is Taken On Consultants' Report Issued Last Week On Dangers To Bridge

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The stroke of a pen yesterday wiped out a warning by Golden Gate Bridge consultants that parts of the span are in such bad shape that it would be "extremely risky" if the bridge were hit by a severe wind or earthquake.

The warning came a week ago in a preliminary report from Ammann and Whitney of New York, longtime engineering consultants to the bridge district.

A rewritten final version submitted yesterday to district directors, however, said only that there was "a risk." And, instead of urging "immediate replacement" of the defective parts, as in the preliminary version, the final report calls for their "timely replacement." It adds that there would be a risk only if the parts are not replaced "for any extended length of time."

The district's engineer, Harry D. Reilich, had termed the wording of the preliminary report "poor." He said last week that there "is no doubt in anybody's mind that this bridge is safe." There was no discussion of the changed language.

The final report, however, offered far more details of just how severe conditions are along the key parts of the bridge. The targets of the study are remaining original suspender ropes and their connections to the roadbed supports. The ropes are the vertical steel cables between the roadway and main cables spanning the Golden Gate atop its towers.

Wires in the ropes, the final report found, "are worn to paper-thin condition or actually are broken as a result of corrosion."

Conditions on the San Francisco side of the span are twice as severe as on the Marin side, it said, adding "the frequency of broken wires found on the ropes removed to date from the San Francisco side span is quite alarming."

Some areas were so badly corroded, it said, "that they disintegrated under the touch of a finger."

"Practically every single connection has suffered severe corrosion damage," it said.

Flipping through the report, which was illustrated with color photographs clearly showing the deterioration, directors quickly approved a $90,000 offer by the consultants to engineer replacement of the defective parts, a two-year project which

RUTH WILLIAMS

Editor Freed; Suspects Held

Ransom Loot Is Found

ATLANTA (UPI) — A brawny 33-year-old subcontractor and his wife were arrested today and held under a total of $1.5-million bail in the kidnaping of Atlanta Constitution Editor Reg Murphy.

The ransom loot, what the FBI described as a "voluminous" amount of $10, $20, $50, and $100 bills was found in the home of the suspects.

Murphy was ransomed for $700,000 after spending 50 hours in the hands of a right wing group that called itself the American Revolutionary Army.

The suspects, William and Betty Williams, were taken into custody in their suburban Lilburn home about 2 a.m., five hours after Murphy was set free.

The Williamses were brought before U.S. Magistrate J. Roger Thompson shortly after 11 a.m. Thompson set $1 million bail for Williams on a federal charge of extorting $700,000 from the Constitution by threat of violence to Murphy.

Williams' 26-year-old wife was held on a $500,000 bond on a federal charge of having knowledge of the kidnaping and concealing it.

A federal kidnap charge cannot be brought against the Williamses unless it is established that Murphy was transported across a state line. State kidnaping charges were expected to be brought, however.

The federal complaint charged Williams, aided by "unknown others," abducted Murphy from his northeast Atlanta home Wednesday night by tricking him into believing his help was needed in arranging the distribution of 300,000 gallons of heating oil to the city's needy.

TELLS OF CAPTURE — Outside the Murphy home in Atlanta, John R. (Reg) Murphy, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, speaks to newmen about his abduction while another newsman gives Murphy's wife, Virginia, a buss on the cheek. Murphy was freed last night after the paper met a $700,000 ransom demand. (UPI Telephoto)

Williams, apparently the man who had identified himself in calls as the colonel in the "American Revolution Army" that abducted Murphy, told reporters as he entered the federal courthouse for the arraignment: "The army was defeated. But it's no Waterloo."

Williams also said, "my wife is innocent of any charges."

Asked how long the kidnaping had been planned, he replied flippantly, "two hours."

Williams, about 6-3, 230 pounds, with long brown hair and sideburns, arrived at the courthouse wearing a brown, buckskin-fringed jacket. Mrs. Williams, dark-haired and attractive, wore a beige coat and slacks. She appeared to have been crying.

Both were handcuffed.

Williams smiled as newsmen crowded around him as he was brought into the Federal Building.

He told the court he was convicted in 1965 of interstate transportation of a stolen motor vehicle "through foreign commerce" and given an 18 months sentence. He also said he was placed on one year's probation in 1961 for forging a federal government check.

Defense attorney Doug Johnston of Atlanta told the magistrate he was not prepared for a preliminary hearing since he did not get the case until 7 a.m.

FBI agents said the Williamses were arrested at 2:02 a.m.

Johnston asked for a continuance of the preliminary hearing until at least next week, and it was set for March 4.

Murphy, awakened with news of the arrests after just two and a half hours sleep, said he was "delighted they were caught."

"I think it is interesting in this case that they let me go and within five hours they had been caught...They had been put in jail and there was no profit in it for them.

"And I think it is important that other people remember

Mayor Of Fairfax To Leave Council

By NELS JOHNSON

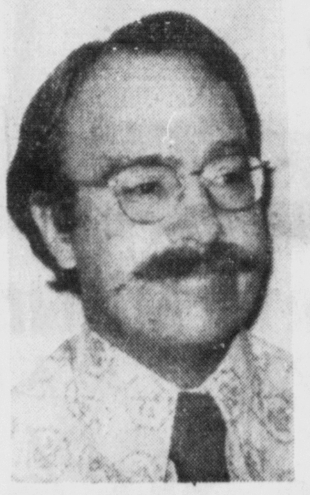

Fairfax Mayor E. Ross Parkerson, elected in 1972 for a four-year term, said yesterday he will resign after the March 5 municipal election.

The 42-year-old Parkerson, an urban planner for the Marin County Planning Department, cited personal reasons for the move. He did not elaborate.

"Yes, I am going to resign," he admitted when the question was put to him by the Independent-Journal. He said he had not intended to make public his decision until after the municipal election in which three fellow councilmen face reelection.

"The whole idea of resigning is a recent thing. . .something I finally came to grips with," he said.

The timing of his departure from office will give the newly elected council the option of appointing a successor to Parkerson or calling a special election.

House Impeachment Study Under Question

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department has taken issue with the House Judiciary Committee legal study which asserts that a President can be impeached for conduct not explicitly illegal.

A Justice Department study released last night said history does not provide an answer to a question which may become crucial as the House moves toward a decision on whether grounds exist for impeaching President Nixon.

The Justice Department study, which went to the White House, special prosecutor Leon Jaworski and the House committee, was a case of fighting history with history.

On Thursday, the House panel published a 65-page study, reaching back 600 years, which contended "impeachable conduct need not be criminal."

It portrayed impeachment as a "constitutional safety valve" which protects the country against a President who fails to fulfill his duty to "take care that the laws be properly executed."

Many of the 17 Republicans on the 38-member committee disputed the conclusion. They said the American people would not tolerate it if Nixon were put on trial in the Senate for charges that do not allege criminal behavior.

In another development, the House panel adopted procedures to safeguard the secrecy of evidence it hopes to receive from the White House and from Jaworski.

Jaworski provided the committee with a 15-page memo listing evidence he has amassed. This was seen as a major breakthrough in the committee's efforts to collect evidence for determining Nixon's involvement in Watergate and related matters.

Previously the prosecutor said he would be unable to furnish grand jury evidence to anyone. He said he was worried about jeopardizing convictions through pretrial publicity.

The rules adopted by the committee yesterday bind members to secrecy after they examine evidence. They can examine it only in the committee's guarded offices and without taking notes.

John M. Doar, special impeachment counsel, said he was ready to write the White House for evidence. Subpoenas will follow if the White House rejects the requests, he said.

He disclosed the committee's 90-member impeachment staff has already started interviewing witnesses. It is operating as privately as possible.

The Justice Department's conclusions on what constitutes grounds for impeachment were contained in the bulky appendix of a report which it did not make public.

Appointment Only At One Gas Station

There are no long lines of frantic motorists at the Jolly Washers car wash and service station in Petaluma.

Autos zip in and out, filling up with gasoline. There are no delays and none of the car crush experienced by many other area stations.

It's easy to get gas at the Jolly Washers — if you have an appointment, that is.

Manager John (Lucky) Kelly said he decided to sell gasoline by appointment only about three days ago.

To get a date with the gas pump, it's necessary to come into the service station a couple of days in advance and make a reservation, he said. Right now, for example, Jolly Washers, at 483 East Washington Street, is all booked up through Wednesday.

Motorists who get their tanks filled then can make an appointment for a refill, according to Kelly.

Predictably, "the people who have appointments like the system and the people without them don't like it," he said.

"It's the only way," Kelly added.

Slower Course Asked On School Balances

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department asked the Supreme Court today to go slow on racial desegregation of city schools by crossing suburban district lines.

In a brief on the Detroit, Mich., desegregation case, U. S. Solicitor General Robert H. Bork said cross-district assignment of pupils as a remedy for illegal government-sanctioned segregation should be ordered only for the particular district involved in the violation.

Bork did not oppose a metropolitan-wide solution, but said that "where the schools of only one district have been affected, there is no constitutional requirement that the relief include a balancing of the racial composition of that district's schools with those of surrounding districts."

The Supreme Court is to hear oral arguments Feb. 27 in the Detroit case.

U. S. District Judge Stephen J. Roth and the 6th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals found deliberate segregation by both Detroit and Michigan in administering the city's school system, and ordered a plan prepared that would unify the predominantly black inner-city schools with 53 surrounding districts.

No specific plan is before the High Court, but only the question whether there should be one following the lower courts' guidelines. Roth directed that a plan be devised based on 15 school clusters, each containing a part of the Detroit system.

Bork suggested that the case be sent back to Roth to permit districts to present evidence on whether any legal violations have occurred within their borders. Roth had allowed some of the suburban districts to express their views but only on the appropriateness of a metropolitan plan.

The issue of city-suburb consolidation for school desegregation first reached the Supreme Court last year in a case involving Richmond, Va., and two surrounding counties, but no precedent was set.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., a former member of the Richmond City School Board and the Virginia Board of Education, disqualified himself in that case, which was thus decided on a tie vote. The result was that a merger plan devised for the Richmond school system was not carried.

Next Move Up To Patricia's Captors

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's kidnapers "got the ball back" today in a life and death game, with her father bowing out but the Hearst Corp. agreeing to put up the rest of a total of $6 million free food ransom.

Randolph Hearst said grimly, "The matter is now out of my hands" because the Symbionese Liberation Army demands for the girl's release far outstripped his personal fortune.

But a representative of the conclomerate controlling the vast Hearst entriprises said it would add $4 million to the kitty if 20-year-old Patricia is freed unharmed.

FBI Special Agent Charles Bates said the two statements threw the ball back to the SLA and mysterious "General Field Marshal Cinque" who had demanded Hearst come up with $4 million more than the $2 million already contributed to the "People In Need" food program.

Bates said the FBI was not about to make any move lest it jeopardize Patricia's life.

Although the Hearst family has stated that it would not press charges against the kidnapers if Patricia is released, U.S. Attorney General William Saxbe emphasized to an audience in Reno, Nev., that the abductors will be prosecuted, if captured.

"No private citizen could grant immunity, nor could I, nor could the President," Saxbe said. "If the kidnapers are caught, they will be prosecuted.

Television reporter Marilyn Baker said last night the girl was in the hands of an allwoman unit of the SLA. She said a dozen of the 25 to 30 members of the terrorist sect were female.

Saying her information came from within the organization, Miss Baker reported on station KQED that Cinque was not with the captive girl and that Patricia may not be in the San Francisco area. She said their tapes were made separately.

Miss Baker was the one who first identified Cinque as escaped black convict Donald D. DeFreeze. She said women were acting as guards to "do the dirty work."

There was no official comment on Miss Baker's report.

Meanwhile centers for distributing free food under the program set up by the father of kidnaped Patricia Hearst were closed today after a chaotic opening day that resulted in dozens of arrests and injuries as thousands jammed the distribution points.

The "People in Need" program waas created with a $2 million fund by Patricia's father Randolph Hearst in an effort to meet demands of her kidnapers.

When the heastily organized giveaway began Friday at four centers in the San Francisco Bay area some of the crowds became unruly, and one San Francisco policeman said they acted "like a bunch of animals."

At least 21 persons were injured in melees in Oakland, and police there arrested 35 persons. Five persons were treated for cuts and bruises at an Oakland hosiital.

About 9,000 persons actually received food yesterday, although the operators of the program had expectedto distribute the giveaways to 20,000.

In general, the food bags distributed contained one or two frozen turkeys, a box of saltine crackerrs, a box of biscuit mix, and a small can of tomato juice. Some bags also contained eggs and milk.

Food trucks were stalled yesterday and traffic bogged down whe more than 20,000 persons showed up for the free packages. Fist fights broke out, and there was case of looting a nearby store.

At the end of the day it was announced the center would remain closed until next Tuesday.

Shortly after noon Friday, a weary Randolph Hearst came out of the family home at suburban Hillsborough before television cameras.

"I'd like to make a statement," he said.

"The size of the latest demand of the SLA is far beyond my financial capability. Therefore, the matter is now out of my hands."

Charles Gould, publisher of the San Francisco Examiner, then announced that the Hearst Corp. was prepared to contribute $4 million more to PIN if Patricia is freed uninjured.

Gould said the corporation would put up $2 million immediately on her release and $2 million more in January, 1975.

"Neither the Hearst Corp. nor the Hearst foundations is controlled by members of the Hearst family" Gould said.

"No other funds will be committed by the corporation or foundation under any circumstances."

Hearst has the titles of president-editor of the Examiner and chairman of the board of the Hearst Corp.

By GEORGE NEVIN

Marin County faced a serious water shortage within year when the Marin Municipal Water District enacted a moratorium on new connections last spring, a superior court judge was told yesterday.

The testimony by J. Dietrich Stroeh, acting general manager of the district, came at the conclusion of a three-day trial on a developer's suit challenging the connection freeze.

Stroeh also testified that the State Board of Public Health suggested the water district enact a moratorium or a rationing program after a bond issue to bring Russina River water to Marin was defeated in 1972.

The McCarthy Co. of San Rafael sued the district last march to force Marin Municipal to grant water to a proposed 292-unit housing development near the Marin Civic Center.

Under questioning yesterday by San Rafael attorney Albert Bianchi, who represents the developer, Stroeh said the district's five reservoirs usually contain enough water to allow two years to react to a threatened shortage.

But, he said, when the district board enacted the moratoirum last April it had only one year's grace because Marin had only light rains during the winter of 1971-72.

Had the current winter been a dry one, the district would have found itself "in a very dangerous situation," said Stroeh.

Judge E. Warren McGuire, hearing the case without a jury, asked attorneys to submit legal briefs by Friday and promised a ruling within 30 days.

Stroeh said he disagrees with William R. Seeger, who was district general manager until he resigned in October, that it was statistically unlikely for the district to have two dry years in a row.

Although Seeger testified Thursday that the district never had experienced two dry years back to back in its 60 years of operation, Stroeh said such dry cycles have occurred.

He also said that after Marin voters in 1971 defeated a bond issue to bring Russian River water to the county, the state public health board wrote a letter expressing concern that the district was using more water than was replaced by rainfall.

Humphrey Will Seek Reelection

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — Declaring he is "not ready to be buried or retire," Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said yesterday he will forego another attempt at the presidency and run for reelection to the Senate in 1976.

Humphrey

Humphrey, who has received a "clean bill of health" after X-ray treatments for a small bladder tumor, said he would support fellow Minnesota Sen. Walter Mondale for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I'm giving my full support to Mr. Mondale," Humphrey said. "I think he should run in the primaries if Ted Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. runs or not. I plan to run for re-election in 1976. I have no plans to run for the presidency myself. I just plan to represent the people of Minnesota by staying a senator."

Strike In Iceland

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — About 35,000 workers, or one-sixth of the nation, went on strike today, halting all but essential services.

The walkout, called by the General Workers Union, an association of 220 labor unions, was staged over demands for pay increases of up to 33 per cent, a figure regarded as too inflationary by the government.

Port Link Cut

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — The road linking Phnom Penh with its only deepwater seaport has been severed by rebel forces for the past eight days, field officers said today.

Seven miles of Highway 4 linking Phnom Penh with the deepwater port of Kompong Som, have been brought under insurgent control, denying the movement of supply trucks between the cities, officers reported.

At Summit

LAHORE, Pakistan (UPI) — Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman arrived at the Islamic summit meeting today, stepping onto Pakistani soil for the first time since this nation held him as a political prisoner.

Pakistani Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who extended recognition to Bangladesh yesterday as a goodwill gesture for the summit opening, greeted Mukib at planeside with a 19-gun welcome.

Pay Hike Set

DETROIT (UPI) — The nation's 600,000 auto workers will get an eight-cent per hour pay boost in March to offset partially the inflation eating away at their weekly paycheck.

Before the energy crisis created massive layoffs in the industry, more than 700,000 workers were employed by General Motors, Ford and Chrysler. The United Auto Workers (UAW) yesterday said those still on the job would get the pay boost during the first week in March.

The latest cost-of-living raise will bring the average straight time pay for "big three" workers to about $5.64 an hour.

Strike To End?

LONDON (UPI) — Leaders of Britain's 269,000 striking coal miners expressed hope today for an end to the crippling, 13-day-old walkout, which led the government to call new elections.

"I would be damned foolish if I didn't say I was more optimistic," Mineworkers Union President Joe Gormley stated after the government disclosed a coal pay mixup that could lead to a major wage increase.

Yorkshire mine union leader Arthur Scargill said Prime Minister Edward Heath might even announce a coal settlemnt before Britons go to the polls in the Feb. 28 parliamentary election sparked by the strike.

Sidetracks Cuba

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger went into the final session of a three-day conference with Latin American foreign ministers today after refusing to be drawn into a controversial discussion of Cuba.

The Tlatelolco conference, named for Mexico's Foreign Ministry building, was scheduled to close this afternoon with adoption of a cocument calling for a "new American community"; in the Western Hemisphere.

Kissinger succeeded in preventing the touchy issue of Cuba from dominating the conference, but agreed to discuss the similarly controversial problem of giant U.S. companies operating in the region.

Seeks Drug Stay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department has announced it will seek a stay of execution of a court order ending the army's controversial European drug control program.

A Justice Department spokesman said yesterday the department will go to the Federal Court of Appeals Monday to ask for the stay pending filing of a formal appeal.

Earlier, Gen. Creighton Abrams, Army chief of staff, was quoted as telling a Senate committee the drug problem among GIs stationed in Europe is as serious as it was in Vietnam.

More Air Raids

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnamese warplanes stepped up the air war today with raids against Communist forces in the Mekong Delta, the Central Highlands and the suburbs of Saigon.

Military sources said President Ngueyan Van Thieu has fired or transferred 15 of his 94 army generals. They said one of the 10 officers to be fired was Maj. Gen. Nguyan Van Kiem, Thieu's personal chief of staff.

Military sources said government warplanes bombarded a column of Soviet-made Molotova trucks today as it traveled down a road near Lai Khe, 35 miles north of Saifon.

Attack Warning

BELFAST (UPI) — Authorities warned today of more attacks against Northern Ireland's businesses following the bombing of one of Belfast's biggest department stories.

A CHAOTIC OPENING

The Hearst's "People in Need" program was opened in chaos. At least three persons were arrested and a television camera crew member beaten. The worst incidents were in Oakland where food recipients began throwing food at one another and most of it — turkeys, luncheon meats, fresh milk and eggs — wound up on the ground, forcing a giant cleanup operation. Talks Launched To Keep Gasoline Pumps Operating WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government, with extra gas directed to many of the nation's pumps, turned today to the problems of the men who man them.

Deputy energy chief John C. Sawhill and top government mediator W. J. Usery met for an hour with leaders of a national organization of service station owners to discuss the retailers threat of a nationwide shutdown by Monday if they fail to get permission to increase profits.

Sawhill called the session "constructive" and said he hoped to have an announcement later in the day after a conference with Treasury Secretary George Shultz, Federal energy chief William O. Simon and meetings with several regional groups of retailers.

Simon late last night announced allocation od an additional 240 million gallons of gasoline to 26 states and the District of Columbia in hope of ending the long lines at gas stations.

Simon said he could not promise the severe gasoline shortage would end "in one day or two days but it will be quite rapid. We're moving with all deliberate haste on this."

Simon said President Nixon was determined "to reduce these lines and inconveniences."

After this morning's session with Sawhill and Usery, Charles Binsted, executive director of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, said "Our reception was fine, excellent. But since we're going to have further meetings I don't think it would be fair to say what will come out of these until our announcement later this afternoon."

Many dealers across the country have threatened to "pump out" their supplies, selling maximum amounts on a first-come-first-served basis, in protest of shrinking profits. The dealers' group is demanding permission to raise profits one-tenth of a cent a gallon for every 1 per cent cutback in local allocations.

Simon promised yesterday action will be taken to ease their financial crunch, adding, "If you think these actions are necessary to get my attention, you are needlessly inconveniencing the American people."

"I think they're entitled to a fair profit for a fair day's work. But we must determine what indeed a fair profit is," Simon said later.

The FEO said at midnight it had won a stay from an appeals court of an earlier U.S. District Court ruling in Baltimore that Maryland was entitled to 16 million additional gallons under the previous allocation system.

The new allocation announced by Simon will give Maryland, where gasoline lines have stretched three miles, an extra 8.8 million gallons.

"The inventories in Maryland are sufficient for the oil companies to immediately commence distribution," Simon said, adding he expects the allocation in that state, at least, to end shortages and lines by March 1.

Simon ordered major oil companies to provide the additional supplies out of inventories while a new equalization formula among the states is developed. "We feel we have sufficient flexibility to draw down at this time to take care of these problems," the Federal Energy Office administrator said.

JOHN GARDNER

Common Cause Founder Unique

By LOUISE SWEENEY
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON — John Gardner and his organization, Common Cause, are as inseparable as the surf from the sea in the public mind. But behind that open citizens' lobby which he founded is an enigmatic and unique man.

To the more than 300,000 members of Common Cause he is an idealist who has tilted successfully with the windmills of government and hasn't broken a lance yet.

To political commentator Elizabeth Drew he is a hero of ideas who should be Time magazine's man of the year.

To his critics he's something else: President Nixon's special consultant, Patrick Buchanan, calls him "the chauffeured capo (chieftain) of Common Cause," and writer Robert Sherrill has described him with a sneer as "a first-rate apocalyptic salesman."

In person he is a tall man, 6 feet 2 inches, a calm and strong presence with brown eyes, faintly gold flecked, a well-furrowed field of gray hair, a habit of raising and lowering his eyebrows like knitting needles as he talks.

The man who grew up in Beverly Hills, when it was just a little country town 11 miles from Los Angeles, has led a life that has been like a cross-section of today's complex society:

President of the Carnegie Foundation, secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, chairman of the Urban Coalition, and now chairman of Common Cause.

Not bad for a boy from the lima-bean fields, who was a championship swimmer during his undergraduate days at Stanford, surfaced for a master's degree in his major, psychology, and then went on to write a Ph.D. thesis on "Levels of Aspiration" at the University of Californiat at Berkeley.

Gardner, who taught psychology at two women's colleges, says he chose it because of his "persistent interest in human motivation, what makes people tick, what drives them, what moves them."

Then what moves a prime-mover like Gardner?

A long-time friend and business associate, Tom Matthews, now vice-president of Common Cause, sees the Gardner career as a lifelong drive toward effective change in society culminating in Common Cause. Mr. Matthews remembers its start:

"He did it all himself, with only his own credibility, going from coast to coast in the summer of 1970, raising a quarter of a million dollars from 10 to 15 individuals like John Rockefeller, who gave on faith in John Gardner alone."

The Man in whom they had that kind of faith is the man who says that his No. 1 priority on a list of critical issues for the United States is:

"Whether we have the kind of society in which individuals can participate, feel that they have some importance as individuals and aren't just anonymous numbers, grains of sand in a bucket, and this has to do with whether we have open, accessible, accountable government, responsive government. Because this is the citizen's most important instrument for getting a grip on this enormous, intricately organized society . . . We want citizens who have an alive sense of being part of the community, part of the social venture."

This man who sounds like Socrates in a navy blue suit has stirred thousands of people to join in Common Cause to improve that society since 1970. Using his quarter-million-dollar seed money, he began a mammoth direct-mail and advertising campaign which professionals scoffed at: "You can't get the man to use hyperbole," snapped one of them.

So Gardner wrote his own copy: "Everybody's organized but the people," was the headline of his first appeal; the people responded, 100,000 of them signing up at $15 each in less than half the time predicted and at a much lower cost. Since then the organization has jumped to its current 300,000 membership with a $5-million annual budget and an impressive list of accomplishments.

Among them: disclosure of 1972 presidential and congressional campaign contributions; reform of the House's seniority system; spearheading the right to vote for 18-year-olds; stopped the SST.

The essence of the formidable but warm man behind Common Cause is elusive, but there are clues in the titles of his books: "Excellence," "The Recovery of Confidence," "Self-Renewal," and the recent "In Common Cause." The quest for excellence runs like a gold thread through all of them.

Does Gardner feel that there is some way the present administration can salvage "excellence" from the shipwreck of Watergate?

"If President Nixon is innocent as he says he is, then I would say yes, the possibility remains that he can salvage the administration. But it would involve an openness and candor, an open style of operating, and willingness to take constructive reforms that he has shown no inclination toward.

"For example: He could open up this administration, hold more press conferences. He could see more people, support constructive reforms, such as campaign financing reforms, disclosure of lobbying activites, open meetings, freedom of information. . . correct the nonenforcement of the Freedom of nenforement of the Freedom of Information Act of 1966 with an executive order . . . And he could take a very psotive series of steps with respect to the repair of the senior civil service . . ."

To his fiercely loyal friends, Gardner appears to have few mannerisms or quirks. There is one thing. He hums. Softly, in a pleasant baritone semimonotone, when he's relaxed or happy — or, it's been suggested, to shut out the conversation around him so he can think. He also is a marathon walker — covering 10 or more miles at a time.

Gardner's work rings with his insistence on the realization of moral values in society, on specific action by citizens who are both critical and loving of that society. He describes himself as coming from "a Protestant background" and says, "I believe that we're in a period where we have to rediscover religious truth . . . There's a great deal of building to do in the field of values and moving beliefs."

He talks hopefully of what may spring from the present national mood of cynicism and distrust of government:

"Even the despair which has characterized the mood of the past decade is a reflection of concern for values . . . I think that this country on the whole is sufficiently resilient, that it's going to respond to the Watergate scandals with a very positive thrust toward a healthier system . . ."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sears stores has reached a settlement with one of three unions that have been on strike at two stores here for six months.

Three Supervisors To Fight Toll Hike

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Three San Francisco supervisors yesterday voted to fight the 25-cent increase in the Golden Gate Bridge toll.

Supervisors Robert Gonzales, John L. Molinari and Terry Francois, who make up the streets and transportation committee, approved a resolution instructing the San Francisco city attorney to begin court action against the hike, which is to go into effect March 1.

On Monday, the full board is to consider the issue of whether official city policies are binding on bridge directors.

The supervisors believe the Feb. 9 vote by the bridge board to raise the toll to 75 cents is illegal. They object to the fact that three San Francisco bridge directors voted for the increase even though the board of supervisors had gone on record as opposing it.

San Francisco directors supporting the boost were District President Stephan Leonoudakis, William Moskovitz and Lawrence Mazzola.

Leonoudakis claimed he was a free agent and not bound by any policy of the supervisors. He said he represents "the best interest of the district."

Of the 18 members on the district board, nine are from San Francisco and nine are from Marin and Sonoma counties.

would start by the end of this year and cost $4.5 million.

Half of the original ropes and connections are being replaced under a $3.8 million contract. More than 100 of the 250 ropes already have been replaced under the contract.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

LARKSPUR — Authorized the staff to advertise for bids for the $13.5 million Larkspur ferry terminal after the federal government approves a pending application for funds to cover 80 per cent of the cost. Directors also increased the district's application for federal bus and ferry system funds from $43 million to $51 million.

DOCK — Approved a request from Robert F. Bliss of San Rafael to allow him to dismantle part of the old loading dock at the ferry terminal site. He will pay the district $100 to salvage the wood.

CONFLICT — Referred to committee a proposal by San Francisco radio talk program host Art Finley that directors sign statements they have no conflicts of interest as bridge officials.

PRIMER — Bought 450 gallons of zinc dust oxide primer from low bidder Fuller-O'Brien Corp. for $4,728.

BICYCLES — Adopted an ordinance requiring bicyclists to walk through construction areas. The California Highway Patrol asked for the ordinance so it can enforce the previously informal district requirement.

FUEL — Received staff report that Shell Oil Co. raised the price of diesel fuel for district buses and ferries from .3160 cents a gallon last month to .3380 cents on Feb. 11. Since the district uses about 146,000 gallons a month, the increase means its annual fuel cost will rise by $35,000. More price hikes are expected.

that there is no profit for the average guy going out and trying to do this sort of thing. First of all, he doesn't have the technical skill to know how to do it. Second, it is extremely dangerous thing if he is trying to make a political point."

Murphy made his comments to Atlanta radio station WSB, which, like the Constitution, is owned by Cox Enterprises.

Murphy, 40, was released about 9 p.m. Friday after two days of captivity by kidnapers he said identified themselves as a unit of the "American Revolutionary Armies." His release came about two hours after the Constitution, Georgia's largest morning newspaper, had paid $700,000 in ransom.

Murphy, who was blindfolded, said he was told his abductors consisted of four men and a woman.

"They played another one of those silly revolutionary games, but that's not the way you go about turning this country around," said Murphy, after a teary-eyed reunion with his wife and two teen-age daughters.

Murphy saw only one of his abductors—a "colonel" in the "American Revolutionary Armies" who lured the editor from his home Wednesday night on the pretext of donating heating oil for the needy.

"I thought at first they were going to kill me," Murphy said. "One of them said they'd kill me, either chloroform me and leave me to die in the trunk of the car or shoot me."

Instead, the kidnapers, using the code word "Susan," for Murphy's youngest daughter, negotiated for his release by calling telephone numbers at random with messages for relay to Constitution executives. The replies were given over television and radio.

Jim Minter, the Constitution's managing editor, driving a jeep in shirt-sleeves in 40-degree weather, on instructions from the kidnapers, dropped the ransom money in two suitcases at a highway sign on a deadend road about 30 miles north of Atlanta. Two hours later, Murphy was freed in the parking lot of a motel in north Atlanta.

"Thank God. It was the most trying thing a man can go through," said Murphy.

RESIGN

only incumbent Albert E. Gately, whose term has two more years to run, is certain of a place after March 5.

"In my mind, it's the fairest way to go," said Parkerson, adding that his decision to step down after the election was made without consideration as to who might be elected.

The new development caps rumors circulating in Fairfax that Parkerson might be holding office illegally on the ground that he had moved out of the city. The rumors gained strength as a result of a sworn financial statement filed last Monday at the county elections office.

Parkerson described as "inadvertent and an oversight" his listing on the required statement a telephone number belonging to a San Rafael residence on Alexander Avenue.

"My official address is 97 Meernaa Avenue" in Fairfax, he said.

(He noted that he had given on the financial statement the Meernaa Avenue address. He formerly resided at 70 Manor Road with his wife, Rose, from whom he was separated in November.)

Parkerson also noted he had corrected the oversight yesterday and given his Meernaa Avenue phone number (457-1324) to the elections department.

Although 97 Meernaa Avenue is listed in the phone book as the residence of J. Logan, the I-J tried to reach Parkerson there yesterday, using the new number he gave the elections department.

A young woman answered the phone and said Parkerson could be reached at 453-5213, the number of the San Rafael residence on Alexander Avenue that the mayor said he originally listed through oversight.

City Council Candidates Set Talks

City Council candidates' nights are scheduled for next week in Larkspur and Corte Madera.

Larkspur council candidates will speak at 8 p.m. Monday at the Tamalpais. The session is sponsored by the Larkspur Town Meeting and the League of Women Voters of Central Marin.

The Corte Madera candidates' night will be at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Corte Madera Recreation Center and also is sponsored by the League.

Two seats in Larkspur will be filled in the March 5 election. Mayor Alfred J. Malvino has filed for reelection, but Councilman Neil R. Brixon is not seeking another term.

Other Larkspur candidates are Charles H. Curley, planning commissioner, and Joi Losee, a housewife.

In Corte Madera five candidates are competing for three seats. Contenders are Jana Haehl, Albert A. Kostelic and Joel A. Shawn, (councilmen elected to fill unexpired terms in a special election in December), Larry P. Weingarth and John C. Reed.

Candidates will answer questions prepared by the league and make individual statements.

Registration For Classes Slated

Registration for spring classes held by the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department will begin March 2 for city residents and March 5 for nonresidents at the recreation center office, 180 Camino Alto.

Hours will be from 9 a.m. until noon and signups will end on March 9.

Board Member Seeks Reelection

Payne, 52, of 735 Sunset Parkway, is a claims manager for the Hartford Insurance Co. in San Francisco.

He has been a resident of Marin since early childhood and of Novato for 18 years.

Three seats open in the June election are those of Payne, Thomas D. Hardcastle and George de Tung.

Condominium Plans Before Novato Panel

The Novato Planning Commission will consider two requests to turn apartments into condominiums at 8 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

Elimination Of Water Discounts To Be Studied

The Cotati City Council will consider eliminating discounts for large water users at a meeting March 5.

Councilmen studied a proposed a $3 monthly "meter charge" and a 60 cents per 1,000 gallons fee for all users Tuesday, but decided to investigate other billing methods before taking action.

City Mgr. Robert A. Switzer said the council hopes to encourag conservation by discarding the present sliding fee schedule, which ranges from a high of $1.25 per 1,000 gallons for users of less than 3,000 gallons per month to a low of 28 cents per 1,000 gallons for users of more than 50,000 gallons a month.

Poetry Course Set Tomorrow

A five-week series of readings of modern international poetry will begin at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Bolinas Community Center.

The first program will feature English translations of works by Chinese poets Liu Ta-Pai, Sun Yu-Tang, Mao Tse-Tung and Ai Ch'ing, read by Roland Jacopetti, Shirley Sanford and Robert Scott. Herman Berlandt has selected and prepared background information on the poets whose works will be read.

The March 10 program will feature modern Russian poets; March 17, African poets; March 24, Latin American and March 31, European poets.

Donations will benefit the Bolinas School.

Transit Board To Eye Election

The Marin County Transit District board, meeting Tuesday at 8:30 a.m. at Civic Center, is expected to set a tax increase election for June 4.

The proposal, already tentatively approved by the transit board, would increase the district's nickel tax rate to 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

If approved by voters, the added tax revenues will be used to expand local bus service, which the county contracts for with the Golden Gate Bridge District.

A Hotline In Marin For Food

A 24-hour hotline is now operating in Marin for donations of food and volunteer help in the Hearst kidnaping food distribution program.

The telephone service is being sponsored by the Native Nations Organization, an American Indian group affiliated with the College of Marin, and by Community Action Marin, according to Jack Burr of Native Nations.

The groups want to set up a distribution center in this county and now are awaiting a decision from program organizers in San Francisco.

"Chances are that if the program doesn't fall apart, there will be a distribution point in Marin," Burr said. "But I don't anticipate that for about a month."

In the meantime, offers of contributions are being funneled to program officials. Persons interested in donating goods or their services may call 456-2266, a number donated by United Answering Service in San Rafael.

Burr stressed that the groups' participation in no way represents support for the Symbionese Liberation Army, the kidnapers of Patricia Hearst, daughter of newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst.

"In setting up the phone number we are responding to a crisis," Burr said. "This is not in sympathy with the SLA but simply to help people in a jam."

College Of Idaho Sets Marin Reception

The College of Idaho will sponsor a Marin County reception for alumni and prospective students at 2 p.m. March 9 in the Holiday Inn in San Rafael.

Color slides of the campus at Caldwell will be shown, and speakers will discuss the college and answer questions, according to Richard H. Winder, director of admissions.

A New Trial Is Slated On Assault Count

Caroline Janice Maxwell, 30, whose trial on assaulting her father with a knife ended in a hung jury last month, will be retried during the week of April 22.

Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best set the new date Thursday.

A jury in the courtroom of Judge Henry J. Broderick was unable to agree if Miss Maxwell was guilty of assault with a deadly weapon in an alleged knifing incident at the Strawberry home of John Crain last October.

The pair argued over Miss Maxwell's change of sex, according to the prosecution in the case. She was born Dennis Crain.

STOCKS ARE BONDS

An unidentified man experiences the stocks, an uncomfortable form of 17th Centruy punishment, during an Elizabethan Festival yesterday at the Marin Academy in San Rafael. The school's teachers and students created a Medeival English village for the event, replete with strolling poets and musicians, lords and ladies of the court, jugglers, wrestlers, and a host of village characters.

Chicago's Loop Feels Punch Gusting Winds And Snow

A wild snow storm with winds gusting to 60 miles per hour swept through Chicago yesterday, shattering windows in Loop skyscrapers, showering debris on pedestrians and killing one person.

A woman was killed in the LaSalle Street financial district when she was struck by a 500-pound steel A-frame apparently ripped off the 15th floor of a building under construction. An elderly man also died from an apparent heart attack while shovelling snow. Five other persons were injured in accidents caused by strong winds.

The storm raged at blizzard intensity and halted air traffic at O'Hare International Airport, brought expressway traffic to a standstill, closed schools and left an estimated 180,000 homes without power.

Commonwealth Edison Co. kept crews busy Friday night restoring power to 50,000 customers in northern Illinois still suffering the effects of the storm. However, the company said most of the service was restored by midnight.

Gusting winds knocked pedestrians off their feet, and offshore in Lake Michigan, the winds tore an empty, 290-foot tanker barge from its towing bridle. The barge drifted about 10 miles in 25-foot waves before a two-man rescue crew flew in by helicopter and secured the vessel by dropping anchor.

Other parts of the Midwest also received similar wintery blasts.

Records Show GOP Candidate For Assembly On Probation

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Municipal court records here show that Albert J. Schloegel, 23, a candidate for the Republican nomination in the Ninth Assembly District, is currently on probation on a 1972 conviction of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Court officials said Schloegel pleaded guilty on June 29, 1972, to the charge in connection with a Santa Rosa grocery store robbery committed by a minor on June 1 of that year.

Schloegel also was found guilty on March 31, 1971, of impersonating a police officer, according to the records, and spent a year on probation on that conviction.

Both charges are misdemeanors under California law.

After the 1972 conviction, Schloegel was sentenced to two years probation and ordered to "pursue a program of mental therapy," the records show.

The court also ordered him: to say away from minors unless accompanied by another adult, not to possess any equipment "used to play the role of a police officer," and to remove police equipment from his automobile.

Since his sentencing, according to Sonoma County Dist. Atty. John W. Hawkes, Schloegel's probation has been extended to July 24, 1975.

Schloegel, who lives in Rohnert Park, could not be reached for comment.

Boys, Girls? Y, Of Course

By JEFF GREER

James K. Looney left his job as director of the Marin County YMCA yesterday to help another Y through the awkward "boy meets girl" stage.

After three fast-paced years in San Rafael, where he also had his home, Looney has been promoted to head the West Valley YMCA in the suburban San Fernando area of Los Angeles. It's the world's largest Y of its kind — but the 7,000-member chapter is all-male.

"One of my jobs will be bringing women and girls into important and equal parts of the program," Looney explained. He predicted that any frictions from the change soon will fade in the West Valley Y, just as similar problems smoothered over after the Marin Y turned its summer camps coeducational.

"Now, you'd never remember we did it any other way" in Marin, Looney said.

Like the Marin Y, Looney's new chapter lacks the large gymnasium, hotel-for-cleancut-young-men image that traditionally is associated with the Young Mens Christian Association. Both the Marin and the West Valley Y are group-oriented, sponsoring and guidings scores of clubs and small interest groups. They don't have large buildings housing athletic facilities and residence programs.

During Looney's three years in Marin, the chapter expanded from about 40 to 283 groups and children's camp enrollment skyrocketed from 400 in 1971 to 1,600 last year.

At the same time, the Marin Y built a tennis club and took over leadership of the father-son Y-Indian Guides program from the regional office in San Francisco — another innovation that originally was opposed but now is happily accepted, Looney said.

JAMES K. LOONEY
'Now I can admit I've been a secret Dodger fan . . .'

His successor will inherit a five-year growth plan that Looney and the Y board of directors worked out. It will include a feasibility study next year to determine whether the Marin Y should attempt to build a large structure with a swimming pool, atheltic facilities and meeting rooms.

Other programs begun under Looney's tenure were the minibike program and the Youth Employment Service. Although the Marin Y traditionally has survived without governmental agency fund support, Looney noted, it may seek county funds in fiscal 74-75 to continue the job program.

"Historically, the level of community giving to YMCA programs in the Bay Area hasn't been adequate", in contrast to some midwestern communities where 35,000 inhabitants support million-dollar Y facilities, according to Looney.

But it is in the urbanizing areas such as Marin, where families change homes every few years and hometown roots are lacking, that a Y can be particularly important, he said.

"People's needs are basic — they need acceptance, to feel they have status and love. These are the same as 100 years ago," the outgoing director stressed. "If you take the children out of the rural life, where they were important to the economic health of the family, and their adolescence is unrealistically lengthened as it is, they feel like parasites instead of needed."

The Y's role as a Christian organization "is one of the continuing discussions" among the YMCA boards in Marin and elsewhere, Looney said. Some of Marin's board members "see us as needing to be more evangelical.

"This is still very prevalent in Europe. There, you must be a professed member of a church" to belong to the YMCA, he explained.

"But I think the Y has become a community organization that serves a whole variety of needs. We serve neither young men nor Christians exclusively. We are an association of people. I'd like to think the principals on which our programs are based are essentially Christian ones, but we're open to accept members of all beliefs.

"The motto of the Y is 'That they may all be one'," Looney said.

Looney's move to Southern California is somewhat completing a circle for him. He became a full-time program director for the Orange County YMCA while in his senior year of social studies at Whittier College. But, he said, he hopes to return to the Bay Area sometime in the future.

His wife, Claudia, was district director for the Golden Gate Council of Campfire Girls until shortly before their son, now 13 months old, was born.

"I'll miss living in Marin. But at least I can come out of the closet now and admit that I've been a secret Dodger baseball fan for the last three years," Looney admitted.

Clawson To Run In New District

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Del Clawson, R-Calif., said yesterday he had decided to seek election in California's new 33rd congressional district.

The new district, he said, includes his hometown of Downey.

Clawson said he had made his decision after also considering the possibility of running in the newly realigned district of Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Calif., who has announced that he will not seek reelection.

Clawson said he did not know of any Republican opposition so far in the coming primary election but that four Democrats — none of them an incumbent — had already announced that they should run in the new district.

President Reiterates His Vow To Continue To 'Stay On Job'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Obviously bouyed by the repeated cheers and applause of a crowd of 350 supporters, President Nixon has reiterated his vow not to resign but to "stay on my job—the job I was elected to do."

Nixon repeated the statement at least three times at a White House gathering he hosted last night for the National Citizen's Committee for Fairness to the President.

So happy was Nixon by the repeated applause and cheers from the supporters, he posed for a White House photograph in the Blue Room with each of them.

Top White House aides attended the gathering but the press was barred from covering the event.

Nixon received a prolonged ovation when he entered the East Room. During remarks that lasted 15 minutes he stood between the life-sized portraits of George and Martha Washington and noted it was Washington's official birthday today. Standing beside him, along with his wife, Pat, was the committee's organizer, Rabbi Baruch Korff of Providence, R.I.

Korff's group has been buying newspaper advertisements for the past several months urging public support for Nixon.

Earlier yesterday, Vice President Gerald R. Ford told a luncheon gathering of the committee that "this country needs fairness to the presiency if it is to survive in a dangerous world."

Ford told the $100-a plate luncheon not only had Nixon's rating dropped but so had Congress'.

"It is tragic and tremendously bad for America when only 20 to 30 per cent of its citizens...have a good word to say for their elected officials in he nation's capitol," Ford said.

Solzhenitsyn Arrives In Oslo In Search Of Home For Family

OSLO (UPI) — Exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn arrived by boat today in Norway in search of a home for his family.

He then entered a car for a sight-seeing tour of Oslo before boarding a train for Lillehammer, 120 miles north of here, to go ouse hunting.

Norwegian journalist Per Egil Hegge, a friend of the author, said Solzhenitsyn would be a guest of the Norwegian painter Jacob Wiedeman.

Solzhenitsyn traveled here aboard the liner Princess Margrethe in a 15-hour voyage from Copenhagen across the Skagerrak, an arm of the North Sea.

The author arose at dawn to view the fiord shores and snow-covered mountain tops through field glasses. Then he breakfasted before returning to the sundeck for another sightseeing session.

Norwegian Prime Minister Tryge Bratteli called on Norwegians yesterday to let Solzhenitsyn, who has been granted a three-month tourist visa, rest in privacy during his visit.

Bratteli said Solzhenitsyn would have the rights of Norway's "ancient and secure tradition" of freedom of speech if he decides to settle in the country.

Hegge said Solzhenitsyn would stay "a few days" in the Lillehammer area before returning to Zurich, Switzerland, to wait for his family to join him in the West.

"My wife will not leave Moscow until I have found a place for me and the family," Hegge quoted the writer as saying. "We do not like the idea of living in hotel rooms."

Nobel Prize administrators expressed hopes of finally giving the award to Solzhenitsyn during his visit to Scandinavia.

The author declined to leave Russia in 1971 to pick up his medal for fear of not being allowed to return.

"I am prepared to hand the medal and diploma over to him whenever and wherever he wishes," a spokesman for the Swedish Academy of Letters, which awards the prize, said.

Solzhenitsyn was expelled from the Soviet Union anc stripped of his Russian citizenship Feb. 13 after the publication in the West of his latest book, "The G u l a g Archipelago," an expose of Stalinist secret police and prison camps.

Youth Sentenced In Drug Case

David Edward Louis, 18, of San Rafael was sentenced to 60 days in jail last week on his guilty plea to two counts of possessing amphetamine tablets.

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported last Saturday that Louis pleaded guilty to possessing amphetamine for sale. He originally was charged with that offense, but the charges were reduced to simple possession as part of a plea bargain.

San Rafael police said they found 180 amphetamine tablets in his possession on two occasions in September and October.

Comedian Still Out Of Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Redd Foxx is resting at his home from a nervous condition, and there is no indication when he will return to NBC's "Sanford and Son."

Foxx returned to his home last Saturday after a two-week rest in an undisclosed foreign country, his attorney, Jim Tolbert, has reported.

Tolbert said Foxx, 51, had been looking forward to getting back to work this week but had an apparent relapse. "He looks much better, but he's still sick," Tolbert said.

Ridge Rezoning Before Planners

Rezoning of some 550 acres of the North Ridge (including King Mountain near Larkspur) to reduce the number of possible homes will be considered Monday by the Marin County Planning Commission.

The bulk of the property to be rezoned lies west of Larkspur and forms a visual backdrop to the Kentfield area.

The proposed zone change, endorsed by the North Ridge open space committee, would zone the land into 10, five, and half-acre lots. It is currently zoned for acre and half-acre parcels.

The county planning department, which initiated the rezoning action, said such action is necessary to make the area conform to the countywide general plan.

Much of the North Ridge area is slated to be purchased eventually by the county open space district.

The open space committee, made up of officials from the county and the cities of Mill Valley, Corte Madera and Larkspur, is coordinating rezoning efforts to protect the North Ridge from large-scale development.

Writer Leaving Police Force

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Writer and detective Joe Wambaugh has resigned from the police department, saying it is impossible for awealthy best-selling author "to try to pretend that I am an ordinary cop."

Since he returned to duty after writing his latest book, "The Onion Field," Wambaugh said, "No one treated me the same, not the officers I worked with, not the citizens I served, not even the suspects I arrested.

Wambaugh, 37, spent 14 years on the police force, the last several as a detective sergeant investigating burglaries out of the Hollenbeck station in the tough East Los Angeles district.

Three Persons Dead, Including One In Shoot-Out, Over Gasoline

U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Three persons, including one in a service station shootout, have died in incidents related to the gasoline shortage.

Police say the shortage is hampering the effectiveness of regular patrols and causing a sharp upswing in crime and gasoline siphoning.

And Tom Casey, a bartender in Annapolis, Md., says the situation is so bad it "has replaced sex, politics, scandal and religion as the normal topic of barroom conversation."

Tempers flared and fistfights broke out yesterday as thousands of angry motorists in big cities and small towns were trapped in traffic-snarling lines outside harried service stations.

In Maryland, where a federal court judge ruled yesterday that the state was entitled to an immediate boost of 16 million gallons of gasoline, motorists queued for as long as seven hours in lines up to three miles long.

President Nixon, in an effort to shorten the lines, ordered an additional 239.75 million gallons of gasoline allocated immediately to 26 states—mostly in the East—and the District of Columbia.

Thomas Lavender, 30, of Richlands, Va., was shot and killed and his brother was hurt yesterday in a service station tussle with policemen. Lavender became upset over a line of fuel-hungry autos blocking the entrance to his upholstery store, police said.

In Pennsylvania, the Allegheny County Coroner's Office reported that George R. Munns, 14, of a Pittsburgh suburb, died from swallowing gasoline while trying to siphon the fuel from a containeer in the basement of his home.

"Siphoning by mouth is so hazardous, it's worse than playing Russian roulette," the coroner's office said.

On Thursday, John Williams, 63, of Culpeper, Va., bled to death while waiting in a service station gasoline line. Authorities said passersby were unable to stop Williams' bleeding after a medical clamp he used in kidney dialysis treatment popped loose.

Baltimore police reported a marked increase in gasoline siphoning, including a teen-ager found draining fuel from a chartered bus, and said locked gasoline caps were being broken with axes.

Police in Charlottesville, Va., and Charlotte, N.C., began ticketing drivers for tying up traffic outside service stations. Motorists in Walterboro, N.C., became so angry that police closed the community's service station to prevent trouble.

A Dairy's Pollution Outlay At $17,000

The average dairy in Marin County can look forward to spending about $17,000 to keep animal waste from polluting streams and creeks, according to a report by the Marin County Resource Conservation District.

The study was requested by county supervisors who will discuss it when they meet Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. at Civic Center.

In all, 59 of the county's 74 active dairies were surveyed to determine what investment will be required to meet clean water standards set by the Regional Water Quality Control Board.

Estimates of the costs of providing special holding ponds, tanks, drainage and irrigation systems range from a high of $30,150 for one dairy to a low of $6,563 for another.

Supervisor Gary T. Giacomini has urged the county to come up with some way — possibly low-interest loans — to assist the dairymen -- some of whom claim the added costs, coupled with increased costs of feed, equipment and taxes, may force them out of the county.

Measles Revaccinations Urged In Some Instances

Marin County health officials recommended yesterday that young people immunized against measles 10 to 12 years ago be revaccinated.

The recommendation followed reports of several cases of measles at Marin Catholic High School in Kentfield.

Dr. Marilyn F. Hicks, acting health officer, said youths vaccinated 10 to 12 years ago received a vaccine that did not give long-term protection.

Immunization to measles, or evidence of immunity, is required for children entering school, she said.

Preschool children also should be immunized, Dr. Hicks added.

"Measles is not a harmless childhood disease," she said. "It can result in disability and even in death."

She urged parents to consult with their physicians.

The county health clinic in San Rafael gives measles vaccinations on Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. for those who qualify. The clinic is located at 920 Grand Avenue.

Tests Show Two Dead Skunks Rabid

Two skunks, one killed in the Marinwood area and the other in Lucas Valley, have been identified as rabid, county health officials said yesterday.

The first was found Feb. 17 in a sewer outlet near 324 Miller Creek Road. It had been killed in nearby woods and dragged to the spot by two boys.

A stray cat that had been frequenting the sewer outlet is being examined for rabies because of human contact, Dr. Marilyn F. Hicks, acting health officer, said.

She urged parents to caution their children to stay away from all wild animals, especially skunks and bats. Under no circumstances should a dead animal be handled with bare hands, she said.

The second animal was killed Feb. 18 in the Lucas Valley area by the county humane society. There was no known animal or human contact with the skunk.

The skunks bring to four the number of rabid animals reported in Marin so far this year.

Novato Candidates Invited To Speak

Four candidates for the Novato City Council have been invited to speak at a noon luncheon of the Novato Chamber of Commerce Thursday at Spiro's Red Vest restaurant, 1535 South Novato Boulevard.

Candidates are Edward A. Brooks Jr., David E. Milano, F. Wayne Sartain and Gail M. Wilhelm.

Agricultural Problems Due Study

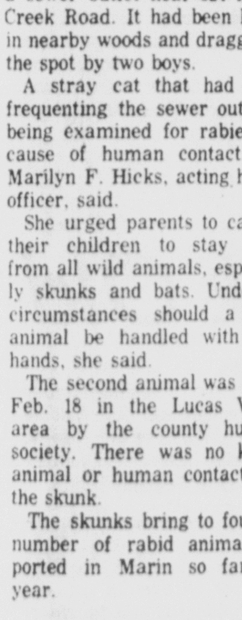

The Northwest Marin Planning Group will discuss argicultural problems at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Tomales High School.

The intent is to review such problems so they can be considered in the northwest Marin plan being developed by the group, according to J. Fred Clarke, secretary.

Krug To Speak

Edward Krug, candidate for Marin County District attorney, will speak at 7 p.m. March 4 following a pot luck dinner at the Marin Jewish Community Center in San Rafael.

Noncommunication—Take A Party With Music For A Retired Group

By BARBARA HOSMER

Marin has become a virtual mecca for classes and programs whose premise is that good communication is the key to person-to-person understanding. Couples, bosses and employees, parents and children are assisted to improve communication and thus their relationships through a battery of workshops and courses. You might call it the big trend.

So we had a laugh recently when a member of a retired employees association called to chat about a luncheon they were having in San Rafael. Would there be music? "Oh, no," she said. "We're all so deaf nobody could hear it. In fact," she elucidated, "some who used to fight like cats and dogs together in the office get along fine now. Most of us can't even hear what each other are saying."

A pure case of noncommunication improving relations . . . They apparently have a good time at such fellowship affairs, each happily listening mainly to himself.

The cocktail party is probably the best known example of noncommunication, and there are several variations of the story about the man at the party who switches off his hearing aid and has a marvelous time. Radio talk show callers, too, seem to enjoy themselves most when launch into a monologue and never hear the show host's responses at all.

Oftener, attempts to communicate go awry — In reporting a wedding, one woman wrote that the Christmas tree was decorated with second-graders from a local school.

It is nonverbal animals who sometimes make the clearest communication. Betty Frost of our Mill Valley staff reports that a Mill Valley dog named Cocoa, recuperating from spaying clinic surgery, retaliated by chewing up a copy of Germaine Greer's "The Female Eunuch."

THE FIRST real casualty of the gas shortage among the traditional women's organization fund-raisers is the annual Concours d'Elegance put on by the Marin Auxiliary of Florence Crittenton Services. The Marin group moved the antique and classic car show to spacious Silverado Country Club near Napa several years ago, and it has been a successful money-maker by drawing crowds from throughout the Bay Area. But last September gas problems were already showing up. Finally, the women arranged to have a gas pumper truck at the scene for motorists who had driven long distances for the show. This year because of the energy situation, the women thought it wiser to give it up, and have a series of fund-raising events closer to home.

SAVING ELECTRIC power is fine, but the past two A.M. lectures at the Marin Veterans Memorial Auditorium have been in the dark, house lights off and one spot on the speaker. This reporter was forced to crawl down to a four-inch high floor light on the steps to capture anecdotes of fast-talking Englishman Clive David, and last week reporter Mrs. Frost just scrawled in the dark. Hereafter, a pocket flashlight may become standard equipment for reporting lectures.

PLACES TO hold weekend seminars aren't too easy to come by around Marin, and Santa Sabina Center on the Dominican campus is one of the more recent to become available. To date, it has housed weekend programs ranging from adult and teen-age retreats to social justice and transcendental meditation workshops to marriage encounters. It houses 62 persons, and up to 90 by special arrangement, and has a large recreation and conference room, smaller meeting room, pleasant gardens and meals available at the nearby college dining hall. And, of course, it's close and convenient to most of Marin.

Susan Koegl In Race For 1974 Title

Susan Koegl of Corte Madera has been selected to compete for the title of 1974 Military Wife of the Year.

Mrs. Koegl will represent the U.S. Army Air Defense Command (ARADCOM) in this eighth competition with final selection to be made in Washington, D.C., later this month.

She was nominated from Headquarters, Sixth Region, ARADCOM, at Fort Baker with final selection being made in Colorado Springs, Colo. Her husband, Lt. Col. Burt F. Koegl, is assigned as an operations officer at Fort Baker.

A native of Seattle, Mrs. Koegl has made contributions to the civilian and military communities, particularly in programs for under privileged children, voter registration and Prisoner of War and Missing in Action activities.

In Marin she is a member of the League of Women Voters.

Ballet Aquacade Has New Set Of Officers

Mrs. William E. Niemann of San Anselmo is the new president of the Ballet Aquacade of Marin this year.

Mrs. Niemann became a member of the organization when she and her family moved to Marin from Hawaii in 1966.

"We are a very water-oriented family," she said. All three of her daughters, Millie, Anna and Chris, swam in the Ballet Aquacade in past years.

Lucy Niemann is the wife of a former Navy commander who is now with the Bank of America in San Rafael. Mrs. Niemann is a nurse in the operation room at Ross General Hospital. Aside from the Ballet Aquacade volunteer work and professional work, she enjoys golf, baking and sewing, knitting and crocheting. She is also very active in the St. Nicholas Russian Church and its activities. Her father and mother were Russian and took refuge in China in 1920, coming to the United States in 1922.

The Niemanns' daughter Millie is a physical therapist in the Navy, Anna is studying anthropology in the graduate department of the University of Hawaii, and Chris is studying special education at California State University, Chico.

Mrs. Niemann said that the Ballet Aquacade provides girls with the opportunity to make new friends. The production will be held June 8 and 9 at McNear's Beach in San Rafael, and will benefit the Marindale School for Orthopedically Handicapped Children.

Other officers of the organization are Mmes. David Sullivan, executive director; Donald Wallace, first vice president; Charles Skinner, second vice president; David Bordner, secretary; Leon Fish, treasurer and George Anderson, parliamentarian and adviser.

Interviews Continuing

Interviews for entering the 1974 Miss Sonoma County Pageant will continue through Tuesday for the April 19 pageant, a preliminary to the Miss California and Miss America Pageants.

Any woman between the ages of 18 and 28, single and a resident or student in Marin or Sonoma County is eligible to enter. Scholarships totaling $1,500 will be awarded, with a $500 wardrobe and an all expense paid trip to the Miss California Pageant in June.

Each contestant will receive a 6-week modeling and personal development course and a figure control program at a local figure salon. Judging is based on appearance, intelligence, poise, personality and talent, according to Mrs. Ted Adkins of Petaluma.

Interview appointments may be made with Mrs. Adkins of Petaluma or Mmes. Bill Bertram and David Cerine of Santa Rosa.

Good Egg Deal

When buying eggs, if there is less than a 7 cent price spread between one size and the next smaller size in the same grade, you're probably getting a better bargain by picking the larger size.

One Who Should Know Says Boards Of Directors Alike

By JOAN LISETOR

No matter what the type of business or organization, there are similarities on every board of directors, according to Lotte McWatters of Mill Valley.

Among the variety of boards on which Mrs. McWatters has served is Junior Theater of Marin, Marin Society of Artists, Fair Marin, Marin Museum Association, Camp Fire Girl Council, Sir Francis Drake Kennel Club and various dog clubs and folk dance councils.

The purposes may be diverse, but the interaction is all the same, she said.

"Most fights on boards are on methods, which become more important than the issue itself," she said.

When members use Roberts Rule of Order or the group's by-laws to prove a point they are misuing the guidelines, she said. People only go to them when they are in trouble, and they wouldn't get into trouble if they used them all along.

"THERE IS NO format on how to be a good director," she said. "Situations and needs change every year within a club, which call for constant adjustments."

One bit of advice she did offer to board members is "don't get involved with personal issues."

"Interaction is the recreation people seek when they join a board, and that is what keeps them there. Being free to walk out at any time is the joy of being a volunter," she said.

"The function of a board of directors is to represent the membership and to handle things in a more expedient manner than a big mob can."

Some boards have constant factions and never accomplish anything because they sit around and argue all year, she said.

"You must have controversy to keep the membership interested," she said, "but that controversy must be contained. It is healthy for a club to debate everything."

A neat trick to get people to meetings, she said, is the crisis routine.

"Let people think there is a crisis in the club, and they come to the meetings," she said.

MRS. McWATTERS traced the history of a typical club.

"A group of people vitally interested in an idea gets together and forms a club. Everyone thinks it is a wonderful idea. Rules are not needed because everyone is in agreement," she said.

"Things are going great guns, and with the success comes prestige. New people want in, and the power plays begin. The old members forget their first joys of discovery. They are still running things and "forget" to inform the new members.

"Next you start hearing, 'That bunch does all the work,' because the new members don't know what has to be done. Then comes the unrest. Everything is going to change. There are going to be written rules, everything formal, and that is when the chaos starts, and people are saying, 'We are going to lay the law down.' Words starting being thrown around like 'duty.' Someone suggests punishing those who don't attend meetings.

"Pretty soon everyone knows all of the rules, and the parliamentary tricks start to backfire. Then someone says, 'Can't we just get back to having a nice meeting.' Everyone goes back with a knowledge of the rules, how to use them with ease in a positive method."

WHY GO through the agony?

Mrs. McWatters said she got into volunteer work for the same reason as most persons do. She found she had time on her hands and wanted to get out of the house. Parties and social contact and learning about new areas in which you have an interest are the rewards, she said.

"Too many persons sitting on a board that is the acme, the highest they will go in life," she said.

Her feelings, she said, are summed up in a Chinese proverb she found in a book, "Kung Fu Meditations."

"While some advance, the rest retire. While some inhale, the rest respire. While some are weak, the rest are strong. While some stand still, the rest move on."

LOTTE McWATTERS can speak from wide experience about the dynamics of boards of directors. Here she works at the rental gallery of the Marin Society of Artists, for which she is currently a board member and has been a longtime volunteer.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

New Dress Was Made To Look Old

By MOLLY MARIN

The lovely lace front dress worn by Margaret Bettini, wife of San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini, to the city's centennial birthday party Tuesday looked like an 1874 dress but was actually new.

"A real find," said Mrs. Bettini of the dress she bought at Betty's Clothes Tree in San Rafael. With the help of a friend, Kay Castle, she attached a bustle to the skirt and ribbon at the neck and wrists.

She wore a hat that had been her mother's — old, but not quite 100 years. She ironed it, turned it around and added some flowers to give it an 1870s look, she said. Her mesh gloves were made many years ago by her mother, and she wore an old pair of pointed toe shoes.

Again with Mrs. Castle's help, Mrs. Bettini is making a gown to wear to the Centennial Ball in May.

RETIRING MAYOR of Belvedere Allan Steinau will participate in an archeological dig at Nemea, a Greek village thought to be the original Olympic Games site.

Steinau will leave in April to assist University of California archeologists for four or five months of their five-year excavation.

An architect, he decided to donate his services when he read a newspaper article about the dig, which mentioned that an architect's services were needed, said Mrs. Steinau, who is also a traveler.

Marilyn Steinau is awaiting delivery of the Makondi wood sculpture she purchased on a recent tour of South Africa, Tanzania, Rhodesia and Kenya which she took with a life-long friend, Mrs. Richard Harris of Sleepy Hollow.

MRS. C. PAUL BETTINI

MRS. RALPH Jennings and Mrs. Richard Byram are helping Cindy Pedersen of Corinthian Yacht Club in her bid for the Bay Area "Miss Yachting of 1974" title.

Candidates will be judged partially on the number of their supporters at the contest tonight at the Pacific Inter-Club Yachting Association headquarters in Oakland, so the two CYC women's auxiliary members have hired a bus.

"We were afraid her supporters would not want to drive to Oakland because of the gas shortage," said Mrs. Byram.

Members and guests will board the bus at the club in Tiburon at 6 p.m. to attend the contest and the "Miss Yachting Coronation Ball."

MR. AND Mrs. Kensell Schumacher, former Mill Valley residents, will come from their home in San Ramon to sing at the ceremonies tomorrow morning at the Mill Valley First Baptist Church when the Rev. John Neilson is installed as pastor. Mrs. Schumacher is the former Janna MacDonald, daughter of a past minister of the church, Rev. John A. MacDonald, now living in San Jose. The couple will stay with Kensell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. K.W. Schumacher in Mill Valley, and will be the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Moyer of Mill Valley tomorrow.

FOR SEVERAL years a group of 10 women in the Sleepy Hollow area have been cooking and experimenting with recipes of various foreign countries, and twice a year they put on special dinners with their husbands as guests.

Last night the foods of Yugoslavia were featured in a five-course dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Pelto of Sleepy Hollow. Special guests were the Consul General of Yugoslavia Sime Karaman and his wife from San Francisco. Other guests were Dr. and Mrs. Don Torre, Messrs. and Mmes. James Denebeim, Robert Dotson, Dan Fialkowski, Horst Hanf, Barney Keener, Donald McInnes, Len Madison and Richard Wagner, and Miss Ellen Wolf and Stan Erzar of San Francisco.

Mrs. Pelto researched many of the recipes and pulled some familiar ones from her family, as both her father and mother were born in Yugoslavia.

A 50TH anniversary celebration for Mr. and Mrs. Tony Tanem of Auburn will be held tomorrow afternoon at the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Tanem, in Santa Venetia. Also hosting the reception are their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. A.W. Safford of Ukiah.

Among the approximately 100 guests will be Mrs. Tanem's mother, Mrs. Sarah Conley, and her sisters and brothers-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Conley, of San Rafael, Mr. and Mrs. H.D. Winters of Oakland and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Robertson of Belmont.

Some of the couple's seven grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren will be at the party, along with guests coming from Willits, Lincoln and Auburn.

The Tanums were married Feb. 28, 1924, in Westwood.

GENERATION RAP

Youth Feels The Old And Rich Aren't Helping In Gas Crunch

RAP:

Driving to and from work at 55 mph, I notice the speeders are mostly in big Caddies and Lincoln Continentals — old dudes who still burn up the road in gas hogs. In restaurants you hear 'em griping aobut lack of heat and how the oil shortage is a plot to make oil men rich.

I hear some of my parents' friends talking — and the older (and richer) they are, the more they knock rationing and put down the energy crisis.

We young people are trying to cooperate. Wouldn't you think those old folks who lived through one depression and the war rationing they enjoy telling us about (when they want to prove we're extravagant and spoiled), would realize we've got problems on our hands? Seems like a lot of them have the attitude, "Let somebody else worry —we'll get ours." — LARRY

LARRY:

I've noticed this about the Caddie crowd too, but generalizations are always chancy. I'm sure more older (and richer) people are staying with the new regulations than breaking them, but it's true — they seem to do a lot of complaining.

Maybe it's that they feel they've earned their stripes — in the depression, the war-shortage years, etc. — and they don't deserve this kind of hassle a third time.

Take it, Mom. — SUE

DEAR LARRY:

Elders, having lived through every crisis from war rationing to the Cuban missile hysteria (remember those backyard bomb shelters which bomed?) are more apt to view with a jaundiced eye — they've been frightened, threatened, warned, cajoled, restricted, and told so many times before. Most of us admit the shortages are real, but many suspect they are at least partially contrived, so they support because they must, with faint enthusiasm and firm belief that this too will pass.

Age often makes doubters out of believers, as youth will discover in time. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

This story is about a grandmother in her middle 60s, her granddaughter and myself. I love the granddaughter. The grandmother hates me. I never did anything except want to marry Arlene who is 15. I'm 18.

I used to slip notes to Arlene inside the newspaper when I was a paperboy, because real mail, Grandma would read and burn. She found one of my notes and changed papers. She also tried to get me fired.

She tells people I steal, and she accused me of setting fire to her house. One night her house was broken into, and she said it was me. But she doesn't call the police because she knows she can't prove anything.

She won't let Arlene and her sister go anywhere and makes them work all the time. Now she says she is going to move away so I won't bother them any more. I don't think she really means it.

How can I get to see Arlene, other than just at school? — I STAND ACCUSED

DEAR S.A.:

Sorry to sound pessimistic, but you'll be lucky if you keep on seeing Arlene even at school, what with Grandma watching her like a hawk and hating you like poison.

Don't push your luck, and hope her outlook on boys changes by the time Arlene becomes 16. — HELEN AND SUE

A New Method For Closing Skirts

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

The designer Anne Klein has a new skirt in her spring collection with a button-tab closing on the skirt instead of a zipper. I can't find a pattern with this same detail. Can you tell us how this can be done? — MRS. M. B.

DEAR MRS. M. B.;

This detailed tab is about six inches long, with three to four small buttons as a closing instead of the zipper. No, there isn't a pattern for this detail as yet, but it may be easily duplicated.

Find a pattern for a shirt or shirtdress where the band for the front closing ends below the waist, instead of opening to the hem. Use the last six inches of this placket as your guide and place it on the center front of your skirt, using the same markings and directions for this detail. I think you will find it works perfectly.

DEAR ENICE,

Everything today seems to have large patch pockets.

I can't get a professional look to mine, and when I try to sew them to the garment, I get most discouraged. They never seem to be even, but instead they slide out of position as they are topstitched. I'm sure all of your readers would like any help you can give on this detail. — MRS. S. T. M.

DEAR MRS. S. T. M.,

First, prepare the pockets perfectly before applying them to the garment. Stitch and turn the hem area. If pocket is to be topstitched, you must stitch the top of the pocket at this time.

Next, machine stitch around the outer edges of the pocket (single layer) exactly on the seam line. If the fabric is too lightweight, you might consider backing it with a lightweight press-on interfacing, which would have to be done before any other steps are taken. The machine stitching you have done will be a guide for the exact outer edges of your pocket.

Notch out the excess fabric from the curved lower corners and trim the seam allowance slightly. Next, baste the seam allowance back to the pocket, turning pocket on your stitching line. Carefully press the seam allowance flat. Your pockets should be exactly the same size and look perfect.

Cut small pieces or strips of stitch witchery and place them on a line just inside the placement marks for your pocket on your garment. Carefully place your pocket on top of the stitch witchery, according to your marks. Lightly press pocket in place.

You are now ready to machine stitch the pocket to the garment. I think you will find with this method that the pocket will not shift out of position, but will hold in place while you do your stitching. Sometimes a little extra step can prevent hours of ripping and doing over.

DEAR EUNICE,

My pet peeve is the buttonholes and buttons on shirts and any type shirtdress. The buttons will simply not stay buttoned. Why do the patterns always have them placed vertically instead of the conventional horizontal placement? If they were worked horizontally, they wouldn't always be popping open. — MRS. V. T.

DEAR MRS. V. T.,

There is one very good reason why buttonholes are worked vertically on the tailored type shirts and shirt dresses. The answer concerns the front band you will almost always find on this type of classic, tailored garment. When there is a narrow band on the front, it is impossible to do anything except place the buttonholes at the center of the band in a vertical position.

Try making the buttonholes closer to the size of the buttons. They might be a little more difficult to button, but they will not pop open.

If you carefully look through your pattern books, you will find a few tailored garments without the front band. These buttonholes may be worked horizontally.

If you have trouble with the garments you purchase, you may hand sew each buttonhole together for a closer fit to the size of the button. Do this from the wrong side.

Now that spring is getting closer, make a fun, carefree caftan. For directions, send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal. Ask for "Super Caftan."

Idaho Said Not Devil's Country

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — Satan would have a devil of a time making headway in Idaho, according to a Jesuit priest who has fought him.

Rev. Karl Patzelt, who said he recently performed in exorcism in the San Francisco Bay Area has suggested that possibilities for demonic possession were limited in Idaho.

He said the mentality or general climate of the area led him to doubt Satan was very active in Idaho. The priest said he had seen no indications of spiritualism, satanism or study of the occult during his visit to the state.

Petzalt said there was a definite relationship between occult activities and the devil. He viewed voodoo, Ouija boards, tarot cards and the like as "hooks" used by the devil to snare people.

Funds Still The Hurdle On Building

Shoreline Unified School District trustees still don't know where they will get the money to build a middle school in Tomales.

Trustees on Thursday failed to decide whether to schedule a bond election, which would require a two-thirds favorable vote or to a lease-purchase which would necessitate a tax override approved by a majority vote.

The board will consider the matter again at a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Tomales High School, according to Supt. Kenneth E. Barnes.

Trustees want to build seven classrooms and a multipurpose room at the Tomales School site. In the past several years voters have rejected three bond measures to finance classroom construction.

The board also unanimously voted against being paid for their work as trustees, pay permitted under a recent state law.

The Shoreline Unified School District board also:

PROGRAM PRAISED — Received a report that a state evaluator classified the district's early childhood education program as "one of the five best" of 35 he evaluated.

SURPLUS PROPERTY — Received a report from Barnes that the district neeted $178 from a recent sale of surplus items.

AUDITOR — Hired Wadsworth, Smith, Mohrman and Dabo of Petaluma for the 1973-74 district audit for a fee of $1,950.

Students To Pick Parade Theme

A contest for Corte Madera and Larkspur elementary students to select a parade theme for the two communities Fourth of July celebration was announced yesterday by the Corte Madera-Larkspur Fourth of July Committee.

Students must state their theme in ten words or less and include possible costume and float decorations. Entries should be left at any school office before March 1.

Exorcist Keeps Busy In Paris

PARIS (AP) — The exorcist has office hours.

And a beige waiting room, and a carpeted consultation nook, and a pretty good-working relationship with the devil.

Encased in glass and steel and two floors down from the headquarters of the archbishop of Paris (Francois Cardinal Marty) is a once-a-week world of talk of spells and demons.

The "possessed" begin lining up at 8 a.m. on Wednesdays waiting for the Rev. Henri Gesland, 66, to arrive for work at the antiseptically modern building of the Paris Roman Catholic archdiocese.

A small, gnomish man with a white rim of beard along his chin, Father Gesland slips behind his chair and begins a day of listening. He is the Church's official exorcist for the Paris region, but as far as he is concerned the devil is a rare visitor.

"Since my appointment in 1968, I've had more than 3,000 consultations," the priest said. "There have been four cases of what I believe to be demonic possession."

In a normal day of devil-chasing, Father Gesland sees up to 25 visitors who wait patiently for their turn.

Recently, with French newspapers reporting on America's interest in the film "The Exorcist", Father Gesland's waiting lines have grown.

"It's pretty much the same thing," Father Gesland explains. "I let them talk. And I listen. A large proportion of my visitors think someone has placed a spell on them . . .

"I give practical advice in most of the cases. 'are you eating enough?' I might ask. And then I might suggest that they see a general practitioner or even a psychiatrist."

Father Gesland has no special training for the exorcist's job, but after returning from 30 years in Ceylon as a missionary, he assisted another priest in helping a woman who thought she was afflicted by devils. When the exorcist in charge resigned, the diocese called on Father Gesland.

"The choice," according to the Rev. Roger Meuillet of the diocesan headquarters, "was dictated by Father Gesland's personality, more than any other factor. He is an understanding man, a patient man, who can listen and calm people."

But for all the "zozos" — the priest's expression for jokers — that he sees, there have been the four cases where he did recite the Litany of the Saints and the 53rd Psalm, where he splashed holy water over the possessed and ordered the evil spirits to flee and not return again.

Strangely, Father Gesland's most convincing struggle with demons involved two 13-year-old girls — about a year older than the preteen-ager played by Linda Blair in the film, which has not yet been shown in France.

"This child was at a difficult age, puberty, and you draw what conclusions you want from that," the priest said. "but there were reports from many people that there were many strange things about her. First, she brusquely changed from a normal child to one who insulted everyone — teachers, relatives, friends — with incredibly filthy language. When she walked in front of lamps, the lights would go out. When she sat in rooms, things fell from the mantel or a table.

"We decided exorcism was in order. I did three sessions that lasted two to three hours each. I used a rather long, official Latin prayer that asks the evil spirit to name itself and say why it is in the person. I ordered it to give a sign it will leave and won't come back.

"As I said the prayers the child who had been rolling on the floor of the church appeared to calm down. But there was a terrible battle after a while. When I showed my pectoral cross, she hurled against the floor and kicked me. But finally the devil did depart.

"Later when her parents were leaving the church, the child opened her mouth and a miraculous medal fell out. We had been with her every second. She could not have placed it in her mouth. Now, a year later, she is much better."

The other 13-year-old spoke Italian and German when she was possessed even though she did not know either language, Father Gesland said. He said that she, too, was freed of demons through exorcism.

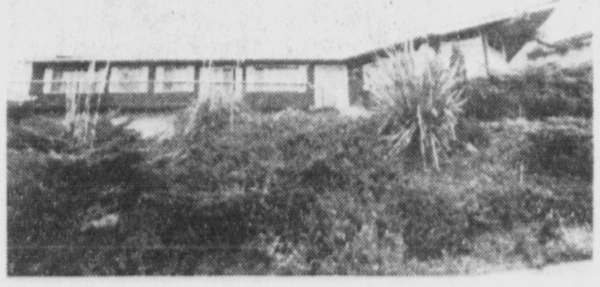

"These are very special, unusual cases," he said, "Most people who come to see me, I try to talk to, give them 15 minutes of my time and see if I can't calm them down."

Sonoma State Bubble Pops

Vanquished Cossacks To Visit Chico Tonight

By PAUL DWORIN

DAVIS — The bubble finally burst for the Cossacks.

After posting nine consecutive far western conference basketball victories, Sonoma State College lost its first league game here last night to University of California, Davis, 82-71.

Tonight, the Cossacks will travel to Chico State in a game they must win to clinch outright their second consecutive league title.

Should Sonoma (9-1) lost to Chico (6-3), and Davis (7-3) beat Humboldt (1-8), its conference lead would be cut to just one game with only one contest remaining at Humboldt Friday.

A Chico win and a Davis loss wouldn't clinch it for the Cossacks, however, because Chico will have two games left after tonight.

Sonoma started quickly against the Aggies, pulling out to a 10-2 lead with four minutes gone in the game. Davis then exploded behind the outside shooting of Tom Henderson and Mark Ford to catch the Cossacks 20-20 with 8:48 left in the first half.

The lead then changed hands the rest of the half, with neither team going out by more than four points. Dan Heien sank a 20-foot jump shot with three seconds left to cut the Cossacks' half-time deficit to 38-36.

Davis came out firing after intermission, outscoring the Cossacks 9-2 to take a nine-point lead which was never less than five thereafter.

Sonoma several times appeared ready to come back in the later stages of the game. But the Aggies took advantage of the Cossacks' foul troubles and sank 14 of 18 second-half free throws to hold them off.

Cossack coach Bill Trumbo was not entirely displeased in defeat, although it was their poorest statistical game in league play. "I was proud of our effort. We showed we're not quitters."

Three Sonoma players scored 15 points: Tom Fitchie, Steve Tiedeman and Bill Belander. Belander also recorded a game-high 13 rebounds to pace a weak Sonoma board effort.

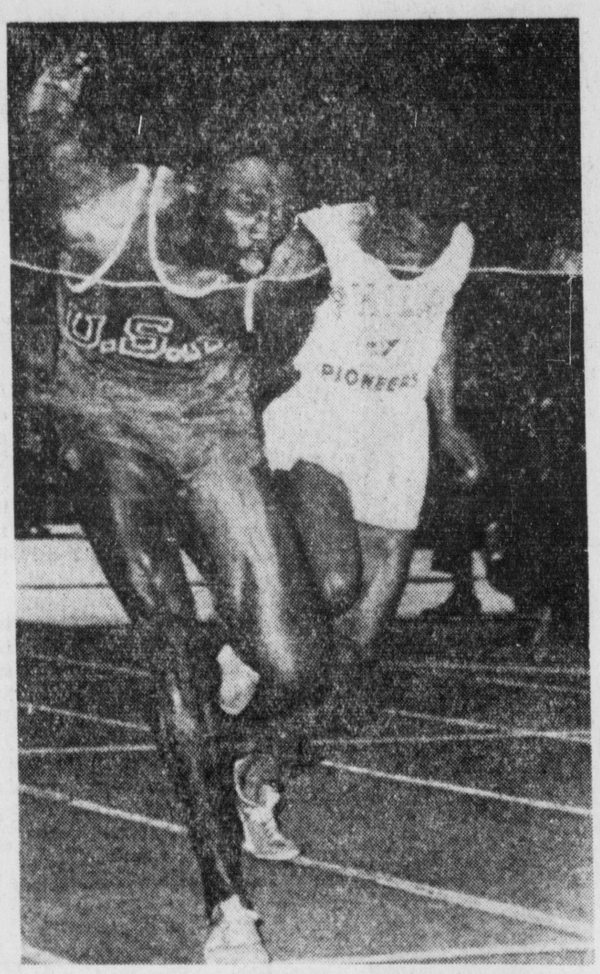

Ford led all scorers with 21 points for Davis and grabbed seven rebounds. He is a freshman.

In the preliminary game, the Cossack junior varsity saw its record fall to 15-6 with an 83-73 loss to Davis. Bill Gricius led Sonoma with 35 points.

Seals' Coach Is Not Disappointed

OAKLAND (UPI) — The California Seals rallied and, although they still lost their sixth straight game last night, their new coach was not disappointed.

"We came back very well," coach Marshall Johnston said after the 4-3 National Hockey League loss to the New York Rangers. "At any other time this season we would have been buried after trailing 3-0 in the first period."

Emile Francis, the Ranger coach and general manager, was upset by the eight penalties called against his club by referee Dave Newell.

It was while the Rangers were playing with two men in the penalty box that Ivan Boldirev scored the Seals' final goal in the last period.

However, with 1:04 remaining the Seals were unable to tie the score. Steve Vickers, Rod Seiling and Jerry Butler scored within less than six minutes for the Rangers in the opening period.

Butler's second goal, on a rebound of Jim Neilson's shot in the final period, proved to be the New Yorkers' edge.

Drake Is 'Shadow Champ'

2nd-Place Quint Tops Redwood

By LEW CODDINGTON

The latter title belongs to Drake High School, which completed an impressive seven-game winning streak with a 70-51 rout of Redwood before a standing-room only crowd of about 1,600 in San Anselmo.

The Pirates finished second in the MCAL standings with an 11-3 record compared to champion San Rafael's 13-1, and had Marin's best overall mark, 21-7.

It isn't just that they won, though — it's that they left their second-half opponents strewn about like storm wreckage. Over the final seven games, the Pirates never won by less than nine points, scored a 14-point victory over San Rafael, averaged 77 points a game to their foes' 62, and stunningly reversed a 19-point loss to Redwood which was their last defeat.

"I still think we're the best," said Drake coach Pete Hayward, "but I wish San Rafael all the luck in the world in the Tournament of Champions. I'm sure they'll be a good representative for our league, and that is what's important.

"They showed a lot of guts," he said about his own team, which lost three straight games at midyear. "They could have laid down and quit and blamed it on a lot of things. But they came back, and blew everybody out of the gym."

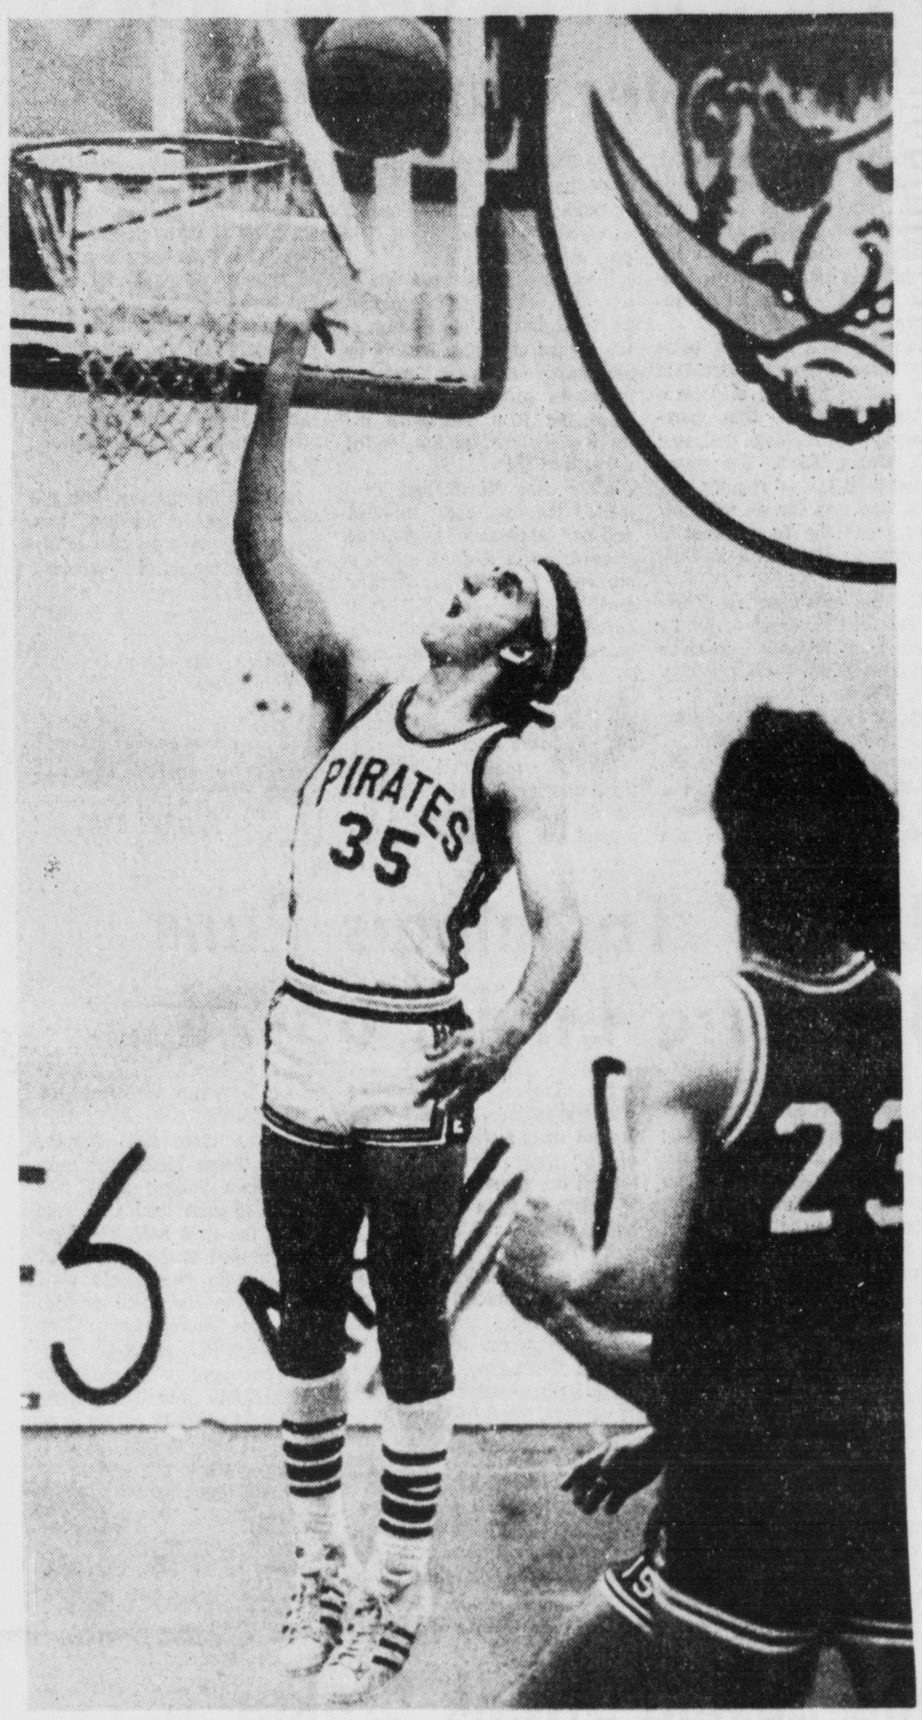

Last night's game was a good example. Redwood moved out to a 12-6 lead, but Drake began a long, uninterrupted surge which carried it to a 48-32 advantage in the third quarter. Redwood fought back, but never could get closer than 59-49.

The Pirates shared their scoring, with Eddie Joe Chavez netting 16 points and Dan Trimble and Rick Herbert 12 each among 11 scorers. Darrell Elder tallied 18 for Redwood.

Redwood was bothered by repeated traveling violations in the first half and poor shooting in the second, but it was really Drake's hard-running, constantly-hustling style of play which eroded the Giants' skills.

"I think we wear opponents down," said Hayward. "We

BOWLING NOTES

A Joyous Yell Is Released By Record-Setting Tauscher

Ah-h-h!

This was Penny Tauscher's initial reaction Tuesday night after she shattered the Marin County women's three-game series bowling record of 723. She bowled a 783 to eclipse Bea Hoffmann's standard established also at Greenbrae Lanes last fall. Mrs. Tauscher's effort equalled the 1973 top women's national mark of Carolyn Anderson of Ft. Worth, Tex. Nov. 10.

"I just screamed," said Penny yesterday. "I was so excited. When I heard the number 780 being announced at the desk, I just screamed."

Other bowlers gathered to congratulate her. "During my first two games, I knew I was on my way to a 700," she said. "But I didn't want to think about it."

For that reason, she went to the desk and got a book to read. "It was the PBA (Professional Bowlers Association) yearly book. It kept my mind off what I was doing."

Reading apparently helped, because Mrs. Tauscher followed her 258 and 236 games with a 289 in the Mixed Mates Two league.

Mrs. Tauscher, 34, is a clerk with Pacific Gas and Electric Company in San Rafael. Penny carries a 191 average and lives in San Rafael.

TOURNEY TIME. Marin Aid to Retarded Children is sponsoring a bowling tournament for its participants Monday at 1 p.m. at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. About 100 are expected to participate.

THE MARIN County Women's Association bowling tournament concludes this weekend at Nave Lanes in Ignacio. Squad times are 2 and 7 p.m. today and tomorrow.

Shirley Larsen was the unofficial leader in singles after last weekend's opening. She rolled a 672 handicap series.

JACKSON WINS SALARY BATTLE

Dark Can Relax: All A's Accounted For

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — Alvin Dark, the new manager of the World Champion Oakland A's, can rest easy today —his first one on the job —because all the troops now are present and accounted for.

Yesterday, Reggie Jackson, the club's 1973 American League Most Valuable Player, got the good news he had won his arbitration battle with owner Charlie Finley and will start work next week on a $135,000 contract.

At the same time, Joe Rudi lost out in his bid for a $75,000 pact and instead will work for $55,000, which is a $5,000 raise over 1973.

The arbitration proceedings thus are over for the A's with a record nine players going that route in an attempt to get more money out of Finley. Other winners were Sal Bando, Ken Holtzman, Darold Knowles and Rollie Fingers. Other losers were Gene Tenace, Ted Kubiak and Jack Heidemann.

None of this, of course, affects Dark, named manager only last Wednesday, but one thing he won't have to worry about when the full club reports next week is a holdout.

Today, Dark continues workouts with his pitching staff, rated by some the best in baseball. Since Jim Hunter, Holtzman, Fingers, Knowles, Vida Blue, Bob Locker, John Odom and Paul Lindblad have jobs locked up going in, all Dark has to worry about is filling out two more spots from among eight other candidates, including Chuck Dobson.

Tie For Title In J.V. Cage

Redwood and Terra Linda high schools made it official last night, defeating their opponents to capture the co-championship of the Marin County Athletic League for junior varsity basketball.

Don Brown scored 16 points and Bill Peters and Terry London 13 each to lead Redwood (12-2) to a 68-53 victory over host Drake (6-8), while Mike Martin netted 16 and Rob De Graves 13 as Terra Linda (12-2) subdued visiting Tamalpais, 61-31.

Marin Catholic (9-5) clinched third place by holding off visiting Novato (3-11) for a 71-68 victory, as Steve Hossfeld scored 20 for the winners and Mark McAlonan 23 for the losers.

Golden Gate Fields Race Stepping Stone

ALBANY, Calif. (UPI) — The $25,000 added Contra Costa Handicap, another stepping stone for three-year-olds, features today's racing program at Golden Gate Fields.

The event offers a rematch between Rocket Review and Stardust Mel, who ran 1-2 in the Golden Bear Stakes on opening day. Today's winner becomes the favorite for the March 30th running of the Gold Rush Stakes, a major stepping stone to the $100,000 California Derby on April 20.

Gold Dust Twins Revisited

MURRAY OLDERMAN

THE TIPOFF:

A third place team, the Detroit Pistons, is my pick to go all the way to the NBA title this year because they're playing the best basketball currently (and are eligible under new playoff rules) — also because they've eliminated any possible dissension by having a black coach and a playing roster which is 6-to-1 black in a league which is 2-to-1 black.

Q. One year, a small town in southern Indiana, Martinsville, was the talk of the state due to a pair of fast, high scoring kids named J. Wooden and Sally Suddith. We all know what Johnny Wooden did. Whatever happened to Sally Suddith? — Dan Johns, Hayward, Calif.

Thanks to the bright memory of the UCLA coach, we can tell you that Sally first went with Wooden to Purdue, dropped out as a frosh, went to Indiana, dropped out as a soph and when last heard from during Wooden's last visit home a couple of years ago, was living on a farm outside Martinsville. "We were," says John proudly, "known as the Gold Dust Twins because we played so well together."

Q. Is there a Chris Evert fan club and how can I get an autographed picture of her? — Earl Adams, Peru, Ind.

Hurry, before Chris retires next year, as threatened, at the grand old age of 20. As far as we know, there's no organized club but you can get pictures or any other information by writing to her father who manages her affairs: Jim Evert, 1628 NE Seventh Place, Fort Lauderdale, Fla. 33305.

Q. With all the static about women's lib,etc., who were the first women athletes admitted to the AAU, when and what were their specialities? — John J. Darmody, Redlands, Calif.

AAU national headquarters in Indianapolis informs me that the first women registered for national competition were aquatic performers, in 1914, among them Aileen Allen, a prominent diving star, but they didn't compete on a championship level until 1916. Little Aileen Riggin won an Olympic divind medal in 1920. The AAU first registered women for track and field in 1922.

Q. Who won the NBA one-on-one championship last year, who did he beat and by what score? — K. Reynolds, Selma, Calif.

The one-on-one, which is no more, was won by Geoff Petrie of the Portland Blazers over Barry Clemens, a Cleveland spare, 40-36, in an overtime cliffhanger. Bob Lanier of the Pistons was the champ the first year of the event, over JoJo White. The NBA moguls did away with it because they felt it "took away from the basic concepts of basketball as a team game." I mean, Barry Clemens the best?

PARTING SHOT:

Pro football players will show their proficiency at the net in the first annual Pro Football Tennis Tournament at Lake Havasu City (Ariz.) the last weekend in March. Their efforts will benefit the Handicapped Indian Children on the Colorado River. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

REPLAY OF OTHER VICTORIES

San Rafael's Bench Keys Win Over San Marin '5'

By DAVE DEL GRANDE

The 800 fans in San Marin High School's gym last night viewed a replay of what happened 12 other times in the league this season, a San Rafael "team" victory with reserves playing key roles.

Playing with the same poise and same Byron Stewart that had guided them to the Marin County Athletic League championship, the Bulldogs outlasted San Marin, 65-48. The game ended both teams' regular seasons, and San Rafael will now advance to the Tournament of Champions March 7-9 in Oakland.

The Bulldogs concluded their successful 17-8 season with a 13-1 league record, the best since Redwood High's 14-0 mark in 1971. The loss leaves the Mustangs 3-11 in the MCAL (tied for sixth) and 8-17 on the season.

Stewart, who ended up as the MCAL's leading scorer with a 22.5 points per game average, produced a game-high 26 last night. Despite being hounded by Mustang center Skip Starnes throughout the game, Stewart connected on 13 of his 30 field goal attempts.

Stewart concluded the season with 314 points, second highest in MCAL history and 18 short of the record of 332 set in 1970 by San Marin's Dana La Ferriere.

Starnes hit on six of eight from the field and with his three of six from the line, ended up with 15 points.

After San Marin had controlled the first eight minutes and had taken an 8-7 lead at the quarter, San Rafael quickly showed its depth. Arthur Brooks and Gary Paterson came off the bench to score key baskets in leading the Bulldogs on a 16-6 scoring spurt early in the second period. From there, the Bulldogs went on to take a 29-20 halftime lead.

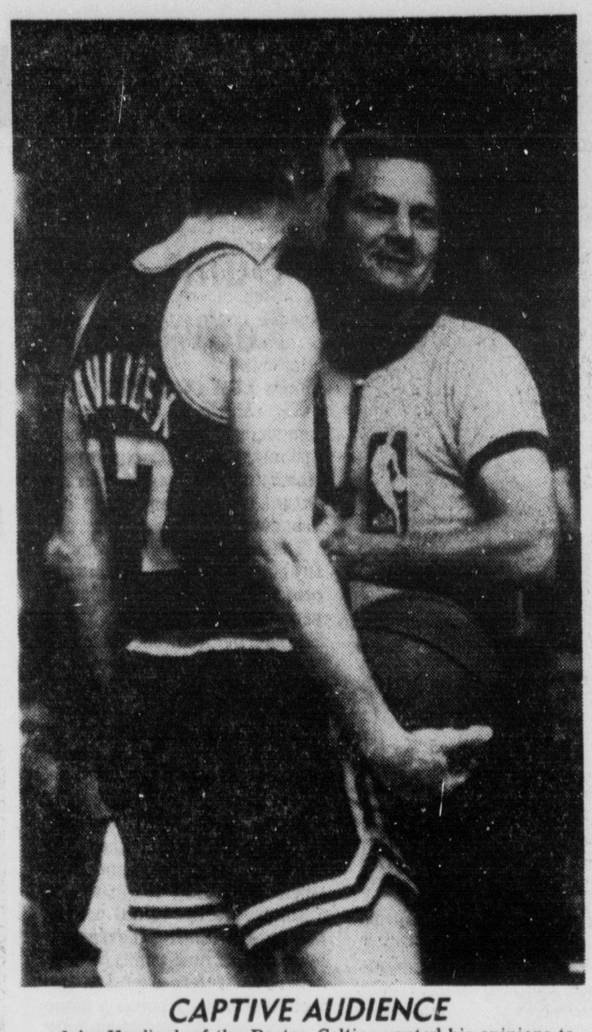

With five minutes left in the third quarter, San Marin staged its only serious threat of the second half. Holding San Rafael scoreless for the next three minutes, the Mustangs cut an 11-point Bulldog lead to 33-32. But field goals by Stewart, Jim Grant and Eric Wheeler extended their lead to seven as the quarter ended. Ironically, the Mustang rally came almost immediately following the ejection of Bulldog Steve D'Ambra and Mustang Bruce Vollert from the game. Both were tossed out after a fight broke out between them.

In the final quarter, with the contest already decided, San Rafael's players decided to try to assure Stewart of the scoring title. Having only 12 points going into the period, Stewart took continuous feeds from his teammates and scored 14 points in the quarter.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Showdown Building Up For Southern Cal, UCLA

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Unless one or the other stumbles, and it could happen, UCLA and Southern California are on schedule for a showdown for the Pacific 8 Conference title in Los Angeles on March 9.

The Bruins bounced back from their humiliation of a week ago in Oregon by beating Washington State, 93-68, and USC routed Washington, 79-64, last night to remain deadlocked for the Pac 8 lead with 8-2 records.

Tonight, the Los Angeles giants switch partners, then have games next week against California and Stanford before their fateful meeting.

Oregon, which defeated UCLA last week to snap the Bruins' conference winning streak, stayed in the race, too, by defeating California, 61-54. That put the Ducks at 7-3 and after they play Stanford tonight, they have games with Washington, Washington State and Oregon State.

Stanford, fighting for its life in the final minute, hung on to beat OSU, 55-53, and climbed into fourth place with a 5-5 record.

Meanwhile in the West Coast Athletic Conference, San Francisco defeated Loyola, 76-60, while Nevada-Reno, whipped Seattle, 84-72. That left the Dons and Wolfpack still tied for the conference lead with 10-1 records. USF hosts Pepperdine tonight while Reno hosts St. Mary's.

Nevada-Las Vegas solidified its grip on third place by beating St. Mary's, 91-87 in overtime, and Pepperdine whipped Santa Clara, 63-58, in other WCAC games Friday night.

The Pacific Coast Athletic Conference schools were idle but tonight Long Beach State, which leads the League race at 8-0 but is ineligible for postseason play, is at University of California at Santa Barbara, which is second at the moment, Los Angeles State is at San Jose State and Pacific plays at Fresno State.

The key game in the Far Western Conference saw UC Davis snap Sonoma State's 13-game winning streak, 82-71, as freshman Mark Ford scored 21 points. That left Sonoma State with a 9-1 conference record and a still comfortable lead over UC Davis, San Francisco State and Chico State.

Davis now is 7-3, a step ahead of SF State, which defeated Sacramento State, 80- 69, and Chico State, which whipped Humboldt State, 96-58. SF State is 7-4 while Chico is 6-3.

Tomales' Joyce Is An Unlikely Hero

With no one expecting him to get the ball, Joyce made a 15-foot shot with five seconds remaining to give Tomales High School a 55-53 North Central League II basketball victory over host St. Vincent in Petaluma last night.

St. Vincent had one chance to tie, but missed an attempt from half-court.

The season-ending victory gave Tomales a 3-7 final league mark for a fifth-place finish behind champion Point Arena (9-1). The Mustangs (3-6) took fourth.

The Braves were down 26-21 at half-time due to excellent shooting by St. Vincent, Tomales rallied in the second half to take the lead for good with 2:44 left in the game.

"The board strength was the difference," sais Tomales coach Jim Claman afterwards. "Joyce and John Riley really came on strong in the second half."

For St. Vincent it was a case of being outmanned, as the mustangs suited up just six players due to disciplinary actions prior to the game. "They just had too many horses," said Mustang coach Ed Major.

Tomales	5	16	15	19	—55
St. Vincent	13	13	13	14	—53

'Loose' Tamalpais Runs By Terra Linda, 88-78

By TOM THOMPSON

Tamalpais High School's basketball team unveiled a new style for its final game of the Marin County Athletic League season last night.

The Indians shot with abandon from the floor in whipping Terra Linda, 88-78, sinking 41 field goals and scoring over 20 points in each quarter.

"We were loose for this one," said Tam coach Bernie Schneider. "Generally we run a pretty tight and deliberate offense, but for the last game it was nice to let the kids go. Nobody was hesitating to take the good shot."

Especially Hollis Owens, who scored 22 points for Tam, and teammates Mike Dinehart and Ethan Winterling, who finished with 17 each.

The Trojans were running with the Indians, and like Tam, scored their highest point total of the year. Doug Carlisle topped the game's scorers with 26 points (12 from the line) in a losing cause and Matt Flynn had 22.

Tam, winning seven of its last nine games, finished the season in fourth place in the MCAL with an 8-6 record and was 12-13 overall. Terra Linda, struggling along with a roster dominated by juniors, completed the season in last place at 3-11 (7-18) overall. About 1,000 fans watched at Terra Linda.

"The thing that pleases me most about this team is that we never lost to anyone in the league we shouldn't have. We weren't really upset by anybody," said Schneider. "I'm glad to be where we are in the standings."

After a close first quarter against Terra Linda, the Indians began pulling away and held a 12-point lead with 1:40 left in the first half. The Trojans chipped at the deficit and came within two points with 2:46 left in the third period. Tam then scored 10 straight points to rebuild the lead.

The momentum stayed with the Indians and the bulge stretched to 18 with a little over three minutes to play. Terra Linda was hot in the final going but it was much too late.

L.A. Takes Thunder On Killanin's Day

Combined AP & UPI

NEW YORK — The day was supposed to belong to Lord Killanin, a bluff, pipe-smoking Irish nobleman, but the city of Los Angeles stole his thunder yesterday with the announcement it would challenge Moscow for the right to host the 1980 summer Olympic Games.

Killanin was paying his first official visit to New York since succeeding Chicago's Avery Brundage as president of the International Olympic Committee at the conclusion of the 1972 Munich Games.

The news was broken by Philip O. Krumm, president of the United States Olympic Committee, who interrupted an address by Killanin to make the announcement.

At the same time Krumm announced Lake Placid, N.Y., the only resort in North America with a bobsled run, would bid against Vancouver, Canada, and Chamonix, France, for the 1980 Winter Olympics.

Long Trip Home For Petaluma

UKIAH — It's a long way back from here, especially if you lose.

Petaluma High School made the lengthy trek home last night after concluding its North Bay League basketball season with a 55-51 loss to champion Ukiah.

The Trojans finished in a last-place tie with Napa at 3-11, eight games behind Ukiah (11-3). It was their second straight 3-11 league finish.

Petaluma trailed 29-21 at half-time but came charging back after the intermission to catch the wildcats at 46-46 with two minutes remaining. The Trojans never led them, however.

Dan Aldridge had his finest night of the year for Petaluma, scoring a game-high 26 points and holding the Wildcats' high-scoring guard, Kelvin Chapman, to just 18 points.

Rancho Wins, Coach Goes To Hospital

Rancho Cotate High School concluded its basketball season last night with a win, but coach Mike Francis had no time to savor it. He was taken to the hospital immediately afterwards.

Despite suffering from severe stomach cramps throughout the contest, Francis directed his Cougars to a 48-46 Sonoma County League victory over visiting Casa Grande in Rohnert Park.

The final minute did nothing to ease Francis' pain, because the Gauchos tied it at 46-46 on a basket by Larry Thomas with 56 seconds left.

Both teams then missed scoring opportunities, giving Rancho Cotate possession of the ball with 13 seconds left. Scott Wlodarczyk hit a basket 11 seconds later to hand the Cougars the win.

The Cougars finished SCL play in a fourth-place tie with Piner (Santa Rosa) at 7-7, five games behind champion Analy (Sebastopol) at 12-2. Casa Grande was alone in seventh with a 3-11 mark.

One Losing Streak Broken, Novato Tops Marin Catholic

Novato and Marin Catholic high schools put their basketball losing streaks on the line when they met last night, and Novato happily came away with its string broken.

The Hornets fell behind early but later surged to a 78-74 triumph before about 500 fans at Marin Catholic in the final Marin County Athletic League game for both teams.

Willie Barnes scored 23 points for Novato and Curtis Sine added 16, both working close to the basket. John Nissen hit 11 and Mike Moroski 10 for the Hornets.

Marin Catholic reeled off 16 straight points to break a 6-6 tie, but Novato came right back with 12 in a row and later pulled ahead in the second half, getting the lead up to five or six points and keeping it there.

Barnes scored 15 points and Nissen netted all 11 of his after intermission.

The game was studded with 52 fouls. Novato hit 26 of 38 free throws and Marin Catholic was 22 of 29 for a glittering 76 per cent, with Tom Cronin making all 11 of his.

Novato's victory enable the Hornets to break a three-game losing streak and finish in fifth place in the MCAL with a 6-8 record. Marin Catholic lost its final eight games and tied for sixth at 3-10. Overall, the Hornets were 15-10 and the 'Cats 9-16.

DON'T LET THE GASOLINE SHORTAGE DRIVE YOU TO A CRISIS OF SMALLER PROPORTIONS.

A Volvo can get almost twice the gasoline mileage of some popular big cars.*

Yet unlike small cars, Volvo has about the same front seat legroom as a Cadillac de Ville. As much back seat legroom as a Lincoln Continental. And more trunk space than the Pinto and Barracuda combined.

But Volvo isn't just roomy. It's comfortable.

The bucket seats are orthopedically designed to give support to all the contours of the body. Even to the point of having an adjustment that gives the small of your back firmer or softer support.

And in a Volvo, you won't have to gather your courage to enter crowded highways. Its responsive, fuel-injected engine lets you move out into traffic before onrushing traffic moves into you.

And once you're out there, you'll actually feel the rigidity of Volvo's body—welded into one solid piece of steel with thousands of closely-spaced spot welds.

So instead of overreacting to the gasoline shortage, respond thoughtfully. By getting a Volvo.

That way, you can drive a big car without adding fuel to the energy crisis.

A'S DIFFERENT BUNCH

Manager Dark Has Lot To Learn

By JOE SARGIS

OAKLAND (UPI) — This is Alvin Dark's first working day as manager of the world champion Oakland A's, and he'll have a lot of homework to do before the start of the season.

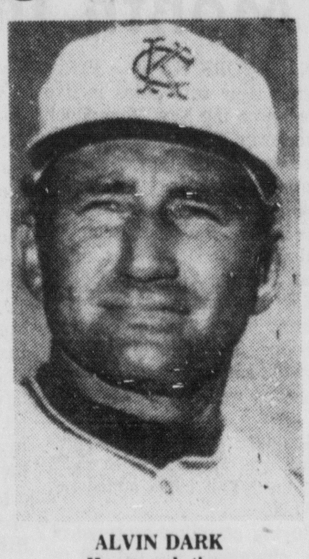

Dark, who managed the A's seven years ago, has only passing knowledge of half a dozen or so members of the current squad, so in a sense he is going in cold and uninitiated.

For the record, the 52-year-old Dark, who as a player was hard-nosed on the field and ultra conservative off it, is due for a couple of shocks.

At the news conference in which he was introduced as the new A's field boss the other day, someone asked Dark if he planned to have club rules.

He thought a minute, then picking his words carefully, he said curfew on the road would be the first rule. Later, glancing around the room, where he couldn't miss the sight of Rollie Fingers and Reggie Jackson, Dark said he'd have to wait and see about putting in other rules.

Before he even starts, Dark ought to consider what some of his players think about discipline, and that includes conduct off and on the field, free-wheeling with newsmen and mode of dress on the road.

"His job," said Jackson, "is to think for the team and run the pitching staff and leave the baseball to us. We don't need any rules, only field direction."

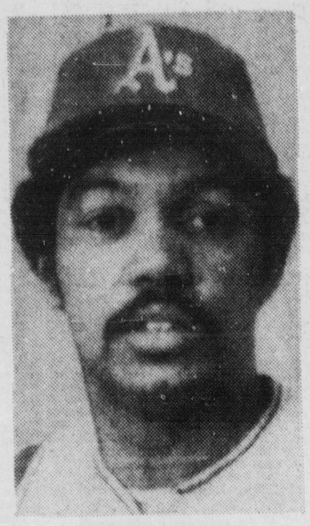

Sal Bando, the team captain, put it a little differently but said virtually the same thing.

"I hope, for his sake and the players', he doesn't have too many rules," said Bando, "simply because we haven't had many the past two years and we've won. Also, we're not used to rules. The manager shouldn't burden a player with petty things such as what he should wear off the field."

Fingers said the only time in his life he ever talked with Dark was in 1967, Alvin's previous stop with the A's, and the conversation was short and sweet.

"He told me," said Fingers, "that I was being sent to the minors for more experience. Still, though, guys on the Cleveland club told me about him and from what I gathered he seemed to have too many rules. That sort of managing won't work on this club. We're used to saying what's on our mind, to each other and newsmen, and dressing to suit ourselves."

As for being outspoken with newsmen, Dark said he didn't think players should be so free, especially in berating management, which most of the A's have been doing for a long time.

REGGIE JACKSON
'Think for team'

"I think respect should be paid to those who pay their salaries," Dark said. "If a player doesn't like it, then he should quit."

If Dark tries to push that point he could wind up without a ballclub by Memorial Day, because one of the favorite pastimes of the A's players is knocking management, especially owner Charlie Finley.

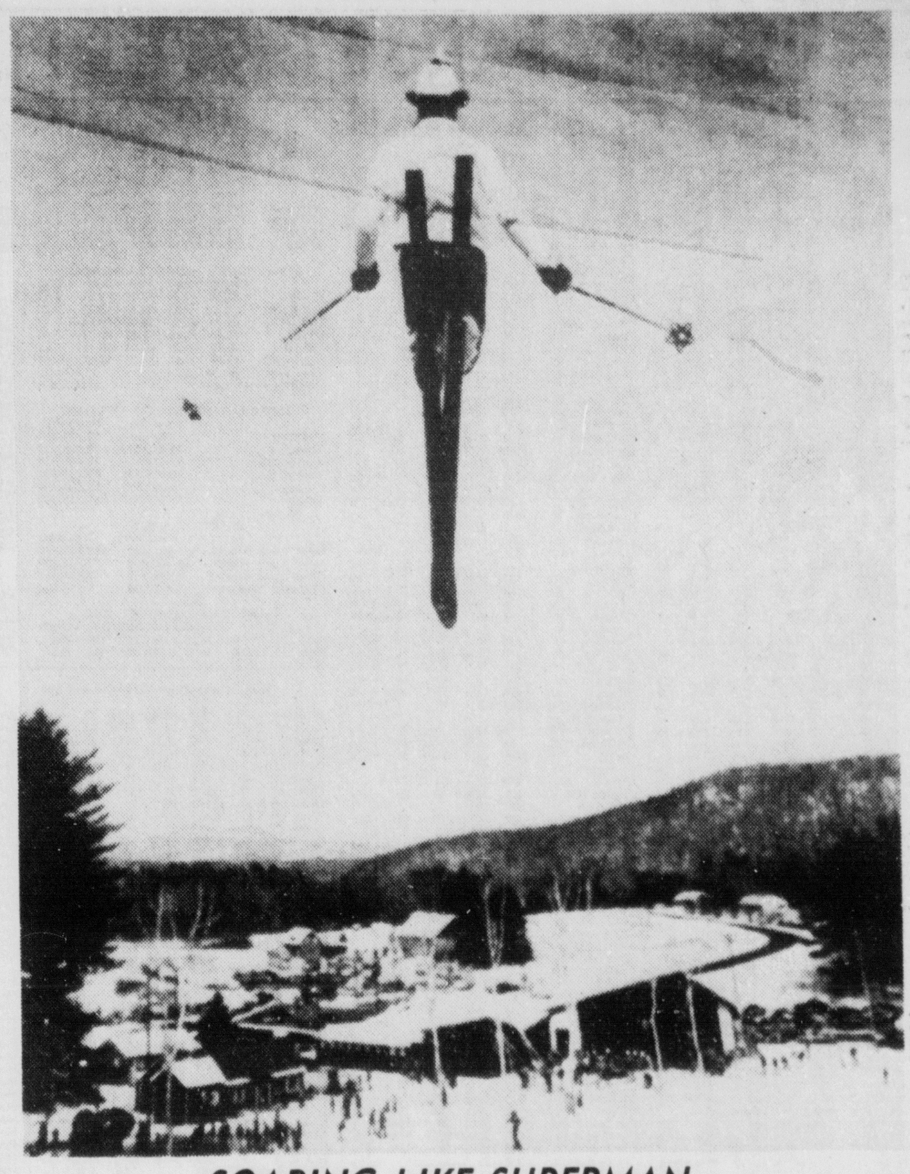

Since Dark was a shortstop one of the players he'll probably watch closely is Bert Campaneris, who plays that position these days for the A's.

Campaneris is a loner, who neither talks with his teammates, the manager nor newsmen. During the game, generally, he does as he pleases, meaning he bunts when he feels like it and steals bases on his own. None of the previous A's managers had much luck telling him what to do, simply because he is Finley's favorite player and in most respects is an untouchable.

"I know the pressure will be on me to win another world championship and make it three in a row," Dark said, "but managers don't win pennants, players do."

They sure do, and on the Oakland ballclub a manager is better off letting the players "do their thing."

Dick Williams was that sort of manager, simply because he understood this was a different bunch. Alvin Dark might be well advised to follow Williams' book.

LEADER KERMIT ZARLEY

'Pro From Moon' Chased In Gleason Golf

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Kermit Zarley is leading at the start ot today's third round of the $260,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic but look who's pushing him: Sam Snead, who is only 12 weeks short of his 62nd birthday.

Also only one stroke back is defending champion Lee Trevino, and that's got to make a colorful third round battle: "the pro from the moon," as Bob Hope called Zarley, leading by one stroke at 139 over the old West Virginia hillbilly and the Merry Mexican.

Zarley, who played a steady two-under-par 70 yesterday to go with his opening 69, wasn't surprised that "Slammin' Sammy" has pushed forward.

"He's a great athlete and, more than that, Sam hasn't lost the competitive spirit like many of the older pros seem to do," said the slender 32-year-old Seattle golf veteran.

Grinning crookedly, Snead fairly bounded into the press tent after shooting a second round 37-31–68, four under par.

"I love this," said Sam, then disclosed, "I dreamed I was going to do 31 and 41 today."

He played the back nine first, getting his 31 with an eagle and three birdies. Then he knocked his drive out of bounds on the No. 1 hole of his second nine and took a double bogey.

"When I got that six, I said, 'here it goes just like I dreamed.' But I managed to save a 37," he said.

Snead developed a unique "side saddle" putting style a year or so ago and said that "I changed a little hitch in my left hand" for the second round.

"Wham, they were going right in the center. This is the best I've ever putted side saddle," he said.

Most of yesterday's crowd of 13,555 rimmed the 18th hole and sent up a thundering roar when Snead stroked in a 25-footer.

Snead's newphew, J.C. Snead, led a group of six at 141, well within range of the lead. They included Brian Allin, Leonard Thompson, Tom Kite, Jim Dent and Chi Chi Rodriguez, who reported a trip home to practice in Puerto Rico by hitting iron shots over palm trees had helped his game.

Nine pros were knotted at 142, including first round leader Gene Littler and first round runnerup Tom Jenkins.

Jack Nicklaus, always a pretourney favorite, barely made the cut to the top 70 players and ties at 147. Nicklaus started his second round with two bogeys and a double bogey on the first three holes but managed to struggle in with a 73. Napa's Ron Cerrudo fired a 72 yesterday for a 150 total.

Big Frosh Win By Terra Linda

Terra Linda High School's freshman basketball team won a key game from its chief rival to pull into a tie for the Marin County Athletic League lead yesterday.

The Trojans caught Marin Catholic in the standings at 11-3 with a 70-62 triumph. Tim Mazzina scored 23 points for Terra Linda and Lance Phillips had 19 for the visiting Wildcats.

Tuesday's season-ending schedule has Terra Linda at Drake, Marin Catholic at home against San Rafael and Third-place Redwood (10-4) at Tamalpais, all at 4 p.m.

Redwood, with Jeff Stewart acroing 12 points and Greg Zunino 10, took a 45-30 victory over visiting Drake (3-11) yesterday.

TONIGHT VS. WEST VALLEY

Tars Finish Home Schedule

College of Marin will play its final home basketball game of 1973 tonight at 8 o'clock when West Valley College of Campbell visits the Tars' gym in Kentfield.

Marin carries a 10-3 Camino Norte Conference record and a 22-3 overall mark into the game following its 75-67 upset of previously undefeated De Anza of Cupertino Tuesday night.

Marin had fallen from eighth to 14th in the statewide rankings compiled by the Junior College Athletic Bureau of San Mateo, but probably will rise again after beating the fifth-ranked Dons.

Tonight's game will mark the final home appearances for seven sophomores, including starters Wil Garner, Leonard Smith and Bill Donnellan.

Garner, the 6-foot-4 forward, parlayed his high leaping, quick inside moves and accurate outside jumper to make all-state last season, and has been scoring at an even greater clip this year. He threatens to break all of Joe Smith's season and career scoring records.

Smith, the 6-3 guard, became a favorite of the fans with his quick-handed steals and interceptions, deadly long-range shot from the corner, air-tight defense and conspicuous hustle.

Donnellan, the 6-2 guard, spent one year at the University of San Francisco and another year out of college basketball before joining the Tars this season and becoming a starter.

Flap Arises On $600,000 Study Fund

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Department of Corrections is using a $600,000 state appropriation to fund a peace officer training course which in part has nothing to do with the duties of prison guards, the State Auditor General said yesterday.

The monies are being used to fund a "course that is oriented toward the needs of law enforcement officials who come into daily contact with the general public," said Auditor General Harvey M. Rose.

"Twenty-five per cent of the training course covers laws and methods of arrest which are seldom encountered in correction institutions," he added. "In fact, the job specification for correctional officers does not even include an arrest function."

In a report to Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, chairman of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee, Rose said, "In our judgment this use is not in accordance with the intent for which these monies were appropriated."

The report said that correctional officers were given peace officer status in 1968 and pursuant to state law the department is providing training to its personnel in order that they maintain that status.

"We are not taking exception to the department's compliance" with maintaining the status, the report said. "However, the $600,000 appropriation for training was for 'additional training' and, in our judgment, was clearly for the purpose of upgrading the performance of correctional personnel in their day-to-day duties."

In rebuttal, Corrections Director Raymond Procunier said, "There is nothing in the intent of the $600,000 appropriation which precludes its use for peace officer training. Training to correctional personnel in order that they can maintain their peace officer status represents "additional training."'

The $600,000 was authorized in the Budget Act of 1973 and was designated "for additional training for correctional personnel ..." according to the report.

The report also said that the department "has not maintained a formal set of accounting records for the special $600,000 training appropriation..."

Procunier said, "Action is being taken to see that there will be a full accounting of the $600,000 appropriation."

Laxalt To Seek Seat In Senate

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Former Republican Gov. Paul Laxalt has announced his candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Democrat Alan Bible.

Laxalt, 51, a hotel-casino owner here, has been out of politics since his single four-year term as governor ended in 1970.

"I look forward to a difficult, uphill campaign, particularly if Gov. Mike O'Callaghan is my opponent, but it doesn't worry me," Laxalt said.

O'Callaghan, a Democrat, is considered the strongest candidate the Democrats could offer to succeed Bible. He is expected to indicate his political plans in late March or early April.

Younger Will Run On Record

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Att. Gen. Evelle J. Younger, pledging a campaign "based on my record and accomplishments," has filed nomination papers to seek reelection as the state's chief law officer.

Younger was accompanied by his wife, Mildred, and several campaign supporters when he filed the nomination papers Thursday with the county registrar-recorder's office.

In a statement released after the filing, Younger said he could "best serve the people of California by serving another term."

Nun Wants To Shed Traditional Image

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Dorothy Shugrue does not want to be put on a pedestal because she's a nun.

"The new image I want to get across is that I am available to you when it is best for you and not the old thought that people couldn't call you after 10 o'clock," said Sister Dorothy, the first nun in the Bridgeport diocese to become involved in campus ministry.

An assistant chaplain at the University of Bridgeport, she prefers the option of wearing secular clothing in her role as a new breed of church woman.

"I was not the type of kid you would think of as entering the convent. I was active and outgoing at a time when people entering were usually thought of as quiet and academic," she recalled.

A Providence, R.I., native, the daughter of a policeman and a school teacher, Sister Shugrue decided on campus ministry while working for a master's degree at Southern Connecticut State College.

In an interview, she talked of the "false image of the past" when nuns were thought to be better than others and "put on a pedestal."

The women's liberation movement has touched her life, she said, along with changes made by the Vatican II council. The changes in the church demand a different kind of woman in religious life than those who entered in the past, she said.

The scheduled life of the past is gone and the new breed of sister "is a woman who needs to be aware of changes in the world, but still the woman of the past with a desire to serve the Lord."

At the university, some people call her sister and some use her first name. She says the faculty is pleasantly surprised with her approach to ministry. And she finds students "warm and receptive."

Students, she said, "see me more as a woman of service to them, and I feel I can alleviate any barriers that might arise from my being a sister."

Sister Dorothy wants to become an extraordinary minister of the church, as which she will be able to distribute the Eucharist when the priest or deacon is sick.

A nun for 11 years, she is a member of the order of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur in Fairfield, but she lives nerr the university campus with three other sisters.

"Right now I am making myself known to the students and participating in everything I can," she said. She stressed the importance of involving students in urban problems and in learning how to move into power positions through political awareness.

"I have deep feelings about prayer movements and sociological movements and I would like to see them come together."

She said a religious woman like herself is visible witness to the message of Christ in a whole lot of areas — not just in the narrow image people think of when they think of nuns... as a teacher or nurse.

"That image has to be changed for us to be effective, because I think we have power."

REV. JOHN NEILSON
New Mill Valley pastor

New Pastor Takes Over Tomorrow

Rev. John Neilson will be installed as the new pastor of the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley tomorrow at 11 a.m., according to church officials.

Dr. Douglas L. Siden, north coastal area minister of the American Baptist Churches of the West, will conduct the installation.

An informal reception will be held at 3 p.m. at the church for the new pastor.

Rev. Neilson presently is studying for a master's in divinity at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary. From 1971 to 1973 he served as pastor of the Elkhorn Baptist Church in Bryte, Yolo County.

Rev. Neilson is a native of Brighton, Sussex, England, and was ordained in 1942. In 1958 he began work in prisons and reform schools in England until he and his family decided to leave prison service and come to California.

He received his bachelor's degree in psychology and philosophy from Sacramento State College in 1972 and entered Golden Gate Seminary soon afterwards.

In May, 1972, he was ordained as a Southern Baptist minister.

Catholics Falling Behind In The Output Of Clergy

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Plenty of students still are training for the Protestant ministry but the output of Roman Catholic clergy is falling behind the demand.

These contrasting situations were apparent in the issuance of new statistics by the American Association of Theological Schools in Dayton, Ohio, on enrollment in seminaries.

In some Protestant denominations, the continued tide of new ministers is so strong, says the Rev. Roddey Reid Jr., a specialist on the matter, that there is "a significant number of unemployed clergy for the first time in history."

The Rev. Mr. Reid, of New York City, head of the clergy placement office of the Episcopal Church in which the surplus has been particularly heavy, says there is a steadily increasing number of clergy "in proportion to the number of parishes."

"It's something new in the history of the Church in America," he adds.

However, a reverse condition is evident in Roman Catholicism in which the number of seminarians continues to shrink. It's a "critical problem," says the Rev. Adriany Fuerst, of the Church's Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate, of Washington, D.C.

He blames the downturn on a lack of active recruitment efforts by bishops and priests — a job that some of them lately have begun beefing up with advertising campaigns and other methods in face of portents of shortages.

Over-all, enrollment of the nation's Protestant and Catholic theological schools — 189 of them — was up 5.6 per cent this term to 34,923 over the previous year's total of 33,036.

While the figures, compiled by the Interdenominational Accrediting Association, showed the number of Catholic seminarians down 5.2 per cent to 5,467, most Protestant denominational totals were up.

In most mainline Protestant bodies, the output of new ministers "is keeping up with or running ahead of need," says the Rev. Marvin Taylor, the association's associate director.

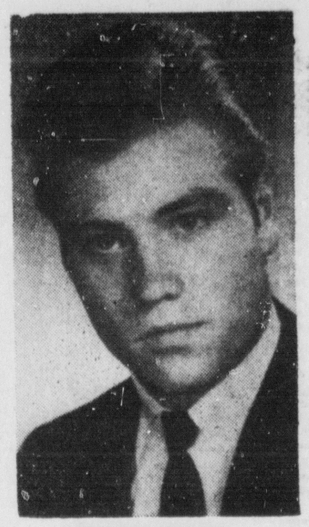

He notes there are exceptions, particularly in evangelical Protestant denominations whose membership and ministerial needs have continued to grow.

Most larger denominations, however, have had membership declines in recent years — while the flow of students into the ministry generally has continued unabated or increased.

The view has become widespread in Protestantism that "there already are too many clergy," says Rev. Taylor, but he adds that the cases of excess are spotty, varying by denomination and region.

Actually, the sizable increase in over-all seminary enrollment this term did not occur among students preparing for ordination, Rev. Taylor says, but was nearly all in post-ministerial students seeking doctorates.

As for the number of students who simply have finished college and now are in seminary preparing for ordination, the total for both Protestants and Catholics this term is 20,674, down from 21,305 last year.

Organist To Play At St. Paul's

Steven C. Grubb, organist at Grace Lutheran Church in Modesto, will present an organ recital tomorrow at 8 p.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 1123 Court Street, San Rafael.

The recital will be the second Grubb has presented in the recital series at St. Paul's.

His program will include works by Bach, Franck, Sowerby and Messiaen. The "Canonical Variations" by Bach and "The Ascension Suite" by Messiaen are the focal points of the recital, which deals with the life of Christ.

The public recitals are followed by a wine reception in the parish hall of the church.

First Literate Colombian Pygmy Honored At Dinner

Alfonoso Nuivita, the first literate person in his Kogi pygmy tribe of 5,000 in northeast Colombia, was guest of honor last night at a dinner in Santa Rosa sponsored by the Lutheran Bible Translators.

The tribesman appeared with Chad Stendal, the man who invented an alphabet and wrote down the spoken Kogi language.

Stendal, a one-time civil engineer who superintended the construction of locks on the St. Lawrence Seaway on the Great Lakes and who headed up a Nike missile construction project south of Minneapolis, heard about the Jungle Aviation and Radio Service, Summer Institute of Linguistics and Wycliffe Bible Translators six years ago.

He left his secular work to study for the Lutheran ministry and went to Columbia as a missionary linguist. Within the borders of that country an estimated 136 tribal groups still speak their own tribal dialects and remain outside the mainstream of national life. This, in spite of the fact that Colombians, in the large cities, speak the finest Castilian in Latin America.

Alfonso was brought to Stendal with the request: "Teach my son how to read." This request of the young Kogi's father has been answered. Today, Alfonso is the first man in the tribe to become literate and the first to embrace Christianity.

At age 23 he has won respect of so many much older people in his ethnic group. His advice is sought in the councils of his people. Alfonso has determined to keep his dress and hair styles and traditional ways so that he might continue to enjoy acceptance and be a teacher to his people.

Presently in this country with the Stendals, (they are on furlough in Minnesota), the Indian youth is collaborating on a translation of the Book of Acts from the New Testament; earlier, he helped in the translation of St. Mark.

Significant is his height. The usual Kogi stands about 4½ feet. Improved diet at the missionary's table, along with the avoidance of the use of the coca drug, traditionally used in the tribe, have given Alfonso stature "head and shoulders above his people." He stands over 5 feet tall.

There are 2,000 tribes in the world without a written language — 2,000 Bibleless tribes — according to Lutheran Bible Translators spokesman, Rev. L. Kenneth Zank, and tribes are being supplied teams of linguists currently at the rate of one new tribe every 11th day.

Wycliffe, Lutheran Bible Translators, church missionaries work upon invitation of foreign governments, often assisting the ministry of education with the fruit of their linguistic labors.

Unitarians To Install Peterman

Rev. Sidney A. Peterman will be installed as new minister of the Marin Fellowship of Unitarians at 6 p.m., March 3, at the Unitarian Fellowship, 240 Channing Way, San Rafael.

Rev. Peterman recently accepted the minister's post left vacant by the resignation of Karel F. Botermans, now minister emeritus.

Born in Seattle, Rev. Peterman spent most of his life in the Santa Clara Valley. Following graduation from San Jose State in 1946, after serving three years in the Army in World War II, he taught philosophy at the college for a short time.

He later decided to enter the ministry and attended Meadville and Starr King, graduating from the latter in 1949.

His first parish was Eugene, Ore., where he served three years. From 1951 to 1955, he was minister at the Columbus, Ohio, Unitarian Church and in 1955 accepted a call to his hometown church in San Jose, where he served for 12 years.

Under his leadership, this old, mid-town church was completely revitalized and transformed into a center for community activities. His interests ranged from establishing friendship groups for high school and college youth to organizing senior citizen activities.

From 1967 to 1970, Rev. Peterman was minister at the Unitarian Church in Monterey, where he was successful in uniting the two divergent Unitarian groups of that area into one congregation. While in Monterey, he became deeply involved in the problems of young servicemen and helped initiate a GI counseling center. This led to his being invited to Japan to continue his work with servicemen overseas.

For two years he held the position of Asia Director for Pacific Counseling Service in Tokyo before returning to this country in 1972 to resume his work in the parish ministry.

A Push Is On To Put Pretzel Back In Lent

NEW YORK (AP) — That curious, convoluted chunk of bread, the pretzel, was in its origin a symbol of a Christian season that begins next week. And there's a move afoot to revive the custom.

"Pretzels for God," is the name of the drive, generated in Phoenix, Ariz., to put the pretzel back into the observance of Lent, the 40-day period of penitence and spiritual renewal preceding Easter.

"The idea has caught on tremendously here, among young and old and Catholics and Protestants," says Marlene McCauley, leader of the effort to point up the real meaning of the pretzel and restore its religious use.

"It's a holy symbol of prayer and penance," she says. "It's a sign of Christian love."

The group urges families at the start of Lent on Ash Wednesday next week to explain to children the religious origin of the pretzel, to serve it on each plate each day of Lent at the evening meal, opening with a "pretzel prayer."

The prayer, recalling early Christian use of the pretzel, goes in part:

"Grant us, we pray, that we too, may be reminded by the daily sight of these pretzels to observe the holy season of Lent with true devotion and great spiritual fruit."

The pretzel push comes at a time when Lenten observances are more open to innovation, now that Roman Catholicism has lifted its former rules of mandatory fasting and abstinence from meat all through the period.

Instead of focusing on fixed routines of dietary limitations, the stress now in Catholicism — and also in Protestantism — is on positive programs for spiritual growth, such as special Bible study and religious reading, and on generosity to aid those in need.

Six Mid-Week Lenten Services Are Scheduled

The first of six mid-week Lenten services will be held at Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church, 9 Shepherd Way, Tiburon, on Ash Wednesday, Feb. 27, at 7:30 p.m.

Each week contemporary sound and color films will be shown and related to Christ's passion through short sermonettes presented by Pastor Fred J. Landdeck.

This week's film is: "A New Love for Candy," which spans the world of emotion through the eyes of a child. Filmed amid the excitement of a state fair, it presents the faith of a little child as the framework for rebuilding divided families.

Big Christian Turnout Seen In Jerusalem

PLAINFIELD, N.J. (UPI) — More then 3,000 Christians will meet in Jerusalem during the first week of March to study the power of prayer as a vehicle for healing.

Evanglist Kathryn Kuhlman had described the March 2-5 assembly as "the first real miracle service in Jerusalem since the original Pentecost."

The Logos International Fellowship, which is sponsoring the conference, said some of the Christians planning to attend have hopes of personal physical healing.

A spokesman for Logos International said "there is a real possibility the Miracle Services and the teachings on the Holy Spirit will become an annual Jerusalem event.

Christians Unite For Voice In Education

To fulfill a long felt need, Christian parents, teachers, and others interested in the public schools, have united to form CARE (A Christian Association for Representation in Education) to provide a unified Christian voice in regard to public education.

CARE has set the following goals:

(1) To glorify God; (2) To protect the rights and responsibilities of pupils, parents and teachers; (3) To provide a unified Christian voice on matters that concern public education; (4) To aid and support individuals and groups to safeguard freedom of Christian education in public schools.

CARE's first public meeting will be Monday, 7:30 p.m. at San Rafael High School cafeteria.

At this meeting, the officers and leadership committee of CARE will open with prayer, have scripture reading, explain goals, introduce officers and leadership committee, tell history of CARE, outline organizational structure, and hold a forum for questions and answers.

Bishops Are Told Of Need To Learn

NOTRE DAME, Ind. (UPI) — Catholic bishops studying modern techniques of communications at a seminar here were advised to take a lesson from Madison Avenue.

"If the television industry can motivate people more effectively with cat food commercials than we can with the Sermon on the Mount, then it stands to reason we have a lot to learn from them," said the Rev. Richard A. Blake, S.J., associate editor of American magazine.

BY U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, Feb. 23, the 54th day of 1974 with 311 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn.

German composer George Frederic Handel was born Feb. 23, 1685.

On this day in history:

In 1942, a Japanese submarine fired 25 shells at an oil refinery near Santa Barbara, two and a half months after Japan's sneak attack on Pearl Harbor had catapulted the United States into World War II.

In 1945, six members of the 5th Division of the U.S. Marines planted an American flag atop Mount Suribachi on the Pacific Island of Iwo Jima.

In 1972, President Nixon conferred for four hours in Peking with Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai.

A thought for the day: American playwright Irwin Shaw said, "There are too many books I haven't read, too many places I haven't seen, too many memories I haven't kept long enough."

Camilli Back For State Job

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Richard L. Camilli, former executive officer of the state Personnel Board, is returning to the Reagan administration as director of the Employment Development Department.

Gov. Ronald Reagan has named Camilli, 41, to the $33,960-a-year post effective March 1. Camelli quit his Personnel Board post last November to become president of Health Management Systems of Sacramento, a consulting firm for prepaid health plans.

Camilli, a Republican, succeeds EDD Director Dwight Geduldig who resigned earlier this week to become a campaign aide to Dr. Earl Brian, who is running for the U.S. Senate.

Going After Sure Tricks Depends Upon The Situation

In most hands there are some tricks that you can take right away and other tricks that need development. Should you begin by taking your sure tricks before they get stale, or should you begin by developing the additional tricks?

A HIGH SPADE

In this case, West opens the king of spades. You refuse the first trick, but West continues with the ten of spades, and you must take the ace.

You can take four diamonds and three hearts on the run. These, together with the ace of spades, will give you only eight tricks.

NOTHING TO FEAR

You would have nothing to fear if West had opened a different suit or if he had switched from spades at the second Trick. You could lead clubs, setting up three additional club tricks.

SPADES THREATEN

Since West has actually knocked out the ace of spades, you cannot afford to lead a club at once. West takes the ace of clubs and the rest of his spades to defeat your contract.

The only hope is to run your sure tricks. You cash the four diamonds, discarding a club from your own hand.

West must discard twice while you run the diamonds. His first discard is easy: the ten of clubs. His next discard is impossible.

HEART SITUATION

If West discards a heart, you can cash the top hearts to set up your last heart. If West discards the ace of clubs, you get four additional tricks. Poor West can discard only a spade.

But now West has discarded the setting trick. You can knock out the ace of clubs. and West can take only two further spade tricks. This is not enough to defeat the contract, and you easily win the rest of the tricks.

ART REVIEW

Terra Linda Group On Display

By ADA GARFINKEL

A varied sampling of works by members of the Terra Linda Art Association, on display at the Marin Civic Center Library through Feb. 28, suggests some developing ideas.

The woodcut, bathed in tones of moonlight blues, is developed in trapezoidal planes with spiral light-beam tracings. Its somber and menacing atmosphere suggests intrigue.

"Prairie Impression," a landscape by Mary Ellen Wehrli, is a small, pastoral scene, simply handled with horizontal tactile swabs of yellows and white paint imperceptibly melded. Much importance is added to it, however, by mounting it on a much larger, pale green canvas and enclosing it within a one-inch-wide band of muted green. Other banded rectangular forms and a diagonal stripe of the same color and width placed strategically to fill the space add substantially to a 'special' look.

Landscapes and nature were selected as subject matter by several more artists.

There is an Andrew Wyeth theatricality in P.A. Walters' starkly realistic "Solitary Tree" struggling for survival in a strangely lit field of rocks and straggly, dry grass. But it is not present in Jean Victor's striding "Three Shadows."

An intense feeling is conveyed in Zora Sweeney's "Look in Silence," a semiabstract painting of downward sloping trees and rolling land in strong yellows, blues, and greens.

Ann Bernauer's small pen-and-ink drawing of "Lucas Valley" records ranging space in a small format. And Vera Bacharach's "Merry Bluebirds" is a watercolor in the Oriental manner.

Nostalgic visitations include "Ferry Boat" by Peg Benedict and "Dawn" by Ann Hardy (both watercolors), and two stained-glass collages by Nancy Brennan.

Viewing hours are from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Vonnegut's Stories Handled Adequately

By GERALD GENESE

Kurt Vonnegut Jr., author of the recent best seller, "Breakfast of Champions", has had three of his short stories dramatized by Christopher Sergel under the title "Welcome to the Monkey House".

Being very adequately presented by the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts, (under the direction of Robin Jackson) "Monkey House" has an interesting beginning, but little cohesion of theme throughout the remainder of the play.

"Monkey House" makes an introductory statement and is followed by three short pieces, none of which seem to be related, other than through the efforts of a narrator, Newt, energetically and enthusiastically played by David Ames.

We are introduced to a B. F. Skinnerish world, somewhere in the 21st Century, where thinking individuals are subjected to ear splitting sounds produced by head sets locked onto anyone who entertains an original thought. Equality is taken to its absurd extreme, because the intelligent are forced to become mediocre like everyone else.

Dale Kleine as Geroge Bergeron is very convincing as the thinking man and Mary Ellen McCurdy is delightful as his television watching wife.

The curtain then opens to reveal a small theater group in the town of North Crawford which is casting for its next production. It is difficult to discern how this piece is related to the introduction.

There are some nice performances though, by W. H. Teed Harry Nash, a Clark Kent-Superman-type character, who, when he is on stage, symbolically sheds his glasses and mild manner to become a super actor. Teed is quite nicely aided by Stephanie Saunders-Nicol, a telephone employee, a non-entity who reveals a streak of creativity when auditioning opposite Teed for a part in the play.

In a thankless part as the group's director, Toni Sawyer, an extremely versatile actress, makes the slightly bitchy director believable and palatable. It is no easy task.

The second and most interesting piece of the evening, and the one most clearly related to the introductory statement is "Euphone" (short for euphemism). It is about a scientist who has discovered a void in space which emits a sound that makes everyone happily stoned.

The best performance of the evening is by Mona Ram as Nancy, a radio talk show hostess who interviews the scientist.

As does the introduction, "Euphone" touches on the theme of programmed and commercially induced responses.

"The Kid Nobody Could Handle," more a mood piece, is about a hostile young boy, played by John Slater, who shows a rough exterior to the world, quite obviously hiding tremendous pain and rejection.

"Welcome to the Monkey House", will be performed today at 8:30 p.m. in the Mill Valley Golf Clubhouse, 267 Buena Vista Avenue, Mill Valley. Further performances are scheduled Friday and Saturday at 8:30 through March 16. There will be no performance Friday, March 1.

"WELCOME TO THE MONKEY HOUSE" — By Kurt Vonnegut Jr., dramatized by Christopher Sergel. Directed by Robin Jackson for the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts. Produced by Sali Lieberman; Lights, Brad Zais and Valerie Tassen; sound, Charles D. Cherry, Cheryl Jones and Karen Ringlien; set design, John Garrity; costumes by Jerry LoCoco. The cast: Hazel Begeron, Mary Ellen McCurdy; George Bergeron, Dale R. Kleine; Harrison Bergeron, John Slater; Diana Moon Glampers, Robin Murphy; Miss Doris Sawyer, Toni Sawyer; Newt, David Ames; Harry Nash, Stephaine Saunders-Nicol; Susanna, Karen Garrison; Nancy, Mona Ram; and Mary, Carol Sigundson.

Younger Sets 'Purge' Of Criminal Records

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger has announced plans to destroy about 2.5 million state criminal arrest records for a number of offenses including drunkeness and some felonies.

Younger said yesterday the "purge" by his office was "a first in the state's 72-year history of keeping criminal records."

His action followed a series of hearings around California concerning the disposal of old and minor records.

"It is my firm conviction," Younger said in a statement, "that the changed procedures ... will result in a more effective and economical criminal information system, an improved level of service to all criminal justice agencies and better protection for the rights of the individual."

The proposed elimination of about half of the state's 5 million criminal records was supported by law enforcement agencies, the attorney general's office said.

Under Younger's plan, which will officially take effect Aug. 1, all state arrest records for drunkeness in public, minor traffic offenses, local ordinance violations and non-specific offenses such as "disorderly" or "investigation" will be destroyed.

Records of misdemeanor arrests not resulting in a conviction and arrests later termed "detention only" will be kept only for a five-year period.

Retained for seven years will be records of misdemeanor arrests resulting in a conviction, felony arrests without a conviction and certain other felony related arrests.

Younger announced a "modified lifetime record retention period" for felony convictions, for situations where a prior conviction constitutes a felony and for an offense which would be a felony depending on its disposition.

If a person with such a criminal record has reached age 70 with no "contacts" with the criminal justice system since he was 60, the record will be destroyed.

Younger's records purge does not apply to criminal records kept by local agencies.

No Rehearings On Rate Boosts

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The state Public Utilities Commission has declined to order rehearings on three rate increases it granted to Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

The increases totaled $73.3 million annually and raised the typical consumer's gas bill around 50 cents per month.

The PUC rejected five petitions for rehearing filed by San Francisco Consumer Action and consumer activist Sylvia Siegel as "without merit.

However, one of the decisions was modified "consistent with our prior actions to require PG&E to pass on to its customers any refunds made by El Paso Natural Gas Co. to PG&E, relative to the price increase on which one of the rate increases was authorized.

Owner Spots Stolen Truck

PORTERVILLE (AP) — Somebody stole Gordon Woods' brand new $5,400 pickup, so he hopped in a plane and flew around this Sierra Nevada foothill area until he spotted it.

Woods, of nearby Cucor, alerted the Porterville Airport Tower Thursday that he was following the pickup from above. Tower personnel alerted Tulare County sheriff's deputies.

Two juveniles fled the pickup when they realized a plane was following, but they were picked up later, officers said.

Two Groups To Perform At Concert

The Tamalpais Chamber Orchestra and Tamalpais Madrigal Singers will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Mill Valley Methodist Church.

The orchestra will perform Haydn's "Overture in D Major," Rosetti's "Konzert for Flute and Chamber Orchestra in D Major," Boismortier's "Konzert for Five Flutes," two guitar solos by Torroba and Handel's "Concerto Grosso."

Some Disagreement On Gas Shortage

THE GAS SHORTAGE has become a major inconvenience in Marin.

But actual shortages are probably more apparent then real.

One oil company executive privately sees it this way: The station operator has never had it so good. His mark-up has risen from 7 to 12 cents per gallon. He has sharply reduced the number of days and hours his station is open; he has even reduced the number of pumps he uses. Altogether he has reduced his work force and payroll substantially. He still sells 85 per cent as much gasoline as he ever did. With lower costs and higher mark-up, he has a good thing going.

A service station opeator tells you a somewhat different story: the oil company treats him disdainfully, eliminating discounts and credits which formerly were part of his necessary income. His allocation doesn't take into account populaton and growth in consumer needs; an allocation of 100 per cent of what he got last year would still leave him short.

A scattering of stations are permanently closed; their customers must seek gas elsewhere, cutting into limited allocations.

WE WIND UP with more cars having to get into fewer stations which are open fewer days and shorter hours, with fewer pumps operating and fewer employees on duty.

No wonder the lines are long!

A considerable amount of gas is still available; it's just that the time it is available is much shorter, the number of places it is available are fewer, and the number of pumps and personnel to do the job are much fewer.

Further, some of us get gas more often. We do not like to let our tanks get much below half full. Many stations limit us to 5 or 10 gallons. At the very time of the crush we have to go to the pump more often.

The federal government has ordered refineries to refine more gasoline. Heating fuel supplies apparently are adequate for lower thermostat settings.

IF YOU HAVE occasion to take an extended auto trip, you find that the shortage doesn't seem so great outside metropolitan areas.

Waiting lines at stations in country areas are mostly nonexistent. A scattering of stations are still open at night. Even a few 24-hour stations survive. A few stations are still open Sundays too.

In the middle of last week, between San Francisco and Los Angeles one could see one or two stations still offering trading stamps and other inducements. Many stations still post large price signs. In fact, some southern California cities are beginning by ordinance to require this safeguard against gouging.

Despite these signs of substantial supplies, the need for gas conservation continues. Motorists observing the 55-mile speed limit between San Francisco and Los Angeles report gas mileage increases of two to three miles per gallon. For 400 miles, this means a saving of five to seven gallons on the trip — at 50 cents or more per gallon.

Traffic seems lighter on the long haul routes.

Apparently, many are cutting down on automobile travel. After all, the government has urged us all to curtail, to use not more than 10 gallons of gas per week. Stations have been asked to remain closed on Sunday, presumably to discourage joy riding.

Nevertheless, the inconvenience grows.

But it still probably is preferable to rationing.

An Idea Worth Reviving

Anyone who has ever spent any time in a wheelchair can tell you that, next to stairways, high curbs are his biggest problem.

There are many such high curbs in San Rafael, as well as in most other cities of Marin. To the handicapped, they are virtual cliffs, threatening and hazardous.

In the tourist-filled Waikiki Beach area of Honolulu, every corner has a four-foot long piece of curb removed and replaced with a short but gentle incline. It makes walking easier — and it is a godsend for the handicapped.

Several years ago, the late City Councilman Harry A. Barbier proposed such a system for San Rafael, after noticing it also on some streets in Santa Cruz. The city's public works department was asked to come up with some cost figures. But nothing further happened. After Barbier's untimely illness and death, the idea apparently was forgotten.

It would be nice to see it revived. If the cost of such curb-cuts and ramps throughout the downtown area would be too great for inclusion in one year's budget, it could be spread over several years. And wherever new streets are planned under the city's redevelopment program, "wheelchair ramps" could be included at intersections.

This is the sort of thing that is a real service to citizens — as some things in city budgets are not.

We suggest that the city fathers take another look at the idea their late colleague proposed but was never able to follow through.

Mothballing The Skunks

It requires an extraordinary nature buff to be fond of skunks after they have repeatedly let him know their low opinion of him and his abode with all guns firing. We think Marin's skunks deserve every consideration and we would be delighted to consider them — under someone else's house. This is the time of year when the little beasts can be encouraged to move on by a liberal sprinkling of mothballs in possible den sites under and around the house. In a month or two, in March or April, this fragrant fauna will perform its multiplication trick and one skunk will become several. So, the time is now. Right now! Or suffer through a skunkish summer.

Trustees' Actions 'Mindless,' Not Devious

I was touched by the epistle from Dr. Bradford Simmons, a Marin General Hospital trustee, published Feb. 16. He was concerned that I might believe a Marin General contract was awarded by "devious design" during his absence from a hospital trustee meeting. It should comfort Dr. Simmons to know that at no time have I suspected the hospital trustees of devious acts, although, on occasion, I have suspected them of mindless acts.

Effective April Fool's Day that board of trustees, by contract, will have converted the Marin General emergency room into a concession run by a doctor who will hire whomever he pleases to see emergency patients. The new system was designed to save the hospital money. The qualifications of the contract doctor have not been questioned. It is the plan to convert a known quality of medical care to an unknown quality of medical care that is questionable One of the lay trustees to have more control of an important hospital department than that board cares to assume.

Buying Dollar Estate For Park Suggested

As I was walking through the beautiful grounds of Boyd Park, I was thinking of the value of public parks like this one. I would like to urge the open space committee to consider ways of acquiring the nearby Robert Dollar estate for such public use. Certainly the gracious and lovely setting would be a grand park for all to enjoy.

Taking Away Watergate Would Put Nation Down In Dumps

WASHINGTON — Everyone from Joseph Alsop to Vice President Gerald Ford is pleading that the country should forget about Watergate so the president can devote his time and efforts to such important matters as the energy crisis.

Dr. Siegfried Siegfreed, a psychiatrist who is writing a book, "How Much Can Americans Take?," supports the opposite view. "I think it would be more advantageous if the country could forget about the energy crisis so the president could devote his full time to Watergate."

"WHY DO YOU say that, doctor?"

"The truth is that practically everyone in the country gets a fiendish delight reading about Watergate, while very few people get any fun reading about the energy crisis. My studies show that if you offer readers the choice of a Watergate article or one on the oil shortage, they will take the Watergate story 5 to 1. I'm afraid that if Watergate hadn't happened we would have had to invent it."

"But why?" I asked Dr. Siegfreed.

"Watergate is pure entertainment. It has comedy, mystery and melodrama. I would prefer that it have a little sex as well, but we can't have everything. People identify with the Watergate characters. They are all clean-cut, short-haired Americans caught up in a soap opera which each insists was not of his making. It also involves a new element which is the question of a presidential impeachment. The number two man has been booted out of office and the number one man's job is on the line.

"What more escape can you offer people who are beset with inflation, unemployment and transportation problems beyond their wildest dreams?

"WITHOUT WATERGATE you would have a mass mental depression in this country. I maintain that Watergate is the glue that keeps the nation from falling apart.

"Take the controversy over the tapes. What a pleasure it is to see the battle being waged between the White House and the special prosecutor. What ficiton writer would have had the nerve to have written the Rose Mary Woods role in the erasure of the key tape? Americans may not want to admit it, but they love every minute of Watergate. The worst mistake would be to deprive them of this marvelous farce provided them free through the courtesy of their friendly government."

"When you put it that way Watergate does have its role in American life," I admitted.

"SHOW ME ANYONE who enjoys reading about the energy crisis. Produce one soul who gets pleasure out of seeing photographs of long lines of cars at gas stations. Find me a person who gets any pleasure out of watching administration officials give daily conflicting stories on the oil situation in the country."

"I don't know of anybody," I admitted.

"When John Chancellor leads his program with a story that the cost of living went up another 5 per cent the country goes into the dumps. But when he starts the show by revealing the president has refused to turn over tapes and papers to special prosecutor Jaworski, everybody cheers up and relaxes."

"I WONDER WHY Alsop and Ford don't appreciate the psychological value of Watergate," I said.

"I can't analyze people I haven't examined personally," Dr. Siegfreed replied. "But I do know that the biggest mistake this country could make would be to put Watergate behind them. As long as we can produce new evidence concerning the coverup and high administration involvement, Americans will survive secure in the knowledge that the news can't be all bad."

Spiro Agnew has lost his job and his Secret Service guards; next they'll be wanting to take away his dictionary.

At last the White House has found a minority nobody can accuse it of mistreating — the people who believe Nixon has put the economy in good shape.

Lack Of Identifiable Enemy Induces Turn To Supernatural

There is, of course, no direct connection between the present "detente" in Soviet-American relations and the remarkable (and in this opinion regrettable) success of a horror film called "The Exorcist." And yet to any student of history it is not surprising that in these times of international relaxation a thing like this suddenly becomes popular. It has happened before.

The period following World War I was marked in the United States by three types of emotional outbursts which have had their parallels in the U.S. since World War II.

First was the Communist "witch hunt" set off almost immediately after World War I by Atty. Gen. A. Mitchell Palmer. The McCarthy "witch hunt" of 1949-1950 almost precisely repeated the emotionalism, the unfairness, and the lawlessness of the Palmer one. Second was a revival of intense political partisanship. Third was a wave of horror films often with presumed supernatural undertones.

A WAR, particularly a large and long one, tends to absorb all emotions and concentrate them on the outcome of the war. The end of war releases those emotions to seek other and often most unfortunate outlets. This is precisely the reason why dictatorships have been known to invent false reasons for war scares and sometimes even to launch real wars. The "foreign enemy" is a mighty unifier at home, whether the enemy be real or false.

The U.S. is just beginning to emerge now from the longest period of sustained contest against foreign enemies in its entire history. It began thinking of Hitler and Naziism as the enemy —40 years ago. And it began 40 years ago to arm against that foreign enemy. Victory over Hitler and Tojo was scarcely achieved before that foreign enemy was replaced in American consciousness by a sense of menace in Soviet imperialism and in Communism.

The "cold war" was well under way by 1947. The gap between the Fascist enemy and the Communist enemy was less than two years. Then came the Korean War, then another brief respite, and then the Vietnam War. The U.S. has been emotionally absorbed in handling its foreign enemies for 40 years.

During these 40 years, war of either hot or cold variety sufficed for horror and a sense of a menacing evil. Nobody needed anything imaginary.

IT IS ONE of the more curious and atavistic of human traits to think up an imagined form of menace when no actual one happens to be around. The "Exorcist" film is based on the theory of the power of evil to enter into man's mind and control his actions. It is as old as time. The Bible provides several stories of witches and witchcraft — and of exorcism. There was the witch of Endor and the transfer of evil spirits to the Gadarene swine.

We cannot know how long the present sense of international relaxation will prevail. But we can know from history that so long as it does prevail there is likely to be more intense political partisanship than there was during the days of war and of a sense of foreign menace. We can also be fairly sure that film makers will exploit, as much as public opinion will permit, the human inclination in peacetime to indulge in imaginary menaces.

The only compensation is that it is evidence of a general sense of relaxation about foreign affairs.

STROUT IN WASHINGTON

National Rifle Association Vs. YWCA And Ghost Of Carrie

By RICHARD L. STROUT

WASHINGTON — One summer long ago my father gave me and my brother a wonderful 22-caliber Stevens single-shot rifle. We looked at each other happily. We were all men together. It was a unifying and innocent rite. It did nobody harm except perhaps some chipmunks. I have always remembered it tenderly. But many years later I wonder: Is there a lesson here about gun control; is there a connection between America's unique murder rate and masculine chauvinism? By an odd mental association I think of Carrie Nation and her anti-saloon hatchet.

The facts are well known. The United States alone among great nations permits the manufacture, importation, distribution, and sale of private firearms with very little restriction, and simultaneously sees an extraordinary crime rate. Europeans, Japanese, other visitors, gasp in disbelief. It is perhaps the single most difficult thing, in our culture, to understand.

Violent crime is so low in London that the bobbies don't carry firearms. I have a folder filled with statistics. The best recent discussion is by Rep. Michael J. Harrington, "The Politics of Gun Control," in the Nation, Jan. 12.

THERE ARE ABOUT as many handgun murders in New York in a night as in Tokyo in a year. Statistics show that a gun purchased to protect a home against an intruder is six times more likely to kill a member of the family or a friend. In 1938 Gallup showed 84 per cent wanted firearms registration and in eight polls since, between 1959 and 1972, those in favor never dropped below 68 per cent.

And yet we don't have registration. Congress won't let us, the majority, have what we want. Why? President Nixon in his 22,000-word 'State of the Union' address urged the nation to fight crime by restoring capital punishment, but he did not mention gun control. Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell opposed gun control. Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe last month told a group of reporters, "I have little confidence in trying to rid the country of guns." He called it an "idealistic dream."

WHEN A MURDER is committed the agony often falls heaviest on women. The men simply get shot: The sisters, wives, mothers, have to live with it.

A couple of congressmen now nearly every day insert instances of gun murders in the Congressional Record; Representative Harrington is up to No. 42; Jonathan B. Bingham, D-N.Y., is up to 14. They are harrowing stories. Just the other day here in Washington the papers showed pictures of a mother and a father waiting at the hospital: In a minor scuffle at a high school, shots suddenly rang out; one boy killed, another paralyzed. Nice families and all that. "Ban the handgun" is the Harrington-Bingham slogan.

But it isn't as easy as that. There are 21 million hunters in America, according to their spokesman, the powerful National Rifle Association. They are mostly men, of course. Man has always been the hunter, the provider. Well and good. The gun is a kind of symbol, a symbol of masculinity. In the American city ghetto it is also a symbol — of toughness, virility, and dominance.

These 21 million hunters are decent and law-abiding. They are part of the 60 million American households that have guns. But they are fearful that a registration program would end their sport.

THE NATIONAL RIFLE Association does much to support their intransigence, Representative Harrington says. It is a powerful lobby — a full-time staff of 250, communication with 11,500 affiliated clubs, a big downtown Washington office building, annual budget of $8 million, assets of $19 million. It can unleash a blizzard of protest against almost any gun law overnight in a Congress that is 95 per cent male. No wonder Mr. Nixon prefers to advocate the death penalty to fight crime rather than the politically hazardous gun control.

How do women feel? I think of Carrie Nation and her hatchet. The saloons were a menace, she felt. They were tied to politics, corruption, yes — and to errant sons and husbands. She was pretty funny, no doubt. But never underestimate the power of an angry woman.

Not long ago the YWCA took a position for gun control. The Sportsmen's Alliance of Michigan was noted in the American Rifleman (the organ of the NRA) as approving a boycott of community drives if the YWCA participated. "Say Goodbye to The Y?" was the title of the Rifleman's editorial.

Where is woman's lib in this? Maybe they could save men from themselves. Those male hunters can have their guns. But why not register and license them like the equally lethal motorcar? Male chauvinists have failed. Page Carrie.

Resurgence Of Nostalgia On Some Campuses Today

By FLORENCE MOUCKLEY
AND KENNETH GEHRET
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

A Monitor survey of U.S. colleges finds that after a prolonged period of turbulence on college campuses the pendulum is swinging back to calmer, more gentle times when tradition and academics held sway.

At more colleges throughout the country, students are buckling down and studying harder.

There is even a nostalgic resurgence of some of the activities of the 1950s. But many college students and officials say that it is not the happy-go-lucky '50s; it is very much a '70s scene.

The atmosphere on college campuses varies widely. At some Midwest and Western schools interest in fraternities and sororities is thriving. But at many Northeastern and Eastern colleges, students with an interest in Greek letter organizations are still in the minority.

Reasons advanced for the return to a quieter campus scene and more traditional events range from the realities of the job market to an upsurge of nostalgia within American society.

College students and officials have mixed opinions as to why the changes have occurred, how deep they cut or what they mean.

A Stanford University official summarized the "drift" (not a movement) back to some traditions and habits of the '50s as indicative of a "restored sense of humor." And at the same time, he says, the political crucible of the '60s has cooled. It has beocme a sort of "personal cleansing time."

A Stanford student says that the "drift" back to big parties, dances where people touch, and interest in old movies (and new movies about the 1950s: "American Graffiti") reflect perhaps a "disillusionment" with the future.

"The energy crisis, a corrupt national government, and rising prices . . . so why not have some fun while you are here?"

Richard Armitage, vice-president for student services of Ohio State University does not see apathy. Students, he says, are sobered by Watergate; concerned about jobs, the drug problem. He sees a return to religion, a search for answers. Students want to find roots and are searching in nostalgia, in religion, and in jobs.

Some students take a hard view of their peers for not taking part in political or social activism.

"They're studying harder so that they can get into law school, med school, business school so that they can make money," complains Diane Scattergood, an English major at Tufts University.

"In the '60s everybody thought we had the right idea and we could change things. All that happened was we got thrown into jail and trampled on. Now they've decided to beat the system by ripping it off for all they can. They don't care what happens to the people around them."

Studying harder to get high grades so that they can get good jobs in a tight employment market.

More involved in local political and community work rather than protesting or demonstrating en masse.

Listening more to the "other" point of view.

Library usage at the University of California at Davis is up 30 per cent from recent years. Book circulation is up 5.6 per cent at Berkeley from last year. At Stanford, black students are shifting career goals from the academics to professional fields such as law and medicine.

Also, at Stanford more than 50 per cent of all students are working in some kind of job to help pay their way. This means, says a Stanford official, that students are more diligent in their studies.

Future security is a major concern, according to Willard G. Wyman, dean of students at Colby College in Maine. He, too, ties students' increased attention to assignments and class performance to a new focus on professional careers. "The reasons for that interest no longer appear to have the altruistic ring they had in the '60s," he comments.

Brian Foss, president of the Student Confederation at American University in Washington, D.C., considers this concern with "job" and "self" and "future" also reflected in choice of spare-time work and activity on and off campus: "Students have become somewhat selfish; they've turned inward.

Other observers disagree with this view. They say after the mass protests and demonstrations of the '60s, students realized that confrontation was ineffective, and now many are determined to work within the system.

"Many people have learned," says one student, "that you don't get $1 million in grants by hollering and screaming — but by lobbying the right people."

Vice-Chancellor Norman Miller of UCLA says, "The idealism is still there. But the pattern is nonviolent." Strong concern from the "common man" continues among students, says Dean Miller.

A Reflector Of Consumer Behaviors

By LUCIA MOUAT

WASHINGTON — "How many of you wear seat belts?"

A sheepish chuckle swept through the audience. Only about one-third of those present raised their hands.

Lewis A. Engman, Federal Trade Commission chairman, whose agency is charged with policing unfair and deceptive advertising, was for the moment playing devil's advocate.

With a question he was trying to show precisely why car advertisements put no more stress than they do on safety and the competitive advantage one manufacturer's seat belt might have over another's.

The message was simple: Safety hasn't sold cars, and selling is what advertising is all about. As long as color, style, and power impel consumers to buy, that is what advertisers will stress.

The occasion was a panel discussion at the annual consumer conference of the National Consumer Information Center on "Can Advertising Be Made More Educational?"

The speakers, including Stanley Cohen, Washington editor of Advertising Age; Howard Bell, president of the American Advertising Federation, and Douglass Alligood, director of corporate advertising of the Radio Corporation of America, as well as Engman, concluded that the answer was "yes," but that a genuine change in consumer behavior and interests would have to lead the way.

People may complain that the annual $23 billion worth of advertising is exploitive. It promises things it cannot possibly deliver. Yet the cold facts are that most such ads directly accomplish their purpose: generating sales.

Cohen says he often has viewed nightly TV commercials "with despair" and wishes that "some regulator agency would sweep them from the air." Yet, he adds, "I'm also acutely aware that they wouldn't be there at all if people weren't responding."

Bell cited the safety stress of one car manufacturer's advertising in the mid-1950s as "the most colossal failure of any advertising campaign ever conducted."

Asked, however, how advertisers could, with conscience, exploit consumers with empty promises, creating in them desire to buy things they do not necessarily need. Bell countered that advertising is as much a reflection of society and values as a shaper of them. He argued that advertising is frequently attacked just because it happens to be the most "visible" medium.

"We all like to think of ourselves (as ads portray us) as dashing and debonair," he added, "even though we have to sometimes come back to reality."

Even so, the consensus of the panel was that somehow advertising must be made more informational than it now is.

Engman termed it essential if advertising is to retain "any credibility at all." He cited a Harris Poll taken a little over a year ago in which consumer confidence in advertising had slipped to an all-time low of 12 per cent.

The panel agreed that if consumers want change they've got to demand it and demonstrate to business that information can pay off in increased sales.

"It won't be easy, and it won't come until business learns that the public won't respond to the kind of appeals that are an insult to human dignity," said Cohen.

Actually, forward strides have been made. Alligood said he thought the consumer movement already has been a "boon" to the advertising business, forcing it to be much more aware of its social responsibilities.

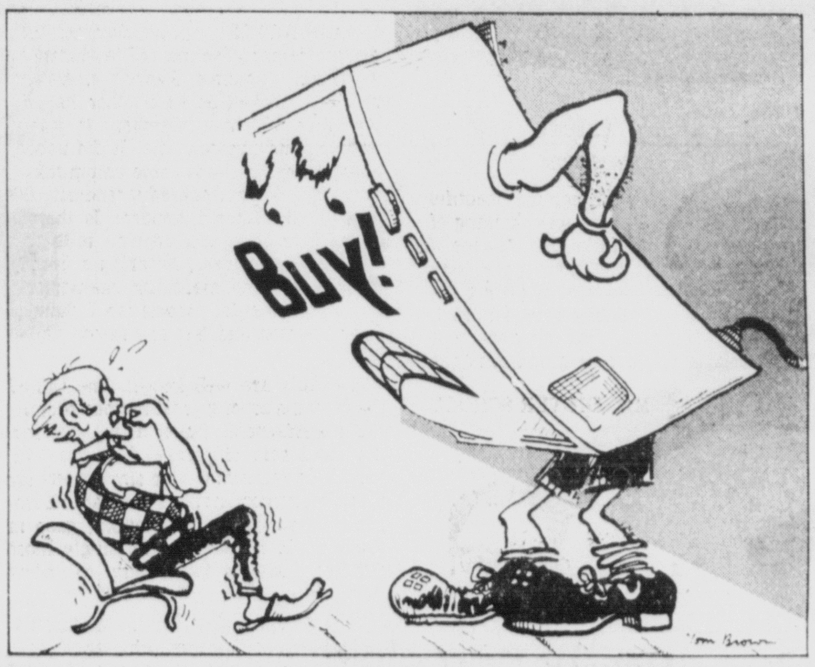

Congress, for its part, has provided a prod for more educational advertising via such laws as the Truth in Lending Act and its recent energy legislation. A recent example of the leverage Capitol Hill can generate was seen in the January petitioning of the FTC by six members of Congress, who urged the urgency to require proof of image-improving claims made in ads by business in the energy and environmental fields.

The FTC has been zeroing in on fragmented and misleading information in ads over the last few years by its ad-substantiation program. This requires companies, in every field from tires to antiperspirants, to be able to back up their claims with proof.

Engman, who says the program has recently been refined and will be improved once again in the spring, also predicts that the FTC will become more active in setting higher standards for affirmative disclosure in advertising.

Self-regulation by industry also is playing a stronger role than ever in making ads more informative. The National Advertising Review Board and its local offshoots have drafted guidelines for children's ads, for instance, and have recently come down hard on comparative advertising.

THIS WEEK In The World

Combined AP and UPI

The Hearst Corp. has pledged that $4 million will be added to an existing $2 million food giveaway if Patricia Hearst is freed unharmed by her terrorist kidnapers.

Thousands lined up to receive the terrorist-demanded food in four cities, and a disturbance broke out at the Oakland food outlet where 5,000 persons gathered as the announcement came yesterday.

A new ultimatum, delivered in a 20-minute tape recording Thursday, gave Hearst a save-her-life order to put up at least $4 million more or see his daughter held hostage indefinitely for two members of the terrorist sect charged with murder.

Charles Gould, publisher of the San Francisco Examiner, told a news conference at the Hearst home:

"The Hearst Corp. is prepared to contribute to People in Need a total of $4 million for a food distribution program for the poor and the needy provided Patricia Hearst is released unharmed. No other funds will be committed by the corporation or foundation under any circumstances."

Around The World, Around The Clock:

COPENHAGEN — Soviet writer Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn, who was stripped of his citizenship and expelled by Soviet authorities Feb. 13, was reported to be thinking of settling with his family on a quiet farm in Norway.

The writer arrived here yesterday and later in the day boarded a ferry for an overnight trip to Oslo.

NEW YORK — The trial of President Nixon's former Cabinet officers, John N. Mitchell and Maurice Stans began Tuesday.

At the end of the week the former attorney general and commerce secretary were still in the jury-selection phase.

WASHINGTON — Energy chief William E. Simon told seven state governors Thursday his office was revising the gasoline allocation formula to make sure each state gets a fair share of fuel.

The Federal Energy Office also is reportedly considering raising retail gasoline prices and easing its recent ban against service stations giving preferential treatment to their regular customers.

Genesis Gallery: First Step Toward A Cultural Center

Upstairs over a woman's apparel store in the heart of downtown Mill Valley, corner of Throckmorton and Miller avenues, there functions "Marin County's second largest fine arts gallery."

The supporting Mill Valley Arts Guild makes the claim that its Genesis Gallery at 2 Miller Avenue is surpassed in size in Marin only by the Marin Society of Artists' Frances Young Gallery in the Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross, on two bases:

On the number of paintings shown, as the gallery over the Casual Corner women's clothing store stages a year-long series of one-month shows, displaying 50 or more works of art at a time, and spotlighting the talents of three selected Guild members in each exhibit.

And on a numerical basis of gallery membership. The Mill Valley Arts Guild, started in 1970, now claims more than 100 members, with a considerable overlapping with the Marin Society of Artists.

AT FIRST RESTRICTED to Mill Valley artists, the Guild membership has since been opened up to all of Southern Marin, and even includes some Central Marin representation.

In fact, the current president, Garnet Featherstone, is a Lucas Valley resident with his business in San Rafael's Northgate area.

From the standpoint of space, too, the Genesis Gallery can present some impressive statistics. The upstairs quarters rented for the gallery contain some 2,500 square feet of floor space.

IT WAS ONCE the second floor portion of the old Mayer's Department Store, but was unused by the present ground floor occupant, Casual Corners.

Thus, when Guild officers, searching for a site for a fine arts gallery in Mill Valley, approached the building's owner, Larry Mayer, he agreed to make the upstairs space available to them at what the artists consider "a quite nominal rental for that amount of space."

Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival people joined Arts Guild members in extensive improvements, prior to the opening of the new gallery. A big existing plus was the good fluorescent lighting.

THE PERSON WHO led the search, and who was mainly responsible for the organization of the Mill Valley Arts Guild in 1970, is Lyman Emerson, a man who looms large physically and actively as well in California, Marin, Southern Marin and Mill Valley cultural affairs.

Emerson, still a Mill Valley Art Commission member, was then that city body's chairman.

The Mill Valley Art Guild he describes as a "spin-off" from the Mill Valley Art Commission "because we were finding it very difficult for a city to raise public funding for cultural purposes — particularly capital outlay."

THE GUILD, THEN, was organized and incorporated as a non-profit corporation for the purpose, according to Emerson, "of raising and dispersing funds for the creation of an art center in Mill Valley."

Since then, Emerson adds, that purpose has been broadened to the hope for an art and cultural center that would serve all of Southern Marin.

How successful has the Guild been in the attainment of that goal?

"Not very," Emerson admits. "At least not so far as our main objective is concerned."

BUT IN ITS successful operation of the Genesis Gallery, he feels, the Guild has made a first step of progress toward the larger goal, and has also made a substantial contribution toward Mill Valley's cultural enrichment.

The upstairs location, he admits, is far from ideal, somewhat difficult to locate and inconvenient in its accessibility. And because the store is closed, no evening shows or programs are possible.

But still, Genesis Gallery shows draw well, and are favorably received. High standards have been maintained in the selection of the work displayed.

TO GAIN MEMBERSHIP in the Mill Valley Arts Guild, the applicant must obtain the approval of a screening committee. And he or she must agree to contribute some time each month to the staffing of the Genesis Gallery as a "gallery-sitter" in order to exhibit.

An administrator is in charge of the scheduling of the volunteers at the gallery, which is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Sundays. Bob Pepper recently resigned that office, and Mrs. Fred Kraemer is currently acting administrator.

Funds for rental and other gallery expenses come from members' dues, commissions from painting sales and from rental fees.

"WE HAVE ALWAYS been in the black," says Emerson proudly of the Guild and its gallery.

Within the Guild all the fine arts and crafts disciplines — painters, weavers, sculptors, etc. — are represented, except for music and dance.

A five-member board of directors include two representatives of the Mill Valley Art Commission, presently Commission Chairman Glenn Peterson and Emerson, and a controlling three members from the general Guild membership.

COMING UP, ON March 3, will be a major Mill Valley Arts Guild benefit event. Bob Cousineau and his big band of 20 pieces will present a concert of the music of the Swing Era at Park School in Mill Valley, beginning at 2 p.m.

Proceeds will go into the Guild coffers to further its programs.

For while "founding father" Lyman Emerson is pleased with the way Genesis Gallery has worked out, "all conditions and circumstances considered," he and Arts Guild leaders have not abandoned their larger and more ambitious vision of a cultural center for all of Southern Marin.

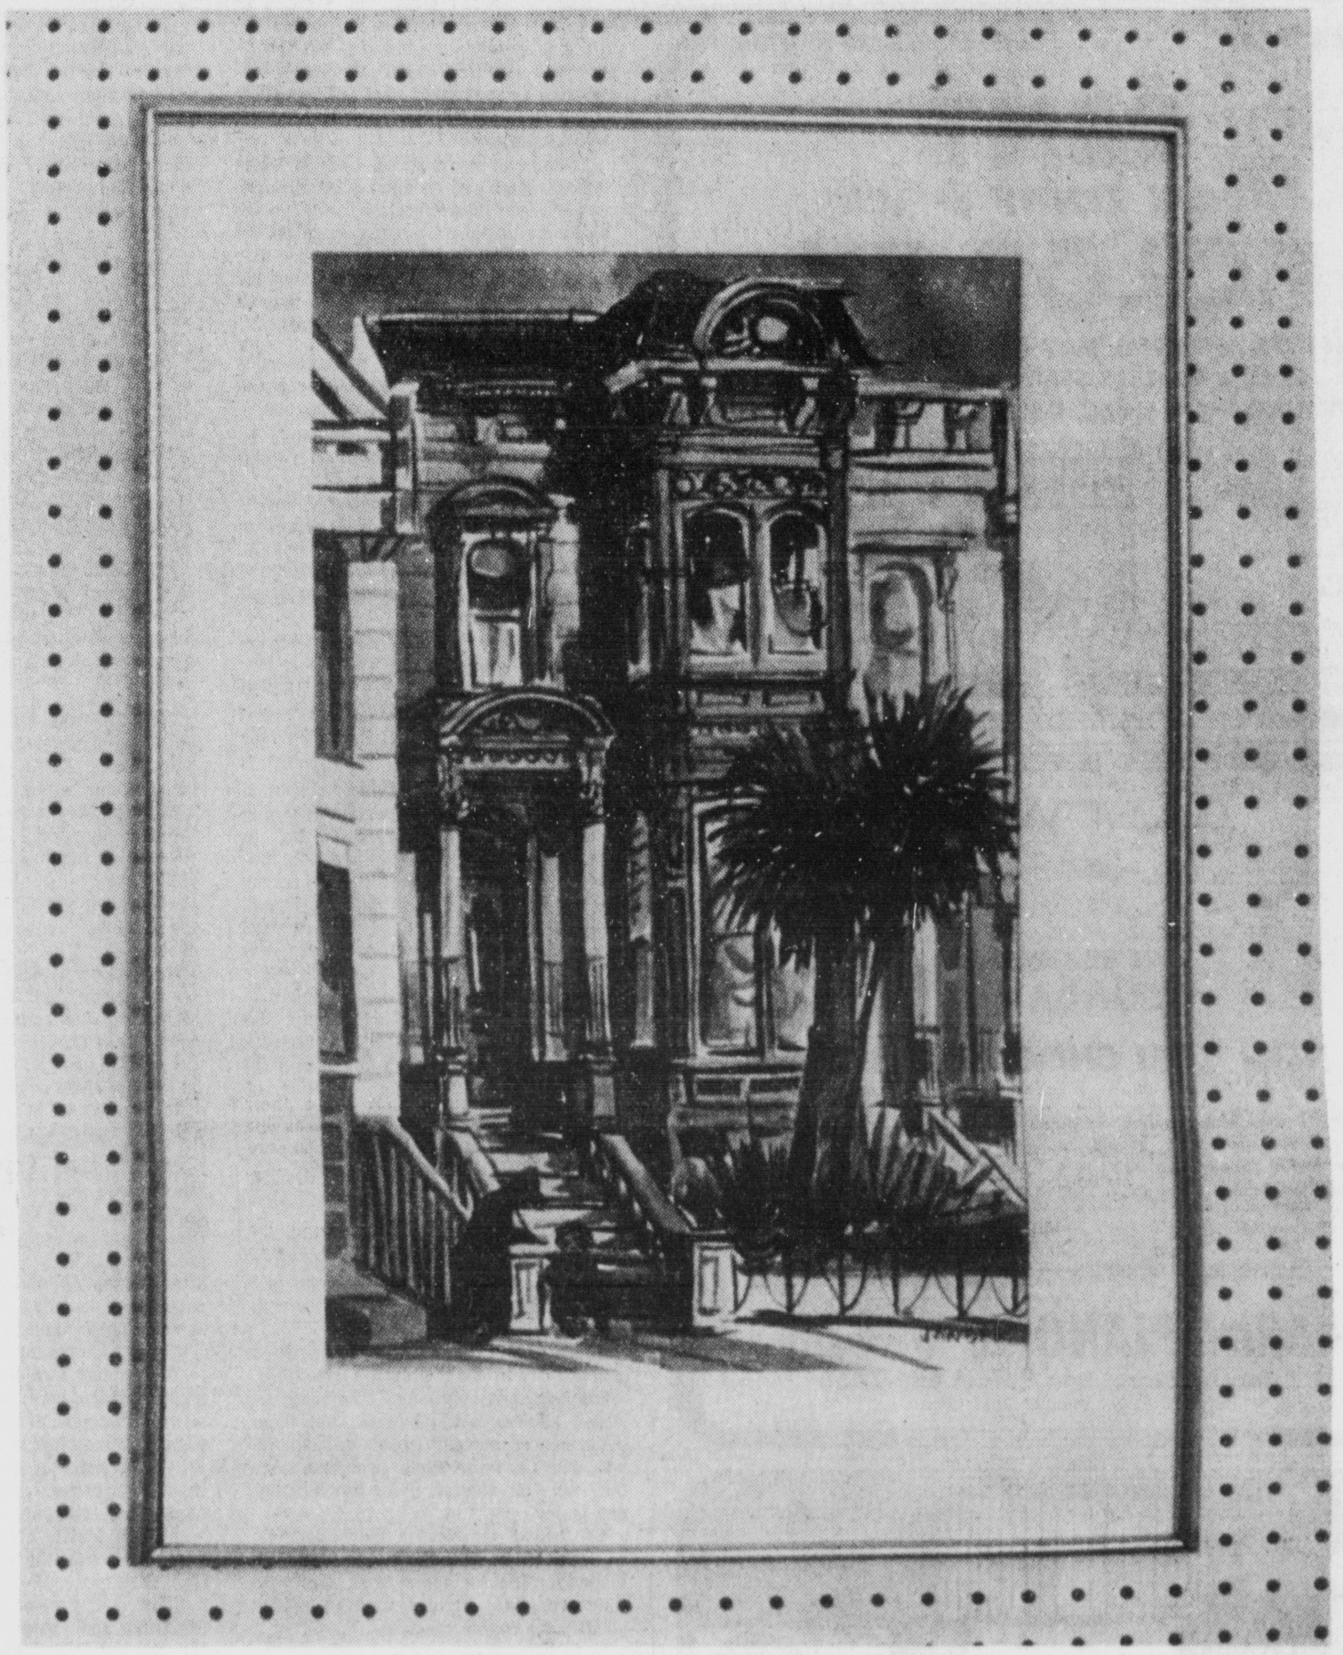

Emerson is a semi-retired advertising photographer who now devotes his time very largely to the promotion of cultural programs.

HE IS THE immediate past president of the Alliance of California Arts Councils Inc., a member of the board of directors of the Sausalito Art Association and served two terms as chairman of the Mill Valley Arts Commission.

Most recently, he took the lead in the

"I think it has worked out quite well," says Lyman Emerson of the Mill Valley Arts Guild and its Genesis Gallery. "An awful lot of people have done an awful lot of work, and accomplished much, while working with very little in the way of money or resources."

THE WATERCOLOR PAINTING by Gladys Janoff of Mill Valley of an old San Francisco Victorian home is part of the current show at the Genesis Gallery, 2 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley. The gallery is sponsored by the Mill Valley Arts Guild, founded in 1970 to foster the arts in Mill Valley, and holds a year-long series of one-month shows of members' works. Mrs. Janoff, also a member of the Marin Society of Artists and the Marin County Watercolor Society, is a former commercial fashion artist, having been with the Emporium for 20 years.

Through Tumbling, Children Learn Marvelous Things Human Body Can Do

By DON KEOWN

It is a rare and satisfying experience to watch a child discover the marvelous things his or her body can do, when put to the test, says 21-year-old Carl Clement of Terra Linda.

And it's an experience he enjoys daily as tumbling instructor for the Marin School of Self Defense, 1001 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur.

As such, Clement introduces youngsters, ages 3 to 12 ("and a few 2½-year-olds sneak in"), to the intricacies of tumbling.

Some are private students at the school. But most come into the program through ties the school has developed with various city recreation departments in Marin and Southern Sonoma counties. The school now conducts such classes in Belvedere, Tiburon, Strawberry, Mill Valley, San Rafael, Novato, Petaluma and Larkspur.

IT BEGAN IN 1971 when Del Esposti and Scott Montgomery of the self defense school decided to initiate two after-school tumbling classes of a half hour per week each.

This necessitated an instructor. And Montgomery and Esposti looked to Terra Linda High School, which had pioneered in boys' gymnastics in Marin and which was well known for its strong program.

Terra Linda High School coach Hank Yamagata recommended young Carl Clement from among his athletes, and the latter's "career" as a tumbling teacher began.

SINCE THEN, tumbling at Marin School of Self Defense has grown steadily.

Clement now puts in as many hours, six days a week, as his studies at College of Marin will permit. And he has the assistance of Mark Giandrea, George Russell and Montgomery in conducting the flourishing tumbling program.

There was, Clement says, a deluge of students immediately after the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich.

"SEEING THE almost unbelievable things those splendid gymnasts could do just ignited a blaze of interest in the sport," Clement says.

And, he adds, that high level of enthusiasm and activity has been maintained.

The interest, he adds, is highest among the girls, which is understandable "because boys have so many other sports and interests to claim their energy and attention."

FURTHERMORE, Clement adds, tumbling is one activity in which girls, at least up to a certain age, can actually outdo the boys. No need here for a Billy Jean King vs. Bobby Riggs mismatch.

"Seeing the almost unbelievable things those splendid gymnasts could do in the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich just ignited a blaze of interest in the sport," says young tumbling teacher Carl Clement.

Girls can contest the boys on an equal footing and out-perform them.

"While there are exceptions," Clement says, "I have found generally that girls up to age 12 are more limber than boys, and will advance faster in tumbling. Then, too, they are more exposed to gymnastics because it is a bigger sport, at least around here, for girls than it is for boys. And that generates dedication and enthusiasm."

At about age 12, Clement adds, the boys' strength and coordination begin to tell, and they start to catch up with and surpass the girls in the stunts they can perform.

CLEMENT SAYS that about 90 per cent of his young students are girls.

He does not regard age 3, or even 2½, as too young for the child to start enjoying tumbling.

And the child who begins then will often be a whiz at age 5 or 6. "In fact," says Clement, "some of my 5 and 6-year-olds are better than most 12-year-olds."

This, he adds, is because the body begins to lose some of its flexibility after age 6 or 7.

THAT LOSS, he adds, can be minimized and delayed by a regimen of tumbling and other exercise.

All important in the teaching of tumbling, Clement says, is the confidence of the pupil in the instructor.

"They must know that you won't allow them to over-reach themselves or to over-do it," he says, "and that you will

A MARIN PROFILE

Robert Sebring Of San Rafael Is Engineer, Artist And Plane Builder

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Most people are content to do one thing really well, but Robert M. Sebring excells in at least three — engineer for exotic plastics that went to the moon, builder of flying replicas of World War I fighters, and artist.

The "Saturday ritual" of working on his latest flying machine at Sonoma Sky Park is purely for pleasure, but the 55-year-old San Rafael man's drawings have become so successful that he is about to taper off as a plastics engineer and get into art full-time.

"Being an engineer, I liked drafting and drawing," he recalled of his first pen and ink drawings almost 30 years ago. He did some designs for commercial plastic products, but it was not until his wife asked him to do some sketches for their apartment about five years ago that he got the idea of doing it professionally.

NOW HIS WIFE, Ellen, manages sales that range throughout the Bay Area and Central Valley. His work includes prints, postcards and note paper. Subjects include the Golden Gate Bridge, Victorian houses and cable cars.

He also has done a painfully detailed overhead drawing of downtown San Francisco, showing virtually every building. The work, which took a year, will be the centerpiece of a tourist guide to be issued in five languages.

Sebring got an early start using his hands working at crafts with his father, whom he said "was always building things." The Depression brought the family from Sebring's native Willow Spring, Mo., to Los Angeles.

GRADUATING FROM high school in 1937, Sebring went into special training in plastics "right at the very beginning" of the industry. He joined a little firm that made novelties and shoe display racks for department stores until World War II brought a sudden need for plastics engineers to design aircraft canopies, windows and noses.

Sebring unexpectly found himself in a burgeoning field, traveling around the nation's aircraft plants to help work out a host of problems. He even taught plastics engineering at California Institute of Technology during the war, although he never got a college degree himself.

The rapidly developing field also had to overcome complex problems of window attachments in pressurized aircraft flying at high altitudes.

"IF THE THING wasn't designed properly," he said, "the pressure could just blow it right out, and then they were in deep trouble."

After the war, he and a brother-in-law started their own plastics business, "making almost anything." The outbreak of the Korean War, however, put them back in the aircraft window business, now with far more exotic problems since they were for aircraft flying much higher and faster.

The end of the Korean War saw them go into the missile business as subcontractors. Most of their work was with solid propellant engines, making molded plastics for engine cases.

THE PLASTICS materials ablate, burning away as the fire comes out, leaving intact the walls of the engine itself.

They also "had a lot to do with the moldings and parts that went into the very first moon shot," Sebring said, and made heat shields for re-entry capsules.

He did not know if the company's products ever landed on the moon, saying, "A lot of times we built things when we didn't know what we were building them for."

Twenty-five years in Los Angeles convinced Sebring to try Florida, where he started a small firm in Sarasota making shower doors and room dividers. He and his wife, however, did not like the heat and humidity, so he next landed in Wilmington, N.C., as vice president of a company formed to market a French sport airplane in the U.S.

THE COMPANY got the right to produce the airplane, the Jodel, but in about three years went broke before it could untangle the snarl of government red tape to convert the airplane to U.S. standards. It was a sad end to a dream, he said, but it gave him his first experience in building an airplane — at least one he was willing to fly.

Beside working with others to build a Jodel in the factory, he also started work at home on his first replica, an SE 5 (Scout Experimental No. 5), a World War I British fighter.

Sebring's very first airplane had been a flying wing he designed and built for himself in 1949, something he did "just for my own amazement. With that wing, it was amazement. It wasn't amusement at all."

THE 21-FOOT WING was powered by an 18-horsepower target drone engine, and quickly hit 70 miles an hour as it lifted off the runway.

But Sebring never got it higher than three or four feet: "I was too scared to take it around the pattern. It was very tricky, and just scared me to death everytime it got off of the ground. Just the slightest movement and it would dart."

His second home-built aircraft was to be a success, but was incomplete when he and his wife moved about 10 years ago from North Carolina to Marin. The solution was to hook its tailwheel to their car and tow it cross country as a trailer.

At 45 miles an hour, the trip took quite a while.

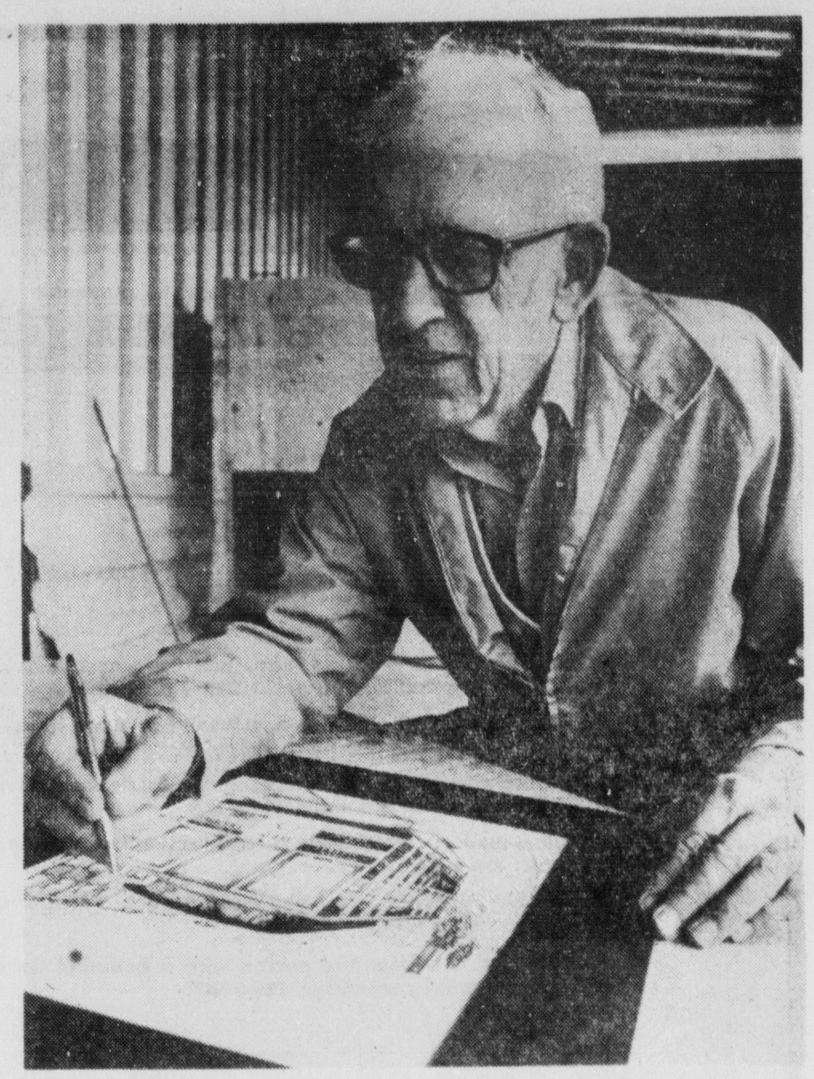

ABOUT TWO YEARS after it was started, the four-fifths-scale replica was completed at Schelville and ready for flight. That the 40-horsepower engine was not up to its task was clear only moments after it took off. It did not have enough pep to make a turn back to the airport, so Sebring had to land in a nearby field.

Rather than rip through a fence, he had to nose the airplane over. With its undercarriage bent, the craft had to be returned somewhat ignominously to the hangar in the back of a pickup.

It took him for years for improvements, including upping power to 90 horses and replacing its wooden innards with high tensile strength steel tubing, "before it flew the way I wanted it to fly," Sebring recalled. But fly it did.

"That's all part of the fun of it — the designing and the perfection of building the machine," he said.

THE ORIGINAL version had 200 horses, but was burdened with heavy armament, ammunition and guns. Sebring's trophy winner, familiar to spectators at dozens of air shows, including the ones at Hamilton Air Field Base, sported only a lightweight replica of a machine gun atop its upper wing.

ROBERT M. SEBRING the artist does pen and ink sketches of exquisite detail that reflect his background in engineering, designing and drafting. His work has been reproduced on postcards and notepaper, and as prints, and will illustrate a new San Francisco guidebook. But in addition to Robert Sebring the artist and Robert Sebring the engineer, there is also Robert Sebring, the hobbyist who builds replicas of World War I aircraft.

Eager to start something new, Sebring sold his SE 5 last August to an airline pilot in Texas. It went for $6,500, which he admitted "really was a little cheap."

His flight down in the single-seater took almost 29 hours in the air. The trip took four and a half days there, but just four hours back home.

WORK BEGAN almost immediately on his current project, a 1914 Fokker E-3, a German fighter. Sebring starts out with nothing more than drawings and photographs of his airplanes, doing all the engineering on his own intuition and experience.

"The creativeness is really more interesting to me than the actual flying," says Robert M. Sebring of the flying replicas of World War I airplanes that he builds. After his creation is completed and flies, "that sort of ends the fun of the thing, and I want to get back into something else and start all over again."

Changes from the original are kept to a minimum, so it takes a sharp eye to notice differences. A steerable tail wheel replaces the original skid — so he won't need a man on each wing just to guide him to and from the runway.

Motorcycles wheels with drum brakes replace the brakeless originals. And rubber pads, instead of rubber bands, help absorb landing shocks.

MODERN POWER plants, of course, are far more reliable than the originals. Fabrics covering the fuselage and wings of replicas are made of durable synthetics instead of muslin.

Sebring uses his engineering in simulating parts as well as construction. The cowl of the Fokker will be fiberglass worked to simulate the rotary finish of the original brushed aluminum.

By today's standards, the original's top speed of 87.5 miles an hour sounds tame, but Sebring noted "for its day, it was the top performer, and did an awful lot of damage to the Allies."

THE FOKKER was "an airplane that I have built models of since I was a little kid," Sebring said. He even had a little company that turned out model kits during World War II.

Home builders of planes have an outstanding safety record, he noted. Federal Aviation Administration inspectors check their work twice, just before the fuselage and wings are covered, and when ready for flight. The first flight test is done by the builder himself, a considerable incentive to building carefully.

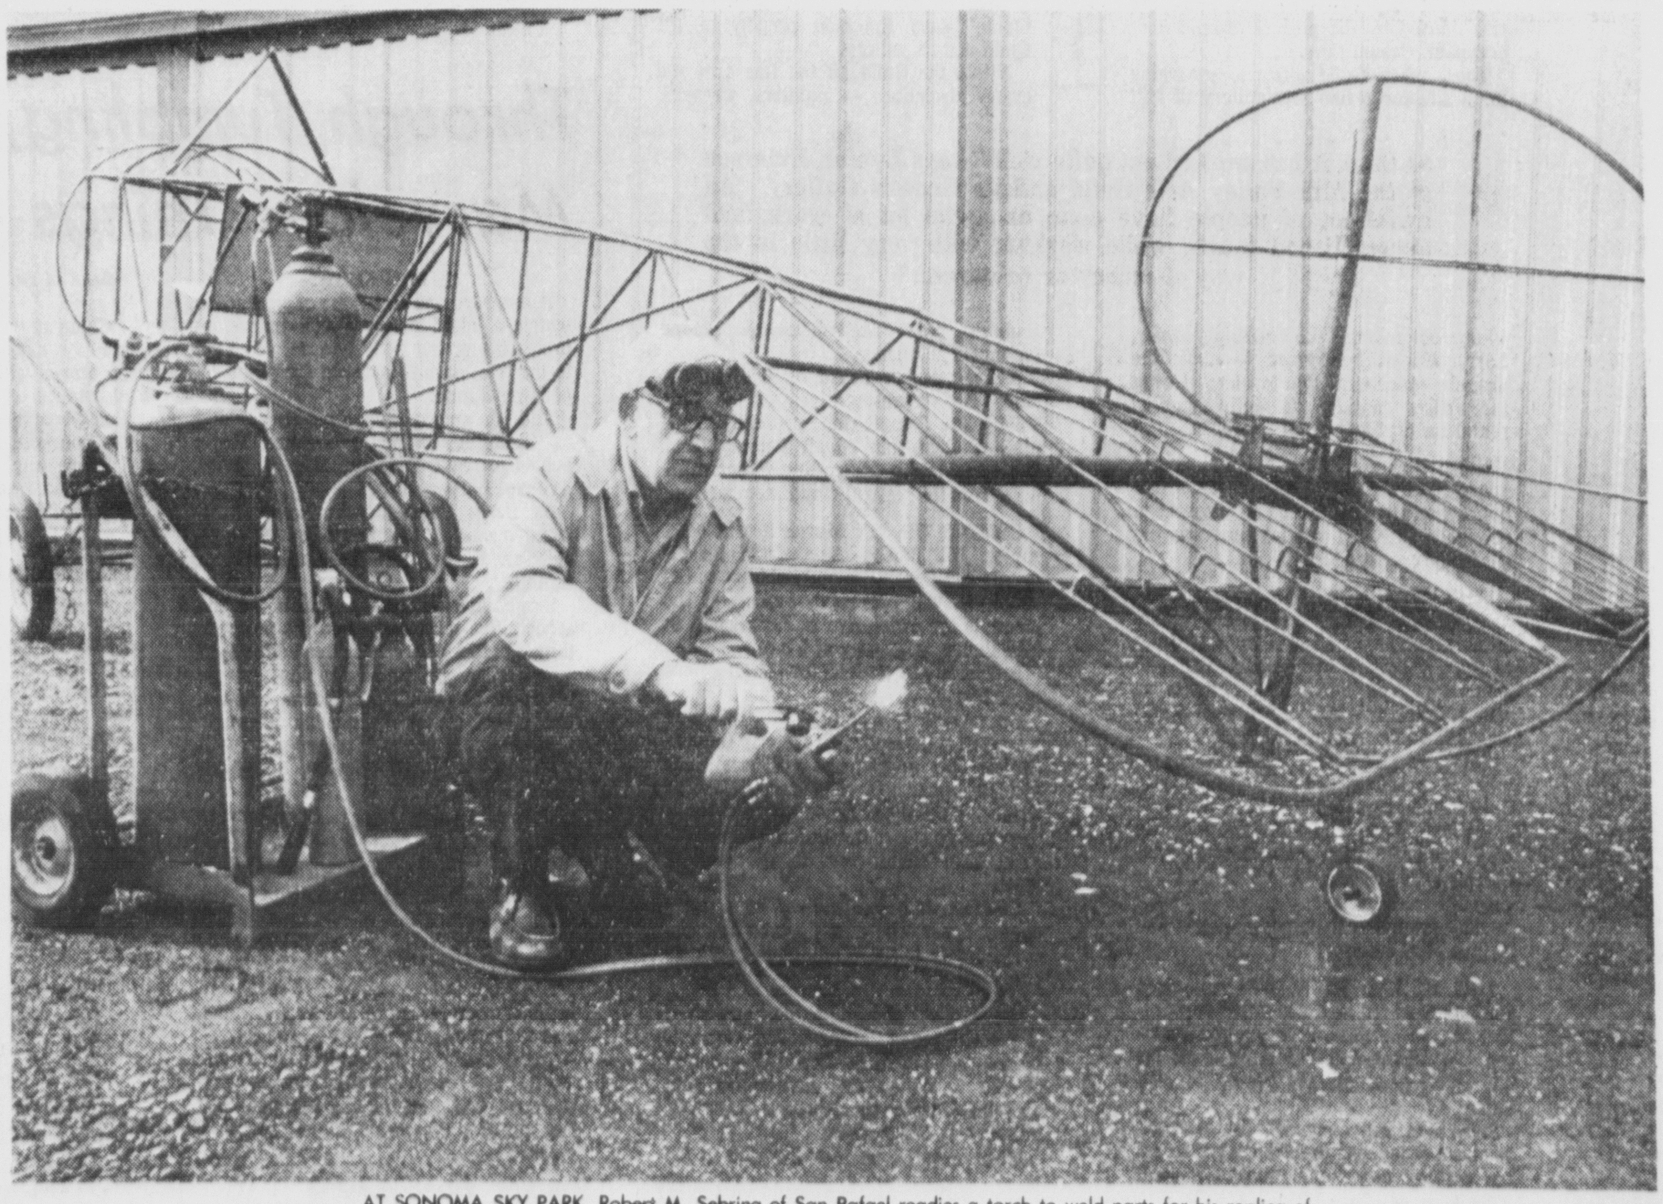

The shortage of gasoline should not affect his hobby, Sebring said, since he uses only about four and a half gallons an hour. The SE 5, for example, flew less than 300 hours in five years.

SEBRING HAS enjoyed flying for 29 years, but loves building the plane first even more. The Fokker will be completed by the end of the year, he predicted, then the two of them will tour air shows for about a year.

"But then it gets to a point where I want to do something new," he said.

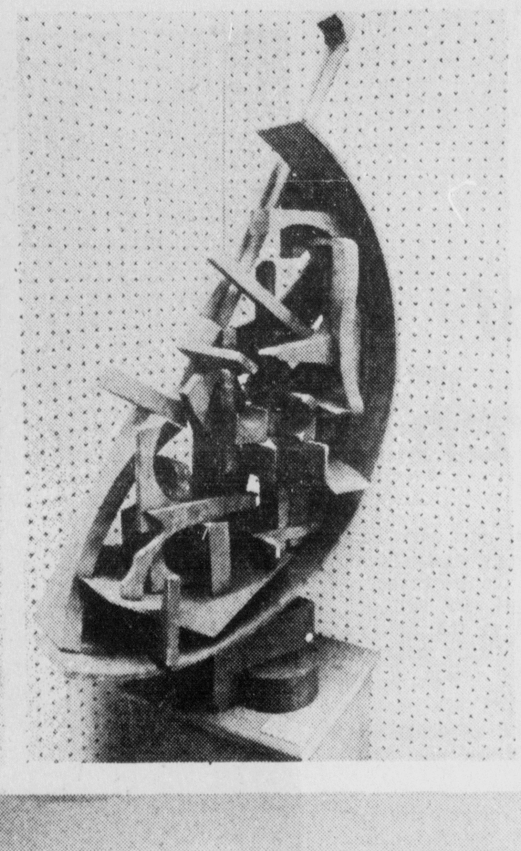

After showing it off, he said, "that sort of ends the fun of the thing, and I want to get back into something else and start all over again. The creativeness is really more interesting to me than the actual flying."

If Sebring had been around earlier, then the Wright brothers might have been second.

AT SONOMA SKY PARK, Robert M. Sebring of San Rafael readies a torch to weld parts for his replica of a World War I German Fokker E-3 fighter plane. Working from photographs and drawings of the original, he completed the fuselage in four months, and he predicts his home-built aircraft will be flying before the end of the year. Earlier, he built a flying replica of the British Scout Experimental No. 5 plane, also of World War I vintage, which he has since sold.

ALL THE ARTS except music and dance are represented in the membership of the Mill Valley Arts Guild. And thus the monthly member shows at its Genesis Gallery, upstairs at 2 Miller Avenue, downtown Mill Valley, present a panorama of the arts. The February display included, left to right across the top of the page, a painting, "Marianna" by Leah Schwartz, a sculpture by Esther Mae Ellner.

organization of the new Marin Community Arts Council with representation from a dozen Southern, Central and West Marin cultural organizations, and was elected its president.

The Council is the outgrowth of a meeting held last March at Dominic's Harbor Restaurant, San Rafael, while Emerson was still president of the Alliance of California Arts Councils Inc.

"I INVITED 40 arts leaders, parks and recreation commissioners, mayors, councilmen, county supervisors and a task force from the Alliance of California Arts Councils to get together that day," Emerson says. "It must have been one of the few times ever that 40 were invited to such a meeting at $5 a throw — and all 40 appeared."

The problem that was faced at that meeting, Emerson says, was that the provisions of state law so restrict California's smaller communities in the expenditure of public funds for cultural purposes that it is difficult if not impossible for them to found and support adequate programs in the arts.

"The only possible answer seemed to be a sharing of resources among neighboring communities," he says.

THUS, AGAIN, Emerson's old idea for an arts center to serve all of Southern Marin surfaces. Or, perhaps better yet, both Southern and Central Marin.

Meanwhile, Emerson, the Mill Valley Arts Guild and those of like mind have been on the watch for a possible site for a center.

"We thought we had found what we wanted in the Black property adjacent to the Old Brown's Store in Mill Valley," he says. "But we couldn't raise the money. The best I could come up with was $135,000 (from a single source), and that wasn't enough."

THE PROPERTY was sold to another buyer, and the price tag is now much higher.

Says Emerson: "We have looked into a number of other possibilities for the use of existing structures, but none has worked out. We even thought about a Hamilton Base building if the military were to pull out. We may be faced with the necessity for constructing our own facilities. And that presents some large finance problems. State and federal monies just aren't there for bricks and mortar. They'll help support arts programs, but not capital construction."

"The only possible answer," says Lyman Emerson to the problem of how the smaller cities can provide adequate cultural facilities and programs for their citizens, "seems to be a sharing of resources among neighboring communities."

One possibility, Emerson says, is the inclusion of a historical museum in one wing of the contemplated center, "since it is considerably easier to fund a museum than an art gallery."

FOR ALL HIS interest in the arts, Emerson doesn't sculpt or paint himself. "I used to be a Sunday painter when I lived in Solvang, before coming to Mill Valley," he says.

Now he devotes most of his time to carrying the ball for improved programs and facilities for the active artists, with some occasional work in the photography from which he is semi-retired after 22 years in that business. His reputation in the photo field is considerable.

Of the Mill Valley Arts Guild and its Genesis Gallery, he says: "I think that it has worked out quite well. An awful lot of people have done an awful lot of work, and accomplished much, while working with very little in the way of money or resources."

UNTIL THAT Mill Valley, or Southern Marin, or even Marin County cultural center dream becomes a reality, Emerson expects the Mill Valley Arts Council under leadership such as that of Garnet Featherstone to continue to play an increasing part in the fostering of the arts in the area.

For instance, he says that he feels the new chamber music series sponsored by the Mill Valley Arts Commission should properly be managed by the non-profit Mill Valley Arts Guild.

"And there are other arts that we should be getting into," he says, "helping to pull the whole thing together."

SOUTHERN MARIN, he points out, is alive and fairly crackling with the electricity of the talents of its hundreds of artists and artisans, accomplished in scores of arts and crafts.

But all too often these gifted people function under the handicap of inadequate quarters in which to work or in which to display the results of their talents for the enjoyment and education of a culturally-hungry public.

That is what Lyman Emerson — and the Mill Valley Arts Council — is out to change.

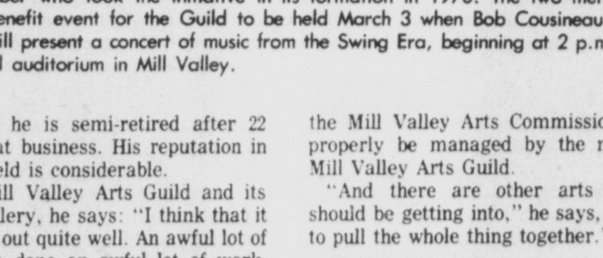

ADMIRING THE WORK of Mill Valley Arts Guild members hanging in the Genesis Gallery are Garnet Featherstone, left, Guild president, and Lyman Emerson, Guild board member who took the initiative in its formation in 1970. The two men met to discuss a benefit event for the Guild to be held March 3 when Bob Cousineau and his big band will present a concert of music from the Swing Era, beginning at 2 p.m. at the Park School auditorium in Mill Valley.

SHOWN IN THE Genesis Gallery are Naomi Hardy, Mill Valley Arts Guild member whose painting is seen on the wall, and Maggie Hazel Rosen, also a Guild member artist and a volunteer "gallery-sitter." To exhibit at the gallery, the artists and craftsmen are required to volunteer their services to staff the gallery which is open daily except Sunday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The shows change each month, and feature the work of three Guild members, but include the work of other member artists and artisans as well.

Tumbling Teacher Clement Enjoys Work With Children

be there to support or catch them when you are supposed to be there."

Clement says he has never had one of his young students suffer an injury of any significance.

"BUT I HAVE had youngsters who have fallen while doing tumbling or gymnastics at school or elsewhere," he says, "and I know that it takes them awhile to regain their confidence. They're afraid they are going to land badly again, and that is understandable. It slows down their progress."

Clement says with special pride that doctors have referred children with coordination problems to his classes or to him for personal tutoring.

Stronger physiques, better coordination, stamina, weight control are some of the advantages for the child that Clement cites as stemming from tumbling.

BUT, HE ADDS, perhaps the most valuable result is the knowledge the child acquires concerning his or her own body. And the realization that he or she can handle his or her body weight in ways the child had previously considered impossible.

Fun, too, is an important attribute of tumbling. "It's exhilarating," says Clement.

And one not insignificant attribute of tumbling as a sport, activity or hobby is that it is very inexpensive.

All that is needed, Clement says, are loose clothing and some padded mats. And the school furnishes the mats.

"WHEN WE GO to one of the recreation centers to conduct a tumbling program for a recreation department, we just load the mats onto the truck and take off," he says. "We are doing that every day."

When working with pre-schoolers, Clement likes to hold the enrollment to eight or 10 boys and girls. "This is because their attention span is quite short, and it is difficult to get to know them and to maintain their interest, if the class is larger," he explains.

But with older children, "classes up to 15, or even 18 members, are all right."

DOES CLEMENT work with his students with the idea of developing competitive gymnasts?

"I don't give much thought to competitive gymnasts until I sight an exceptional 5-year-old," he says. "Then you can't help thinking that if I bring out the best in this boy or girl, then some day, with the help of the super-specialists who coach in gymnastics, he or she might be a champion."

Such a course, Clement admits, would involve many, many hours of hard work and dedication from the youngster.

WHETHER IT would be worth it or not, he says, should be left up to the child. "If he or she likes it that much, and is willing and eager, then I say go ahead."

Yet young Clement has no personal regrets that he did not, himself, get that deeply involved in competitive gymnastics. "If I were an all-out competitor, then I probably never would have had the time to teach tumbling," he says.

Trust in their teacher is all-important to the success of the young tumbling student, says Carl Clement. "They must know that you won't allow them to over-reach themselves or to over-do it. That you will be there to support or catch them when you are supposed to be there."

And that work with youngsters fits perfectly into Carl's plans for the future.

Born in Germany, where his parents were living while his father was in service, Carl Clement 21 years later has very definite career plans.

AT THE COLLEGE of Marin he is majoring in child psychology. And it is his hope to transfer to San Francisco State and into the behavior modification program at that school.

"I definitely want to work with children," he says. "And my tumbling classes right now fit in perfectly with my future plans. I'm getting some wonderful experience."

And when he reaches San Francisco State it is unlikely that Carl Clement will be through with gymnastics and tumbling.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO State fields a competitive gymnastics team. And Clement regards the coach there, Jerry Wright, as "very, very good — one of the best in the country."

So it is entirely likely that Carl Clement will report for the gymnastics team, once he arrives upon the San Francisco campus. And he may very well find himself yet involved in the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships that attract the cream of the country's young gymnasts.

And if he finds that he can hold his own in that kind of competition, what next? The Olympics?

CLEMENT, a trim, compact five feet eight inches and 150 pounds, smiles. "That's dreaming. But I'll just have to let the future work itself out. I suppose I'll go as far as my ability will take me."

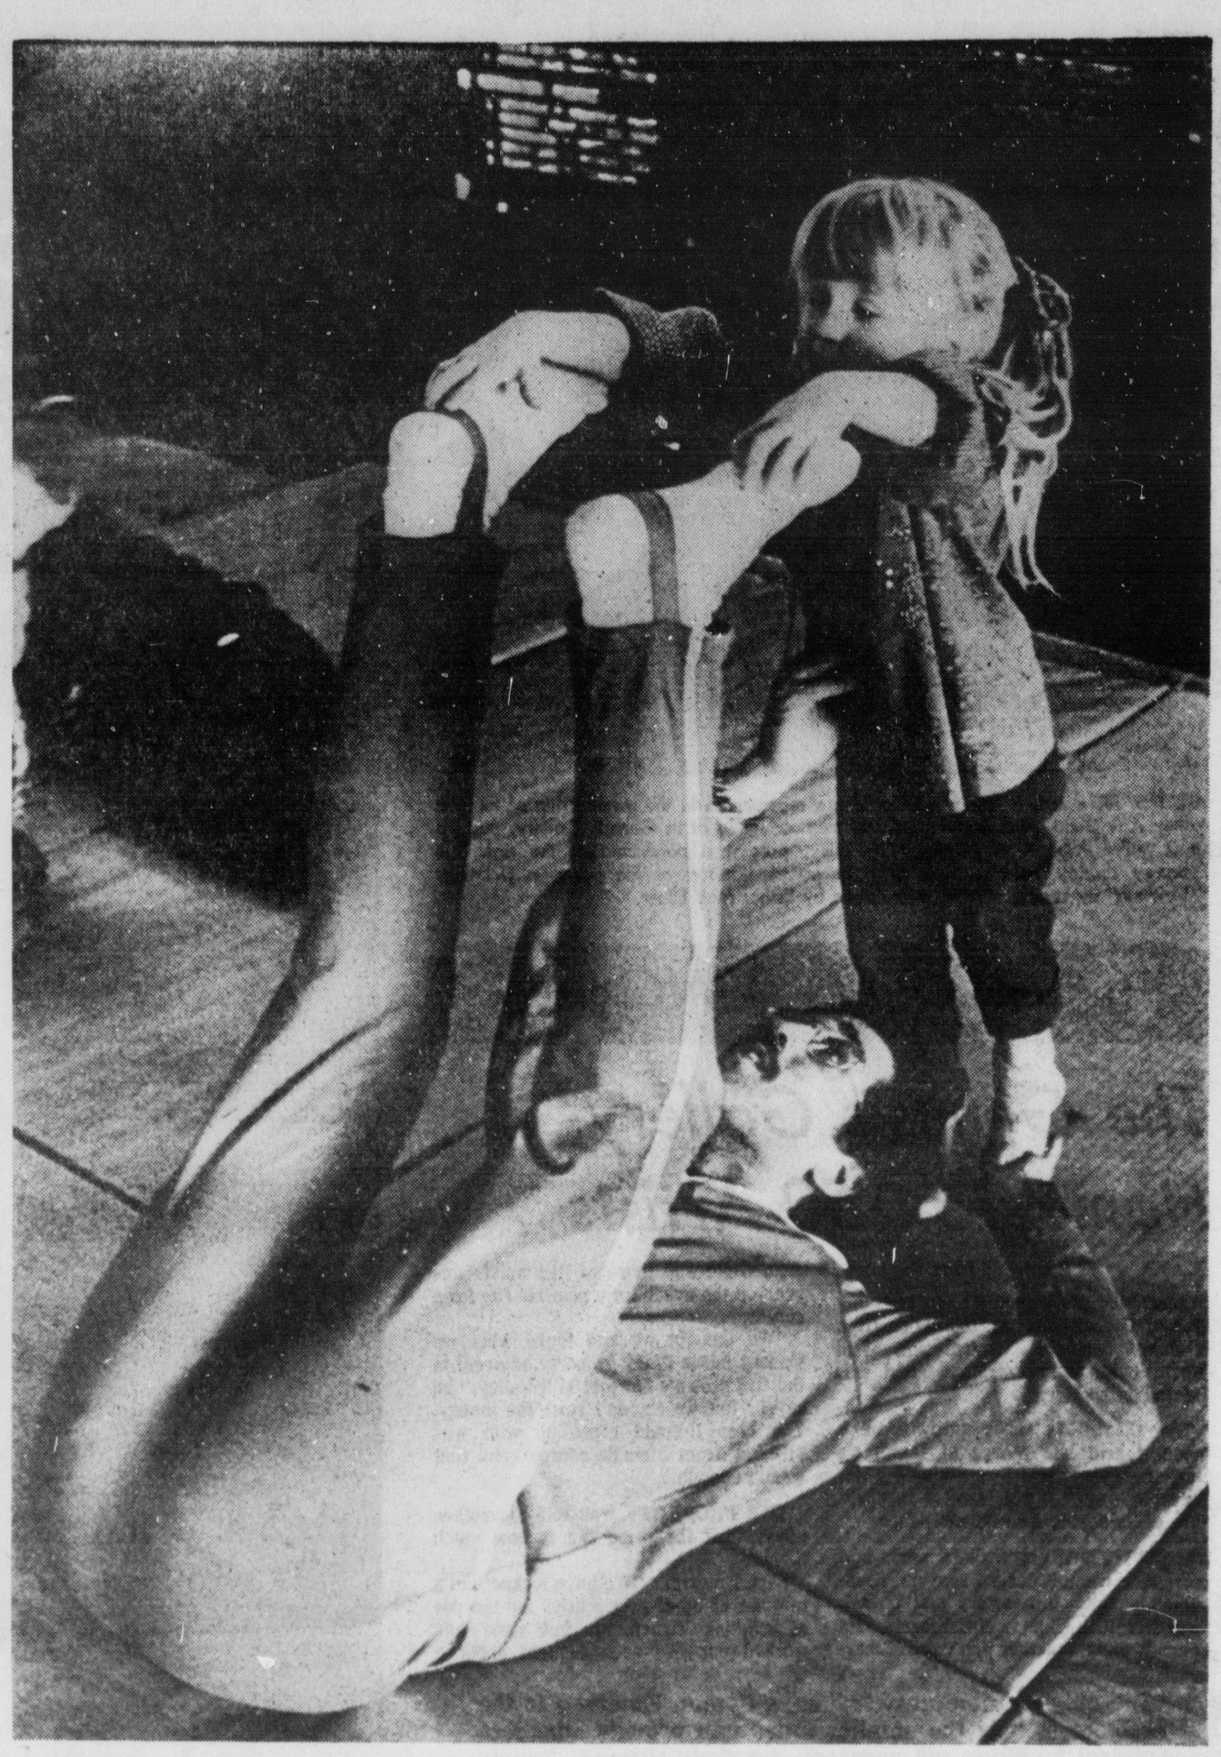

And while gymnastics demand all-around prowess from the competitors, Clement's favorite part of the program, and his strong suit, will undoubtedly remain the floor exercises. That is where the tumbling comes in.

And not even on the bars or the rings, he finds, can an athlete experience so strongly the contrasting emotions of control or discipline of the body and at the same time a freedom from the normal restrictions of gravity and weight.

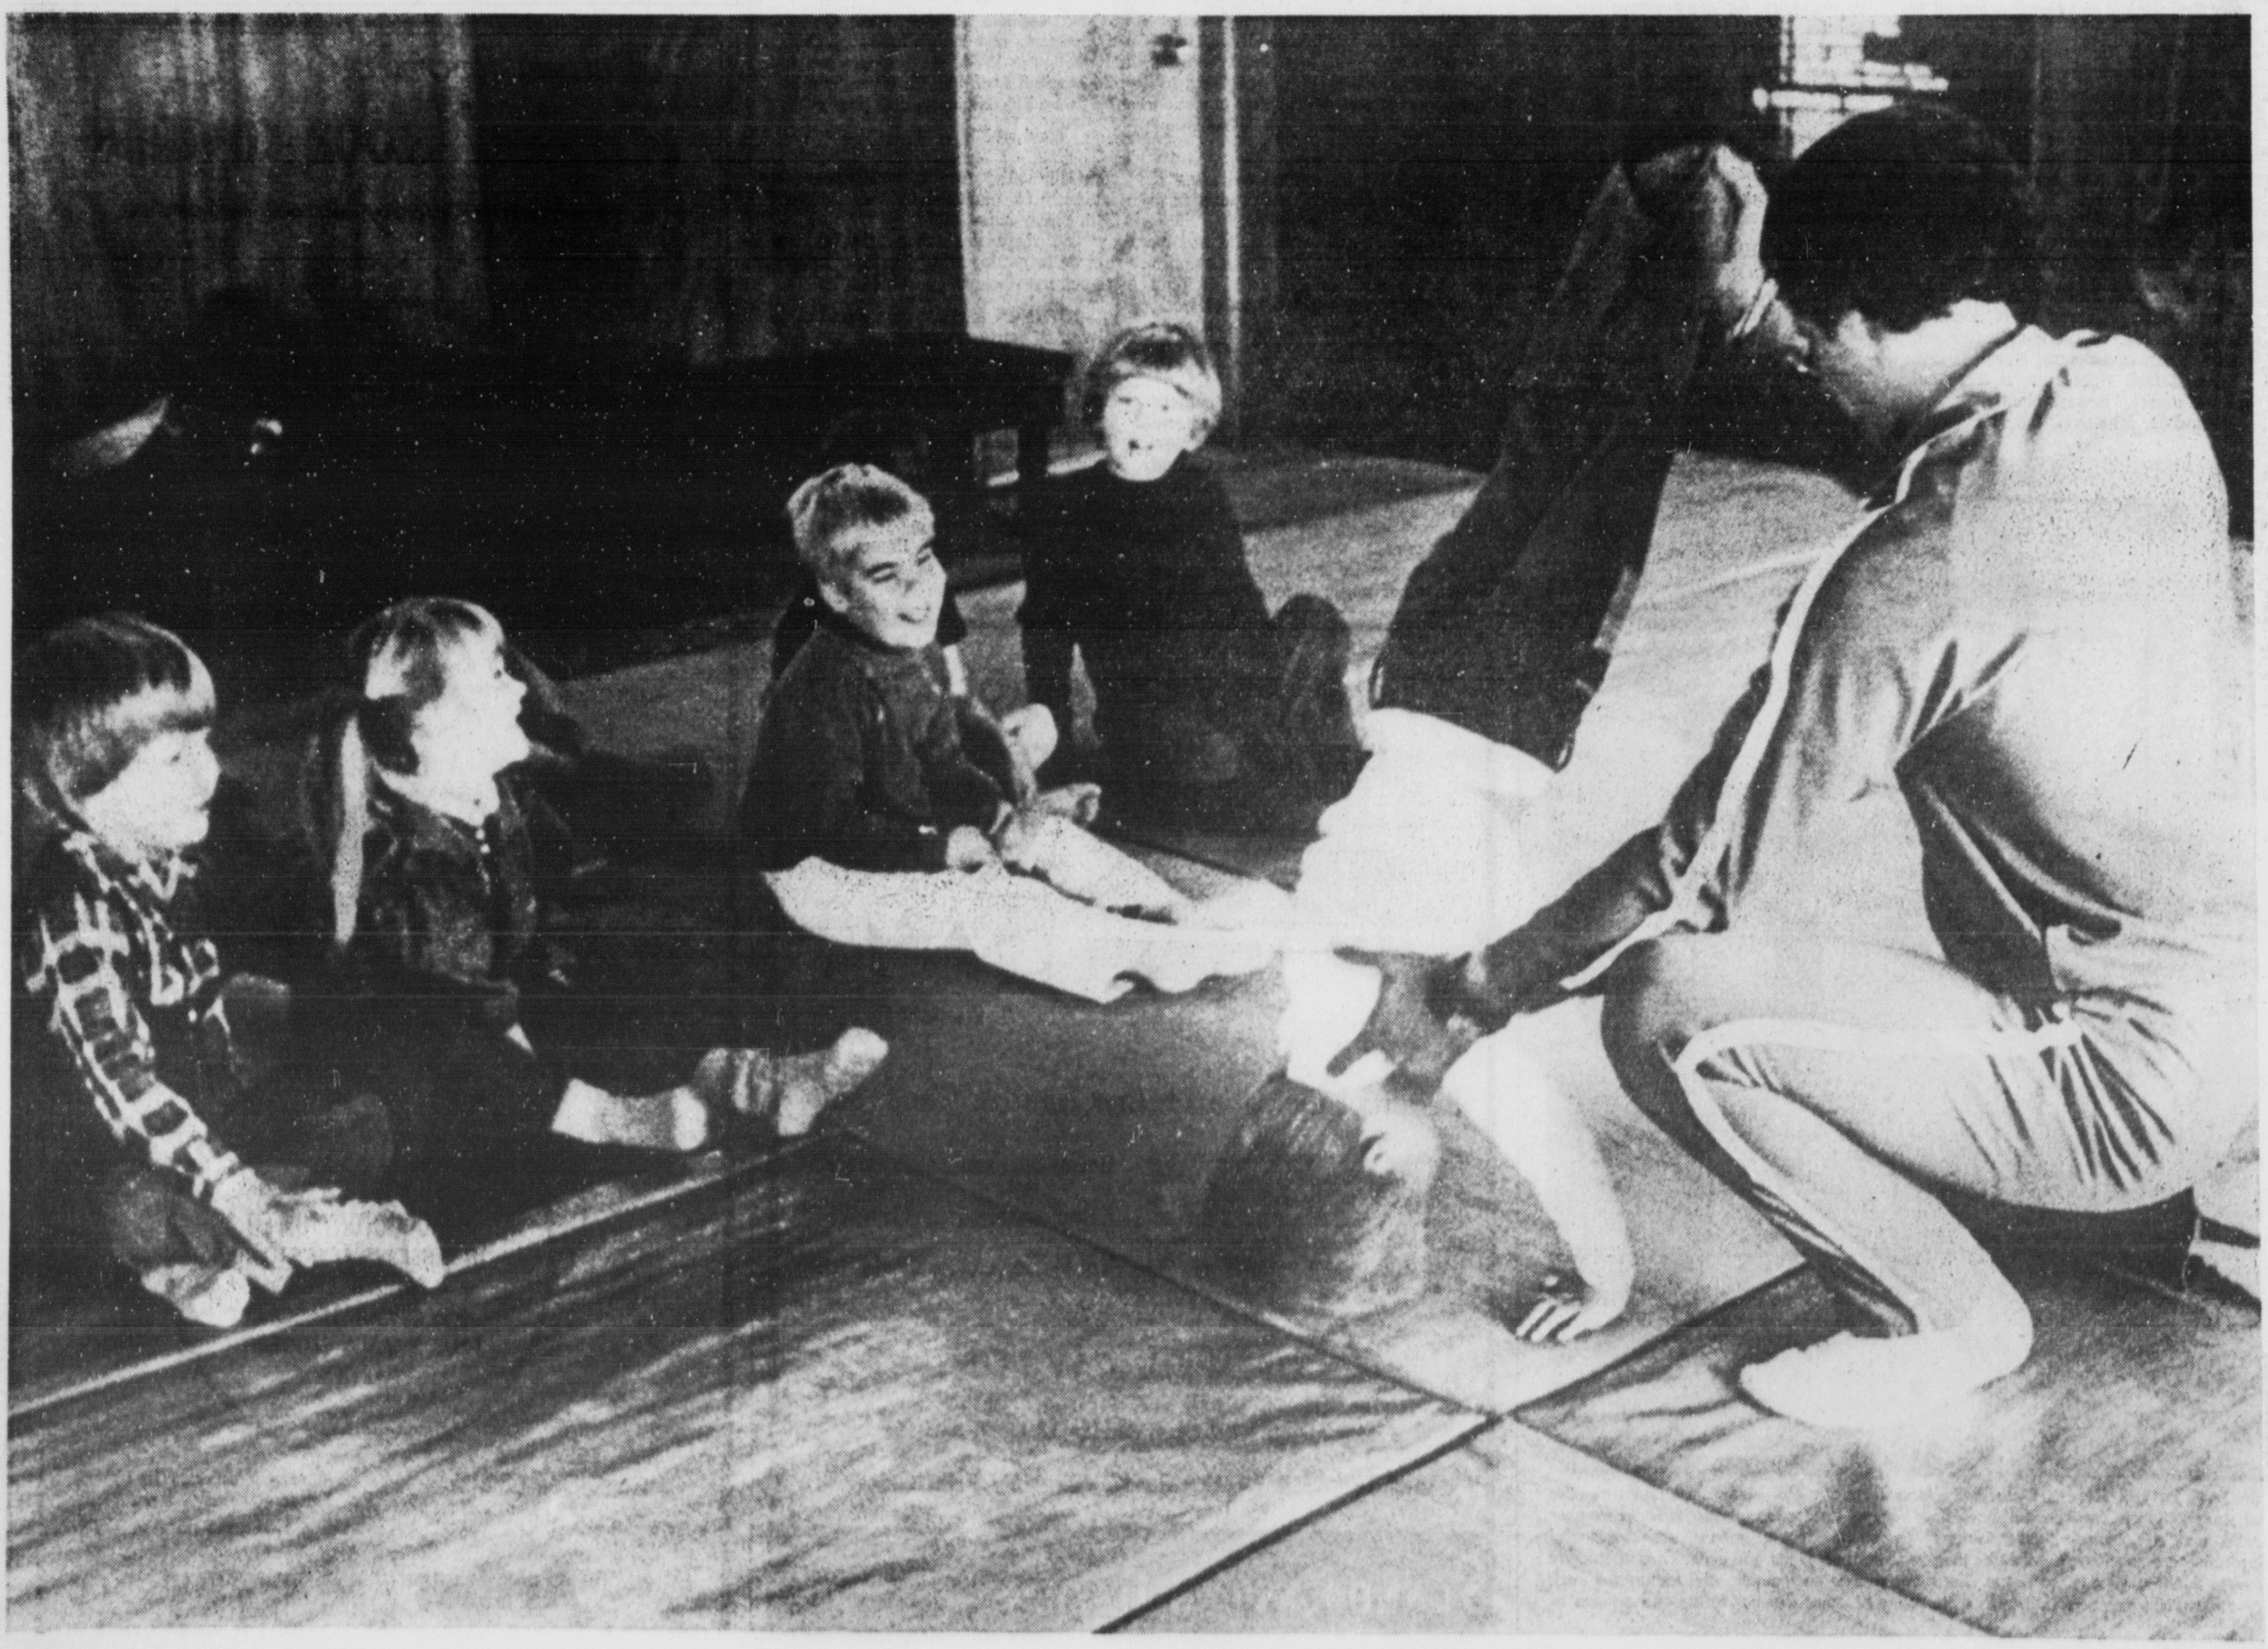

AND IN ONLY one other pursuit has Carl Clement found its equal in satisfaction. That he has discovered in working with young boys and girls, opening up to them the exhilaration that stems from overcoming the limitations of their physical beings.

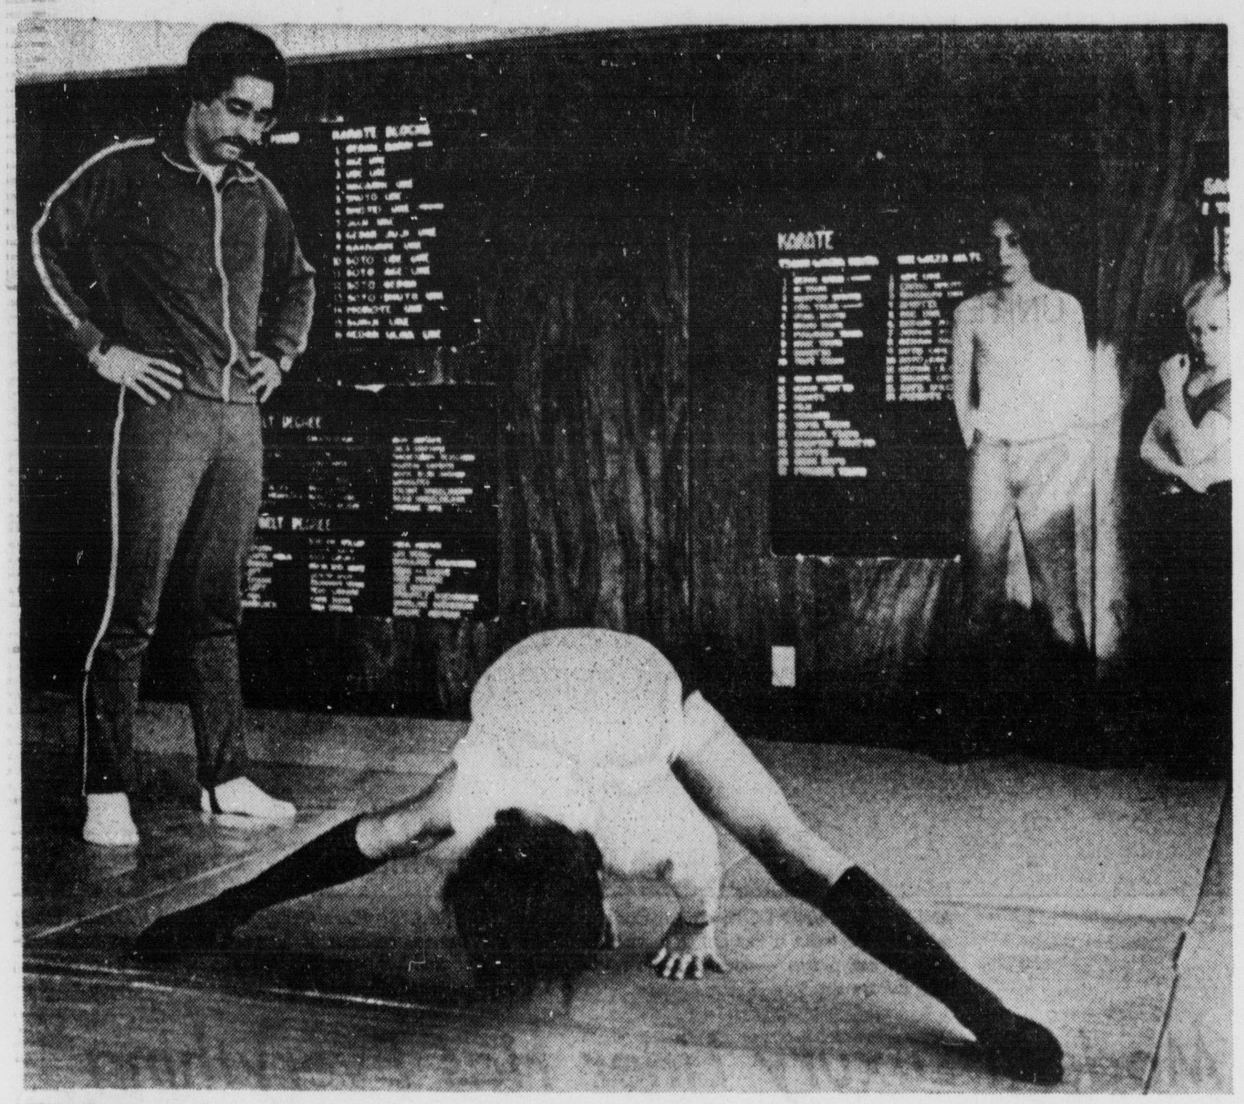

After his competitive gymnastics are over, a thing of the past, Carl will return to working with young people, then on a much broader scale.

But many of the theories that he has found so applicable to teaching tumbling — "trust is important," there's a rare joy in discovering that body weight can be controlled and disciplined," etc. — will remain in his mind and very much in force, although under different circumstances.

MARIN LIVING

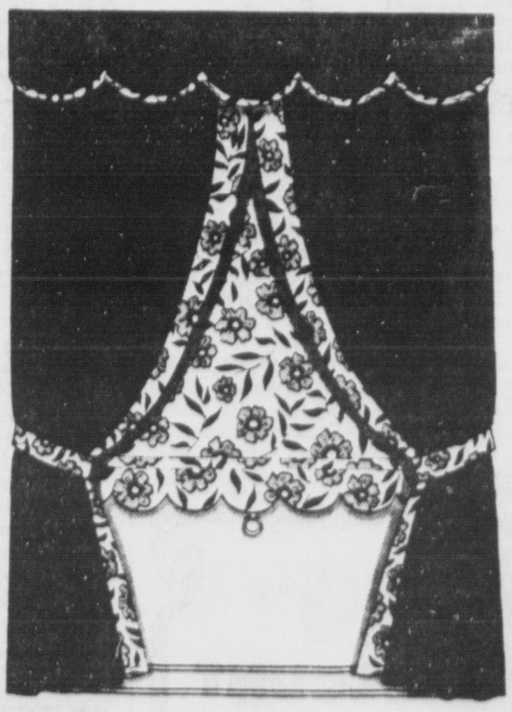

IT IS ABSOLUTELY essential, says tumbling instructor Carl Clement, that the student have complete confidence in his or her teacher. The pupil must know that the teacher will be there to catch or support him or her when this is necessary. And that he or she will not be allowed to over-extend his or her muscles and body. Lisa Feignenberg, coming down from a backward extension, has that kind of confidence in Clement.

FROM THE BAY OF BENGAL TO THE ARABIAN SEA AND INDIAN OCEAN

By RALPH HUBLEY

MADRAS, India — Warm waves, driven by late monsoon winds, swept over wide sandy beaches of the Bay of Bengal, enticing me to rest after a fast-paced tour of this subcontinent.

Austrian, German and Russian travelers at the Mahabalipuram beach resorts, less than 40 miles south of here, were doing just that.

"So you Americans finally discovered our secret here in India," said the Russian tour leader. "India for us is like your Mexico, Caribbean and South America all in one. It's the Black Sea resorts for us in summer; but in winter, we can warm in the Indian south seas."

The India Tourism Development Corp.'s Travelers Lodge and Shore Cottages, opened last March, is the largest development. It offers 32 rooms in three types of accommodations — huts, cottages and the lodge.

Seeing the popularity of this resort, two private competitors have sprung up along the sea just north of the lodge. They are the informal Silversands and the newer Golden Sun, a thoroughly modern facility.

RATES RUN FROM $6 to $10 a day, with meals included for a few extra dollars. Both western and Indian foods are deliciously prepared.

The Silversands rates even include transportation from Madras and return.

Mahabalipuram was a seaport built by a Seventh Century emperor of the Palava dynasty. Best known for its monuments hewn out of solid rock, it claims the oldest monolith in India, the largest sculpture and the only seaside temple.

However, if the resort trend continues, the area might become better known for its beaches, even though other beach areas of the south continue to develop rapidly.

KOVALAM ON THE west coast offers beautiful palm-fringed beaches a few miles from Trivandrum, capital of Kerala. And at Kanya Kumari at the bottom tip of India, the color of the sand beaches ranges from golden and creamy yellow to pale pinks and even dark red.

It is at Cape Cormorin where the Bay of Bengal meets the Arabian Sea and the Indian Ocean.

Marina Beach here in Madras is the second longest in the world, stretching a quarter of a mile between the city and the Bay of Bengal. It is here citizens of Madras meet their friends. It is here big rallies are held. It is here the fishermen spread their nets to dry.

But no one seems to be bathing in the warm waters and only a few are wading. Sharks cruise close to the shore here.

The Marina swimming pool, opposite Presidency College, provides safer waters, while an aquarium next to the swimming pool offers an easier way to see the local marine life. If a visitor still insists on sea-bathing, Elliot and Cathedral beaches south of Marina Beach are recommended.

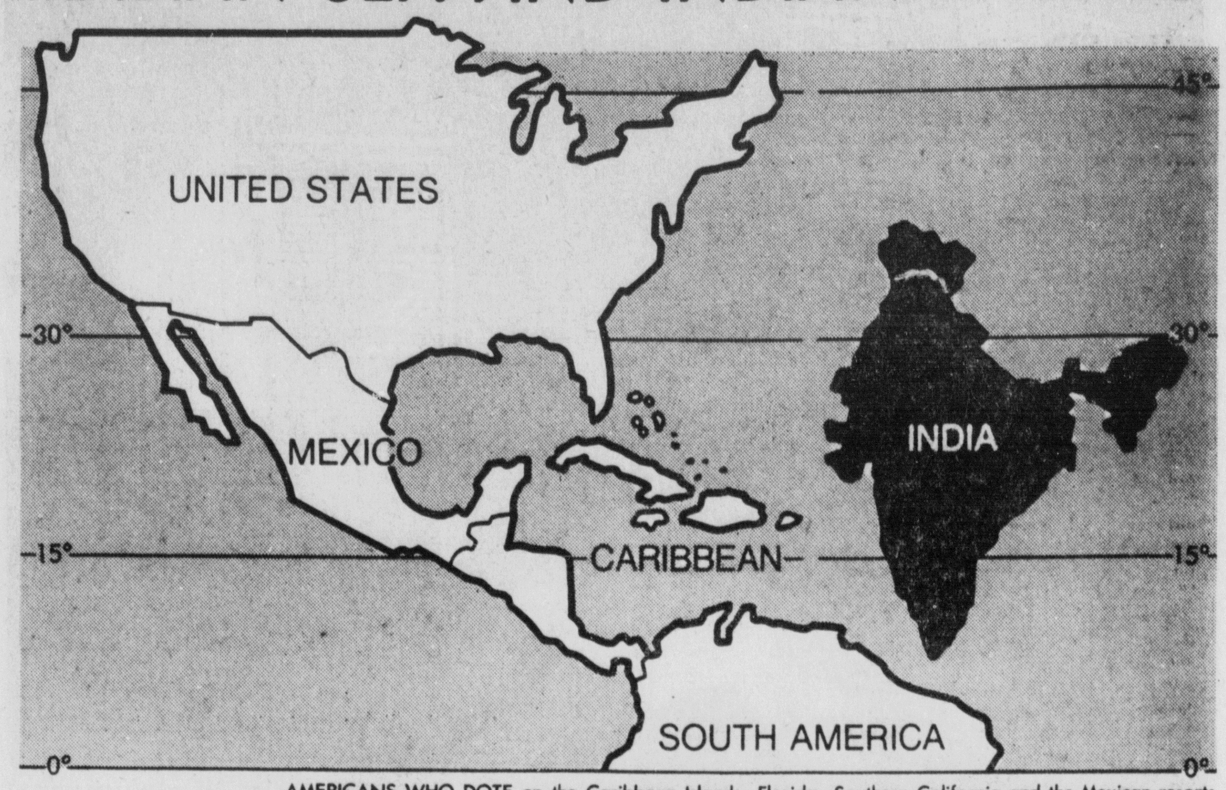

Not as ancient as other Indian cities, Madras has a wide-open feeling about it and the tempo of life is slower. The mark of the British East India Co. remains everywhere — in historic Fort St. George, Church of St. Mary and the Fort Museum, as well as in the National Art Gallery and Government Museum.

SUCH FAMOUS names as Robert Clive, Elihu Yale and the Duke of Wellington are indelibly linked with the city's history.

Besides Mahabalipuram, tours out of Madras go to Kanchipuram, the ancient capital of the Palavas with temples more than 1,000 years old. Kanchipuram also is a leading center of the hand-loom industry.

My preference for the south of India stems from the fact that this rich food-growing area is relatively more restful, the air clearer and cleaner, the people better fed and there is space for growth.

©1974 The Christian Science Publishing Society

AMERICANS WHO DOTE on the Caribbean Islands, Florida, Southern California and the Mexican resorts seldom give India a thought as a vacation land. And yet the colossus of South Asia shares latitudes with all of these places —and even the northernmost tip of South America —and has beaches long popular with Europeans.

Old Cuzco Awes Its Travelers

By JAMES WINCHESTER

CUZCO, Peru — Perched like a condor's nest two miles high in the Andes, Cuzco has echoed to the sound of many hammers in the nearly eight centuries since it was first founded by primitive Indians.

The original settlers were Quechuas from the shores of Lake Titicaca, which straddles what is now the cloud-scraping border between Peru and Bolivia. They were followed a couple of hundred years later by the sun-worshipping Incas, who made the city their sacred seat of power as the heart of a far-reaching and highly-developed civilization.

Long before Columbus discovered the New World, one of the Inca rulers, a great reformer and town planner named Pachacutec Inca Yupanqui, had more than 50,000 men at work rebuilding and expanding Cuzco to accommodate 200,000 residents. It was this construction that the Spanish under Juan Pizarro found when they arrived at Cuzco in 1533 to begin imposing their own tile-roofed, church-oriented buildings on the city.

Since then, there have been continuing additions and great rebuilding, particularly after disastrous earthquakes in 1650 and 1950.

On its own, and as the gateway to Machu Picchu, a superbly engineered and constructed Inca mountain metropolis which was rediscovered in 1911, Cuzco now gets over 100,000 visitors a year, with this number expected to double by 1975, and a whole new era of construction is presently under way to accommodate them.

This latest Cuzco building boom really started in 1969 with the completion of a new airport with a 9,000 foot-long concrete runway and modern terminal building to handle jet-powered airliners. As the number of travelers to Cuzco multiplied, more overnight rooms were needed.

THIS YEAR, AS a supplement to the 400 tourist beds now in the city, a new 280-bed hotel is opening, and four others, with an additional 750 beds between them are planned or already under construction.

On a river bank site 10 kilometers from Machu Picchu, where there are now accommodations for only 20 overnight guests, another new 200-room government-built hotel is planned for completion in 1975. A cable car will run from its front door to the magnificent ruins themselves, with all their history, mystery and archeological wonders.

In the Urambamba Valley, an area filled with Inca ruins and wonders, only one-and-a-half hours by car from Cuzco, a 250-room hotel is also expected to be completed in 1975.

IN ADDITION TO a new theater center for native dances, which opened in the heart of Cuzco earlier this year, and a newly-opened archeological museum on the outskirts of town, the Peruvian government has just earmarked 13 million dollars for a two-year program, starting in 1974, to restore this ancient Inca capital's major churches, ruins and historical sites.

Also planned for early completion is a shopping square, which will feature native restaurants, handicraft shops and factories, and a covered market to replace the present shanty stalls near the railroad station.

The biggest construction of all in the area, though, is a 20-million-dollar, 200 kilometer-long highway to supplement the already overcrowded 112 kilometer-long narrow-gauge railroad between Cuzco and Machu Picchu. Work has already started on this new and badly-needed road, with full completion expected in about five years.

THROUGHOUT PERU, there are many other government and private tourist developments planned or under way. All are aimed at helping to meet the demands of the expected 285,000 yearly visitors to the country by 1975, nearly a 25 per cent increase over the 203,000 foreign tourists for 1973.

At Iquitos, a fast-growing tourist city on the upper reaches of the Amazon, a new 125-room, air-conditioned hotel is expected to be completed by early 1975. On the north Peruvian coast, near the Ecuador border, construction on a 125-room government financed hotel and tourist complex, will start soon at Tumbes, with the opening slated for late 1974. Tumbes, which has excellent beaches, is also world-famous for its record-sized tuna, swordfish and marlin caught just offshore.

In Lima, the new 500-room Sheraton Hotel opened in the spring of 1973, and another 440-room hotel for the city is on the drawing boards. By the middle of 1974, a 125-room hotel is also expected to open at Granja Azul, in the mountains 25 kilometers from Lima. It is being built in the style of an old Inca village.

PRETTY PICTURE

TO MANY A scenery-lover, there is nothing more beautiful than a snowy landscape. Especially, when your indulgence of the cold, white stuff is only a temporary one. That's why all Marinites who head north to the Sierra are by no means skiers. Some go just to drink in the wintry beauty — scenes such as this one at Bear Valley, enhanced by architect McDonald McDonald's award-winning architectural design for The Ark. It couldn't be prettier in gingerbread.

Yankee Menu In The Heart Of Kansas City

It's called the "American Restaurant," and its bill of fare features gourmet dishes from smoked Columbia River salmon to Maine lobster.

The diamond-shaped penthouse restaurant is atop a three-story specialty store. The 250-seat restaurant, enclosed by glass walls, has three terraced levels for dining and a cocktail lounge on a fourth level. It overlooks a 10-acre central square of fountains and lawns.

Here are some selections from the menu:

Spiced Kentucky ham with cut fruit and melon, Philadelphia snapper soup, sauteed Colorado trout, New Orleans carpetbag steak with oysters, braised Michigan celery, and New England cranberry pie.

There are now seven dining facilities in Crown Center, a 200-million-dollar urban rejuvenation project owned and developed by Hallmark Cards, Inc.

Crown Center is located near the heart of downtown Kansas City. It will cover 25 square blocks of what had been urban blight.

Modern Luxury Liner Has Everything Finest Hotels Can Offer, And More

Royal Viking Line is among the neoteric steamship companies which have installed hotel managers on their liners.

Truls Birkelid, 40-year-old Bergen native, is hotel manager aboard the Royal Viking Sky, which departed San Francisco Jan. 22 on a round-the-world cruise. (Sky will be back in San Francisco near the end of April.)

Prior to his two-years service as a Royal Viking hotel manager afloat, Birkelid managed resort hotels in Norway for several years. Altogether, he has had nearly 15 years' experience in the hotel business since graduating at the top of his class from Norway's hotel school.

ROYAL VIKING SKY carries 165 persons who — under the guidance of purser and chief steward — minister to the 400 passengers on board. But the purser and the chief steward do not have to compete with the captain's overriding concern for navigation and safety of the ship. The hotel manager has complete responsibility for and authority for serving the needs of passengers.

In short, the captain is free to look after the ship and its safety. The hotel manager looks after the passengers.

Aboard the Royal Viking Sky, every criticism from a passenger must be reported (by the staff member receiving it) in writing. The report must indicate what was done to rectify the complaint. Hotel Manager Birkelid goes over all complaints in his daily meetings with purser and chief steward, to make sure that all deficiencies in service are remedied.

The result is about as problem-free and comfortable a cruise as is imaginable.

THE THREE ROYAL Viking sister ships — Star, Sky and Sea — were designed as floating luxury hotels. There are few inside staterooms. Nearly all cabins have at least two portholes. Many have larger windows.

Every cabin has private shower or combination tub and shower. Closet hanger space is surprisingly ample. Each cabin has a compact bar; the stewardess keeps the bucket filled with ice.

Beds are long enough for those up to six feet, five inches or more to sleep in comfort.

There are reading rooms, writing rooms, a library, card rooms, cocktail lounges, a nightclub, a huge dining room located topside with view windows (unlike older ships with dining room located below decks.)

Room service is at least as good as the best hotels. All rooms are air conditioned. Three channels of music are piped to each cabin.

LAUNDRY AND cleaning service is available. There is a gym, sauna, swimming pool, beauty and barber shop, gift shop, and even a hospital ward with nurses and a doctor aboard.

Actually, today's most modern luxury liners have everything which one would find in the finest hotel, plus some things that hotels do not have.

A Quick, Busy Visit To Leningrad

By MURRAY J. BROWN

LENINGRAD, USSR (UPI) — They don't pull in the streets at night in Leningrad but if you should be out late, be careful — you might have to swim if you're in a hurry.

For they raise the bridges across the Neva River, which divides the city, from Soviet warships and other water traffic between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m., and you could get caught on the wrong side.

And if you're driving, remember to remove the windshield wipers and outside mirror if you have to leave the car unattended for a while. They are "collectors items" and hard to replace.

THESE TIDBITS of information were provided by fellow-passengers aboard the Finnish cruiseship SS Bore III who had visited Leningrad before. The Bore operates visa-free cruises between Helsinki and Leningrad from May to October.

It was my first visit and I didn't have time to check out the accuracy of the tips during our busy two-day stay. But I did find much of interest in this historic city which was one of the most brilliant capitals of the world under the Czars.

Peter the Great founded the city he called St. Petersburg at the easternmost tip of the Gulf of Finland in 1703 as a "window looking on Europe" — a Europe he admired greatly for its artistic and cultural achievements.

AND DESPITE wars, revolutions and other calamities, the city, whose name was changed first to Petrograd and then to Leningrad, is still an outstanding center of art and culture.

Many of its ornate palaces, monumental cathedrals and elegant museums were destroyed by the Nazis during the nearly three years siege in World War II. But the Soviet authorities have since restored most of them.

They stand in sharp contrast to the austere giant box-shaped apartment complexes and other post-revolutionary buildings in this city of nearly four million population.

MOST POPULAR with foreign visitors as well as Russians is the Winter Palace or Hermitage which houses one of the world's greatest collections of art treasures — equal if not superior to the Louvre in Paris.

There are more than two million paintings, sculptures and other works of art scattered through the six buildings which comprise the musuem. And the palace rooms themselves with their furnishings and decorations are almost as fascinating.

We had four hours, spent mostly hurrying through poorly lighted rooms in the West European section hung with priceless works by Michelangelo and Titian, Rembrandt and Rubens, El Greco and Murillo, Gauguin and Picasso and other old and contemporary masters.

WE DID MANAGE to get a quick look also at some of the exhibits in the Russian culture section — including a huge map of the Soviet Union made of precious stones in the Large Throne Room and the engraved silver tomb of Prince Nevesky.

Other outstanding attractions include the Russian Museum, featuring icons and other works of Russian artists over the past 1,000 years, St. Isaac Cathedral with its 330-foot high golden dome, now a museum of religion; the fortress of St. Peter and Paul; Decembrist Square and Palace Square, rich in revolutionary memories; and the cruiser Aurora which fired the first shot in the 1917 Revolution.

I visited Leningrad with other U.S. travel writers as guests of the Bore Steamship Co.

It's an overnight run each way. Prices range from $99 to $220 round trip and include accommodations, meals and guided tours arranged by the Soviet Intourist agency.

While no visa is required, passengers must have a valid passport and must fill out a brief form with personal information at least 12 days before the Helsinki sailing date.

Festival Year Is On Hand For Norway

The Norwegians, who seem to find reasons for being festive at the drop of a hat, have filled the 1974 calendar with a schedule of lively events featuring everyting from folklore to fishing contests.

Visitors who include one or more of the festivals in their vacation plans not only have a chance to sample the culture of the country, but also to meet the Norwegians themselves who are avid festival-goesrs.

A winter festival at Narvik, beyond the Arctic Circle, takes place during the week of March 16-24; from April 7-15 Oslo's impressive religious festival presents a varied program of church concerts.

One of the most popular events, the annual Bergen International Festival, scheduled for May 22 to June 5, brings together world-famous orchestras, soloists, opera and ballet companies. Settings for some of the concerts and recitals include a 13th Century Viking castle and the home of composer Edvard Grieg, Bergen's native son.

Jazz enthusiasts can head for Molde, Norway's "City of Roses," for a star-studded International Jazz Festival, July 29-August 3, while poetry and ballad fans can enjoy an early July program scheduled for Mandal on the south coast.

In July, August and early September major fishing festivals are held in a number of coastal towns from Harstad, above the Arctic Circle, to Stavanger in the south.

For information and dates of these and other Norwegian festivals contact the Norwegian National Tourist Office at 3600 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif., 90010.

The Long Ordeal Of Colonel Risner

THE PASSING OF THE NIGHT: My Seven Years as a Prisoner of the North Vietnamese, by Col. Robinson Risner; Random House, 264 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Seven years is one tenth of the three score and ten which is our Biblical allotment. It is a long time to spend as a prisoner of war in conditions of cruelty, deprivation and boredom.

On Sept. 16, 1965, Colonel Risner was on a napalm and bombing mission over North Vietnam. He was shot down, presumably with a Russian SAM missile and taken prisoner by the North Vietnamese. In captivity Colonel Risner's life was hard. He was subjected to torture to force him to make propaganda statements against the U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

He engages in no false heroics. He was tortured. He held out as long as he could, and then he succumbed to pain and pressure and did much of what his captors wanted him to do.

Risner is a man with strong religious convictions, and with an equal faith that the American involvement in Vietnam was appropriate. In spite of those faiths, plus a great deal of personal courage, stamina and discipline, he, like almost all of us, could be bent to a determined captor's will. Because of those faiths, plus that courage, stamina and discipline, Risner survived his captivity and seems to have been repatriated psychologically and physically whole. His faith in the rightness of his cause and the justness of his God kept him sane. His discipline in constantly exercising kept his body fit enough to withstand the rigors of prison life and poor diet.

One comes away from Risner's story of his captivity with respect for a man who has withstood a fearful ordeal.

Despite the positive feelings, "The Passing of the Night" engenders about Risner as a man, the book also provides some disturbing thoughts.

Often during the Vietnam War the American public was assured by its political and military leaders that if we knew what they knew, we too could understand the value of American involvement and also see the "light at the end of the tunnel." These assurances were bipartisan, coming from the last two Democratic administrations as well as from the Nixon civilian and military leadership.

Risner was a senior flying officer, a lieutenant colonel at the time of his capture, promoted to full colonel shortly after entering captivity. He had been through intensive, high level military briefings and training.

Some day Colonel Risner is likely to be a military policy maker himself if he continues his climb up the seniority ladder. But his book gives no evidence that he understood the war in Vietnam or had any background and perspective on the political dynamics of Southeast Asia. His intellectual rationale for the war was that, "We were fighting the common enemy of freedom — international Communism."

A reader can respect his personal strength and faith, but it is scary to think that a man as high up in the military echelon as Colonel Risner operated on nothing more than a propaganda phrase that was discarded by the politicians, in face of "detente," while he was in prison. Scary.

Peter Benchley's Suspenseful Story

JAWS, by Peter Benchley; Doubleday, $6.95, 311 pages. Reviewed by Walt Weyman.

The book is well written; so very well written, in fact, that it gives credence to the theory that such talent can be inherited. The author is the third generation of the writing Benchleys.

I picked the book up at 8 p.m., was immediately engrossed, and put it down at midnight, well satisfied.

The plot is not new; Melville did it with Moby Dick. For Captain Ahab read Quint, for Ismael read Martin Brody, for Moby Dick read great white shark. The story area is a small segment of the southeastern end of Long Island where the town of Amity, a summer resort, readies itself for the opening of the season during the latter part of June.

A young female visitor, intoxicated and indulged with intercourse, goes for a midnight swim, leaving her gentleman friend soporific on the sand. The great white shark is cruising along near the bottom where the sandy beach drops off to a depth of 60 feet, a hundred yards or so from shore. The great white picks up the vibrations in the water that emanate from the swimming girl; the fish turns toward her, speeds up, strikes once and again and again.

Waking and missing his girl friend the man notifies the police. Later in the morning the mutilated upper torso and head of the girl are found on the beach.

Police Chief Martin Brody wants to close the beach but the mayor, other town officials, the editor of the paper and business men force him to leave the beach open. Their specious reasoning: they have only from July 4 to Labor Day to make their year's haul, and the 4th of July is only a week away.

A few days later a small boy is struck, killed and devoured while paddling in his small rubber life raft. A short while later the boy's grief stricken mother is berating the police chief when word comes that an elderly man swimming just beyond the surf has been killed by the great white.

The police chief closes the beach, business goes to hell, the town empties, and the hunt for the great white shark gets under way.

The hunt is action packed and the suspense rises day by day till the very end when . . .

Peter Arnold's Practical Manual For Defensive Living

LADY BEWARE by Peter Arnold; Doubleday, 182 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

It is a sad commentary upon our uneasy society as it now exists that the book "Lady Beware" can only be regarded as timely and important.

Whereas you hear a lot about "defensive driving" from traffic safety advocates these days, Peter Arnold suggests you practice "defensive living" to protect yourself in the home and on the sidewalks, as well as on the streets and highways.

His book is subtitled "A Practical Guide to the Physical Safety of Women." But much of his advice applies to all members of the family, male as well as female.

Within the home he discusses the use of locks and chains, lighting, alarms and commonsense to thwart burglars and other intruders. He provides guidance, too, as to what to do if the criminal crashes through your defenses and invades your home.

He provides advice, too, for safe conduct while driving or walking outside your house.

It is a chilling, frightful revelation of our social decay that such counsel as this seems entirely justified: "Don't be anxious, but don't be carefree. Be realistic. Act to prevent becoming a victim and impress upon your loved ones the need for them also to act preventively. And . . . the best way to act preventively is to do your best to eliminate the opportunity for crime to happen to you."

The hard, ugly fact is that we are now required, for reasons of personal safety, to regard the stranger who comes to our doors or whom we meet upon the street with suspicion and distrust. Not only the age of the Good Samaritan, but the time of open friendliness and fellowship, are passe. Too often the Good Samaritan has wound up the Victimized Samaritan — or even the Dead Samaritan.

So, unfortunate though it seems, man — and woman — now appears doomed to a life behind double-locked doors, of looking over his shoulder in fear of the pickpocket or mugger or rapist who might be approaching from behind, of crossing streets to avoid encounters, of weighing the call for help that comes in the night against the possibility that it is simply a trap to lure him from his house, his car or his lighted path.

In all truth, this is the kind of existence Peter Arnold urges for your physical safety. And the unfortunate circumstances are such that one disregards such advice at his or her actual peril.

Although Arnold covers a lot of ground, and manages to keep his book at a generally practical level, one does have the feeling that she has read other more comprehensive and more detailed books on the subject before — admittedly without being able to cite their titles.

In one respect, the Arnold text seems outdated in view of the energy crisis. If everyone were to follow his suggestions for house and yard illumination, then the era of rolling brownouts and blackouts would be immediately upon us, and we would all be plunged into unprotected darkness. Such suggestions as all-night outside lights for all entrances to the home — front, rear and side — and for the garage door, plus lights on in several rooms indoors during the evening with at least one of these burning all night, seem excessive. The statement: "It costs only pennies a night to burn 60-watt light bulbs at necessary points around your house and they will make even a professional think twice," may be true, but they are also at odds with the urgent need to conserve our electricity.

One sound piece of counsel from Arnold that young people would be wise to heed — but which many of them will not — is this: Don't hitchhike. And (equally sound) for drivers: Don't pick up hitchhikers.

But for those without the judgment to heed that advice, Arnold has some suggestions that will at least minimize the hazards of hitchhiking.

"Who will be a victim? The person who gives crime an opportunity, who is not alert and aware, who is not psychologically prepared, who is not expecting the unexpected — this person will be a victim." — Peter Arnold in "Lady Beware."

The Arnold advice generally boils down to this: "By expecting the unexpected, you will be psychologically prepared for just about any eventuality. By being psychologically prepared, you may even prevent crime from happening to you because you look and act alert."

It may not be the most pleasant or relaxing way to live. But it's the society we have built, and we'll have to cope with our creation accordingly.

For Safe Haven, Pick A Place Named Lakewood

AMERICA'S 50 SAFEST CITIES by David Franke; Arlington House, 301 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

America's safest city of more than 50,000 population?

Lakewood, Ohio, says David Franke.

California's safest city of more than 50,000 population.

Lakewood, Calif., says David Franke. It is 48th nationally.

The answers are from his "America's 50 Safest Cities," and you probably won't be too surprised that Lakewood is the lone California city to make the top 50 list.

What Franke, co-author of the earlier "Safe Places," has done is to take Federal Bureau of Investigation figures for 1970 and 1971, feed them into a computer, and obtain the projected community rate for serious crimes per 100,000 population.

Lakewood, Ohio, leads the list in fewest crimes per 100,000 citizens. And if you are wondering about the No. 2 city, that is something of a surprise — Rome, N.Y., with its near neighbor Utica fourth, and Weymouth, Mass., sandwiched in-between.

FBI statistics are not, of course, infallible. In fact, they are no better than the reporting practices of the cities from whence the figures must originate. But perhaps Franke's method is as good a one as could be hit upon, if there is any real value to this sort of thing.

Franke thinks you might want to consider crime rates in selecting your next home city, and so he gives you brief resumes of the points of interest and facilities of his 50 safest cities. Actually, few of us can make a choice on that basis. Other factors, notably employment and cost of living, usually make the decision for us.

Still, one must admit that Lakewood, Ohio, does sound downright attractive, one of those rare cities where the citizens really seem to care about their community.

But it is hardly surprising that cities with larger minority and low income populations generally are afflicted with the higher crime rates. The affluent understandably are less tempted to turn to crime; at least not the kinds of crime — homicide, rape, robbery, burglary, auto theft and larceny — with which Franke is concerned in his book. Embezzlement and tax evasion would tell a different story.

But rather than encourage the already considerable flight from proolem cities to the more affluent suburbs, a greater contribution to the realization of the American dream, it would seem, might be a strategy to confront crime and its causes where they exist and to try — really try — to conquer the problem at its roots.

If you are wondering how San Francisco ranks in Franke's ratings, its 389th among 393 cities listed, nosing out such garden spots as Newark and Detroit. Santa Rosa is 312th Los Angeles 365th.

No Marin city, of course, has the 50,000 population covered in the listings.

Old Lady Power Vs. Committee Of The Future

THE BANISHMENT by Alma Stone; Doubleday, 279 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Mary Craig.

Only the most audacious would attempt to classify Alma Stone's new book. Science fiction is too narrow a definition and prophecy too ponderous. Yet fantasy fails to suggest the wildly chaotic reality of this small novel.

The time is that nameless tomorrow when The Committee has banned all bird and beast and living green from New York City.

A rag-tag army of old ladies defends the last stubborn bastion of rowdy humanness. With bulging shopping bags, strident signs and fanatic piety they commit the unforgiveable offense of counter-productiveness.

Naturally they are legally banned.

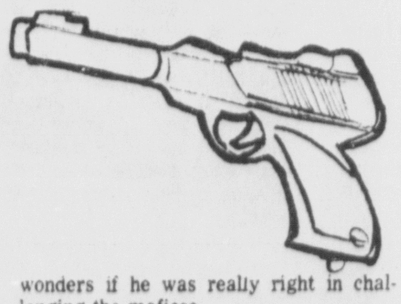

The same survival skills that enabled them to become old ladies in the first place become their strength. A hilarious camp springs up by Howard Johnson's where their bus broke down. (This is hardly an accident when you recall the nun who celebrates the joy of disengaging transmissions.)

A nice bonus is the inclusion of three short stories in the same free-wheeling style.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

FIGHTING BACK by Charles Alverson; Bobbs-Merrill, 177 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Years of scrimping and hustling have enabled Harry Caster to buy the Lamplighter bar in the affluent Hudson River town of Parker's Landing. The future looks bright.

Caster, usually a meek enough man and decent, refuses to give up his dream, and decides to fight back against the dangerous hoodlum. He goes to his big city brother for advice, and is put in touch with Alec Hoerner, Vietnam vet, ex-policeman, now a private detective and a very tough cookie, indeed.

The "war" begins, with Hoerner and Caster on one side, Rizzo and some Mafia small fry on the other. Blood flows. And, predictably, it is generally the innocent who do the bleeding. Caster begins to realize that in Hoerner he has committed himself to a man as ruthless and remorseless as Rizzo. And as the deadly struggle continues to take its toll, he wonders if he was really right in challenging the mafioso.

Alverson doesn't seem to give you an answer to Harry Caster's dilemma. Neither surrender nor resistance, it appears, would have been the right course. And this reader resents the failure of the author to resolve this central question, preferably in favor of resistance as the lesser of two evils.

And while Alverson writes well and keeps his action fast and suspenseful, he also gives you a satiety of violence. Like a Clint Eastwood movie, there is so much killing and maiming that the carnage becomes sickening. In fact, this just could wind up as such a film —with Eastwood in the Hoerner role.

NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

There's a tendency here in the USA to think of the swimming pool as exclusively American — a onetime status symbol that has now become an institution.

But the big, glossy book, "Swimming Pools" by Jacques Debaigts, published by Charles E. Tuttle Co. at $17.75, demonstrates that this country has no monopoly upon pools, nor upon creative ideas in pool design and construction.

The book contains 164 pages, with 14 color plates, 146 black and white illustrations and 101 plans, showing some of Europe's most impressive, most original and most successful pool ideas. One U.S. pool and a few from Mexico, Brazil and Tunisia creep in, but the content is overwhelmingly European. The text is in three languages — French, German and English — adding to the book's international flavor.

The goal is to provide a panorama of ideas for pool planners, builders and owners, and certainly the ideas are there.

So is some quite beautiful photography that has been admirably reproduced in a well-designed, coffee table size volume.

Marinites, who boast some impressive pools in their own confines, will enjoy looking and comparing. They might even feel a few tinges of envy at some of the mor elaborate layouts. But the idea potential is the book's big selling point.

DELL PUBLISHING Co. has brought out a $1.25 paperback edition of Robert Newton Peck's heartwarming and much praised novel of rural America, "A Day No Pigs Would Die."

BETTY BETHARDS isn't exactly the "author" of the book, "Atlantis: What It Was Then; Why It Is Important Now," newly-published by her Inner Light Foundation of Novato. The mystic prefers the word "channel," saying that she goes into a light trance and while being guided spiritually, answers questions. It is such answers to questions concerning the lost continent of Atlantis, currently holding a special fascination for many, that make up the contents of the small book. Dr. William Tiller, Stanford University professor of physics, joins her to parallel her psychic insights with his scientific perspective. Atlantis, says Miss Bethards, or her guides, met its downfall and destruction because of "a mis-use of the energy by the people who inhabited that particular area." Atomic energy ("child's play in Atlantis"), pyramids, telepathic communication, daily living are some of the other topics discussed. The book can be ordered from Inner Light Foundation, Box 761, Novato, for $2.50 including postage and tax. Betty Bethards can be heard regularly Saturday nights on radio station KSFO.

ON THE STEREO SCENE—

Joni Mitchell: A Beautiful Voice That Comes From A Beautiful Person

By BRUCE MEYER

"Beautiful" is one of the most overworked adjectives in the English language, but when the subject is Joni Mitchell — her music, her voice, her person — it is the only one that fits.

At a recent concert, Joni was into the third tune and her touring band, the L.A. Express, was chugging. She stepped up to the microphone, but someone in the audience called out to turn the volume down.

Joni cocked her head and gave him a wry grin.

"Oh, boy," she said. "We've got a house full of purists. Can you hear the words?"

Yes.

"Well, all right then."

If Joni Mitchell was ever a "folk singer" she is no longer. She is a unique musical entity and her music refuses to be forced into any such die-cut molds.

She is one of only three or four current songwriters deserving of the title "genius." Hers is a brilliantly personal kind of music — intensely and revealingly intimate.

But unlike some writers who attempt to lay bare their soul on the assumption that any bare soul should be of interest, Joni Mitchell serves herself up with a kind of joy that frees the listener from the uncomfortable feeling of prying into another's privacy.

HER NEW ALBUM, "Court and Spark" (Asylum 7E-1001), is very nearly perfect, representing both a consolidation of all that was best in her previous work while expanding the range of her personal idiom. The arrangements are bigger, the tempos and rhythms more varied; the big-name backing musicians from Jose Feliciano and David Crosby to Cheech and Chong superb.

The apparent delicacy of her music — even the straight rock tunes — is misleading. It comes from the way she forces too many words into each line, from her complex melodies, from her unique voice and delivery.

In reality, like some intricate Oriental construction, Joni Mitchell's music has a strength derived from the opposing tensions and stresses she places on it. That also explains why few of her songs are recorded by others: they depend on her personal delivery to become complete works. Beautiful.

Gene Krupa — The Greatest Of All Of The Drummers

By WILLIAM LAFFLER

Gene Krupa generally is regarded as the greatest of all the jazz drummers because of the influence he exerted on musicians of his own and subsequent generations.

It is probable there were other drummers who could match Krupa beat for beat, but the imprints they left were not so deeply imbedded as Gene's.

A drum does not have the range of some of the other instruments of a band or orchestra so the man beating the hides has to use imagination. In this respect Krupa was superb. He knew when to beat softly and when to roll into a crescendo.

"Sing, Sing, Sing" is the classical example.

SOME OF KRUPA'S better efforts may be heard on "Gene Krupa, His Orchestra and Anita O'Day, Featuring Roy Eldridge" (Columbia KG 32663), a two-LP album.

These sides were cut between 1941 and 1945 when the best material for recording was not always available because of World War II pre-emptions but the quality of sound is acceptable. The fine trumpet solos of Eldridge and Miss O'Day's jazz vocals come through clearly. And the discs have been electronically re-recorded to simulate stereo.

There are some fine selections, notably "Georgia On My Mind," "Stop, the Red Light's On," "Green Eyes," "Let Me Off Uptown" and "That Feeling in the Moonlight."

In 1943 Krupa was chosen best drummer by Down Beat magazine and he repeated again in 1952 and 1953. Although slowed down by leukemia, Krupa was still playing a great drum as late as last year.

His death robbed the music community of a great musician and humanitarian.

ANOTHER ALBUM containing music from the long ago that remains refreshing today is "From Spirituals to Swing" (Vanguard VSD 47-48), a two-IP-album. It is a playback of music from Carnegie Hall concerts in 1938 and 1939 and features Count Basie's original orchestra, the Benny Goodman Sextet, Sidney Bechet, Charlie Christian, Lester Young, Helen Humes, Fletcher Henderson and others.

THE HOMES PAGE

YOU, TOO, CAN BE A REMBRANDT

THE USE of murals in home decorating has become very popular, indeed. And with good reason. They're colorful, restful and make it possible to bring a touch of the outdoors to the interior of our homes. A handsome wall mural can also pull a difficult room together by giving it a strong focal point, serving much the same purpose as a fireplace or piano. But, you say, you aren't artistic? You don't have to be. The wall mural pictured here with pretty actress Kathryn Harrow, is about seven feet wide and four feet tall. And it can be done by anyone with the help of Steve Ellingson's full-size pattern. Just send $2 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Monterey Pine Mural Pattern 308. Then trace it on the wall, and paint over the tracings. The pattern tells you what colors go where. And you have yourself a mural that is not only attractive, but also inexpensive.

MILL VALLEY — F. HENNING BAUER

THE HEAVENS' JOYFUL MOOD

Baby clouds raced in joyful glee
To reach their merry-go-round tree;
Angel stars fashioned garlands of joy
While ballerina stars bejeweled and gay,
Gently circled and tip-toed away.

Stars born of early morning hue
Bushed away the shimmering dew;
Starlets in their silvery array,
With shining wands, lightly danced and swayed.

While flaming meteors flung farewell messages of cheer,
Glowing satellites kept constant guard, both far and near;

THE CLOCK OF TIME

I am vaguely conscious of the invisible clock
Of time rapidly receding into the past like
Silent tides pushing further out to sea.
No longer frustrated by daily entanglements,
I am disintegrating a little more each day,
Falling like a star whose last vestiges of Energy leaves behind its fiery tracery;
Pushing forth to enter the outer void —
The vast unexplored galactic graveyard,
That contains the atomic globules of stardust,
The perpetual building blocks of new stars
And planets — and maybe the dust of you and me.

HARDBOARD MYTHS

It Isn't A Synthetic Product, And It Isn't Difficult To Work

By ANDY LANG

Because it is an engineered product, hardboard is sometimes considered a synthetic. It isn't.

It is made from logs that have been converted to chips, then to wood fibers, which are permenantly bonded together under heat and pressure into panels.

The strength and density of hardboard have given rise to another myth: that it is difficult to handle. Again, it isn't. Being basically a wood product, it can be worked with ordinary woodworking tools if certain principles are followed.

FOR CUTTING straight edges, a cross-cut handsaw is recommended with eight to 12 teeth per inch.

If a circular power saw is used, either a cross-cut or a combination blade will do. However, for an extensive amount of cutting, use a carbide-tipped blade.

All cuts should be made from the face side to minimize face damage. When cutting with a band saw, use metal type blades with seven or eight teeth per inch. Use carbide-tipped blades when routing or shaping. Rough edges may be dressed with a plane, file or sandpaper. Coping hand or compass saws or portable jigsaws may be used to make irregular cuts.

For a copy of Andy Lang's booklet, "Using Hardboard Around the Home," send 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, Post Office Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743.

HARDBOARD CAN be drilled with both hand and power drills, using standard bits. Work into the finish side of the panel. Support the work with a block of wood when possible.

For screws and bolts, drill holes to accommodate the shanks. Hardboards one quarter and three-eighth of an inch have superior screw-holding strength for attachment of hinges and hardware. Use sheet metal screws after predrilling holes slightly smaller than the screw diameters.

Many types of nails may be used, but for interior work, galvanized finished nails are preferred. Annular-thread or ring-groove hardboard nails also give good results.

Nails should be driven perpendicular to the panel surface. Nail the center of a panel first and work toward the edges. Nail at least a quarter of an inch from the panel edges.

Hardboard may be bent to shape. For large-radius bends which are to be permanently supported by a frame, fasten one edge of the hardboard to the frame, then bend gradually, fastening to the frame as you go. Never start at the center of a board. For tight-radius bends, wet or soak the hardboard first.

Manufacturers or dealers will provide specific instructions, but never attempt a compound bend.

HERE'S THE ANSWER

By ANDY LANG

Q. — One of your readers recently recommended cleaning the grout between bathroom floor tiles with a mixture of ammonia water, bleach and lemon juice. The bottle of bleach I have in my home says it should not be mixed with ammonia. What goes?

A. — A checkup shows that most types of bleach should not be mixed with ammonia. Even though the reader said he had used the solution for years with good results, disregard his recommendation. The mixture can cause toxic fumes.

Q. — The attic in our house has never been finished. Now we want to make it into two rooms and possibly a bathroom. Can you tell me how to bring the heat up to the attic?

A. — Even if you had given all the details necessary to advise you properly, it would take a book to discuss how this should be handled. You will need professional help. It will be a minor job if the builder brought heating lines up to the attic, as many do; a major job if he did not.

Q. — I have to use some wood glue in an area where there is quite a bit of moisture. My son has some vegetable glue on hand that he used for model work. Can this be used?

A. — Vegetable glue has little moisture resistance. You will need a glue that is waterproof. Be sure it uses the word waterproof on the container.

Q. — What's the best way to take up an old wooden threshold? It's the kind that seems to run under the door frame.

A. — Take off the door stop — the vertical moulding along the door jamb. With most types of thresholds, this will enable you to pry them up. If this doesn't work with your threshold, you will have to split it with a chisel and then remove it in pieces.

Q. — We moved into a new house six months ago. Quite a few cracks have developed in the plaster wall over two doors. I know how to patch plaster, but I think the builder is responsible and that he should do it. Am I right?

A. — Cracks of this kind nearly always are due to settlement of the house framework and are not the fault of the builder. However, whether it is his responsibility to fix it depends on the kind of agreement you have with him and the local laws. Regardless of the agreement and the laws, some builders will undertake to fix the cracks if you have lived in the house less than a year. Have you checked with him?

Q. — We plan to have central air conditioning installed in our house before the start of the summer. Will we need additional insulation?

A. — Probably. It requires more insulation to keep cool air inside a house than it does to keep hot air there. Your air conditioning dealer will make an inspection and then a recommendation.

The Repair Of A Chair Is Common Challenge Confronting A Handyman

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

The furniture buff, even if he specializes in new creations, sooner or later will use his skills as a handyman.

In almost every home there is furniture that needs repairing. Perhaps the finish needs brightening. Or perhaps a table leg or a chair rung has come unglued or been broken.

Chairs, because of the rugged use they get, are perhaps most likely pieces of furniture to require repair.

AS A FIRST step I always disassemble the parts of the chair that need fixing. I use a soft-wood mallet to gently tap apart loose or broken legs, rungs, spindles and the like. Be careful not to scar the wood by using the mallet too energetically.

If it is just a matter of regluing, all you need do is remove the old glue from the socket holes and the ends of rung, leg or whatever part you are fixing. A rat-tail file or rasp will do this job.

Broken rungs or spindles probably can be replaced with dowels from your lumberyard. Get exactly the right thickness and cut to the right length. Then taper the ends with a raspy file for accurate fits in the socket holes.

YOUR NEXT STEP is to place furniture glue on the tapered ends and in the socket holes, and gently hammer the parts together. You will again use your softwood mallet.

The glued parts must be tightly clamped while the glue dries. For this I suggest a length of clothes line used as a tourniquet. Place pads of newspaper between the cord and the wood to prevent bruising, and twist the tourniquet tight with a long spike or piece of wood.

Wipe away surplus glue.

Much the same procedure may be followed in correcting wobbly arms and legs. But here is an additional suggestion: If the ends of the arms or legs seem to fit too loosely, tap tiny wood wedges into the sockets around them. Any visible parts of these wedges must be cut away with a saw or sharp knife.

REPAIRING BACKS of chairs may be more complicated. You may be able to taper or bulb spindles and even shape back pieces. But the better part of valor may well be to get complicated pieces turned or cut at your local lumber yard.

Spindles may often be reset for gluing in their sockets by bending them. If this won't work, deepen the socket in the upper part of the chair back. Then push the end of the spindles into the deep hole and slide down into the hole in the seat.

If you want to try replacing an odd-shaped back piece, start by extracting the broken part. Now trace its shape on a new piece of wood, drill a starter hole for your coping saw and cut out the part.

It will need further shaping and smoothing with sandpaper before being glued in place.

Soften The Hard Edges In Your Home

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

A curved surface can be a pleasant change of pace in our four-square interior life style.

Nature gives us more variety than our builders and architects. The earth's contours — studded with trees, shells, leaves, flowers and so on — all flow from curve to curve. This is the universal circle within which we find bounteous geometric forms —a nice harmony of flat and curved plains.

But step inside a man-made shelter and that harmony seems to disappear. It's a square life — or at best a rectangular one.

Within one major living center the architects, Robert A. M. Stern and John S. Hagman of New York, developed a series of correlated activity areas instead of separate rooms. One area they "baffled" with a curved wall was the activities area.

SINCE EVERY home needs a place where arts and crafts supplies can be stored, where extra plant containers and plant food can remain indoors, the design team and editors included this one well-engineered wall. But many of these activities create a visual mess — thus the need for and use of the curved partition.

The area is really a continuous part of the main living center, with flooring and wall colors identical. But it's just private enough for the quiet pursuit of a special activity.

There were other curves introduced into this living center project. The kitchen-cook area contains a cylindrical core for ease of serving and a warmer relationship between guests and chef. Within this circle the floor covering switches to a Solarium blue and yellow pattern that has geometric motifs inspired by old tiles.

AGAIN THE harmony of form.

If you have an area, such as the front door, where too much of another space is revealed, try this curved baffle technique. It can provide a graceful break in wall surface while doing the job of keeping the viewer's eye away from a private area.

A dressing room that connects to a master bedroom is another exposed situation you might need to correct.

In addition to the pleasure of the curve, you add a bit of visual surprise — not all is revealed at first glance. Almost any student of architecture will agree that a space surprise contributes a lot of character to a 20th-Century environment.

SEPARATE BUT EQUAL is the effect of this nicely "baffled" work center in an interior co-sponsored by House Beautiful magazine and Armstrong Cork Co. and created by two New York architects. One side of the wall is the family "message center." The other side is a hideaway for artists, craftsmen and plant-lovers. Flooring is by Armstrong.

Backyard Shade Garden Has Its Special Charms

GARDEN PAGE

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

The small backyard garden can be a charmer because it is more intimate, yet it often poses the problem of a good deal of shade.

A shady garden, however, is lovely for outdoor living, and can be very satisfying if thoughtfully designed and planted.

Of first importance is an uncluttered look. Free of fussy ornaments, round beds, elaborate statuary, or fancy furniture. Its charm is its simplicity.

BECAUSE ITS smallness makes it an inseparable unit with the house, its lines need to be rather formal, an extension of the space inside of the living room, back porch or patio.

If possible it should be enclosed by a hedge or fence.

In an area where it is surrounded by high buildings, the enclosure can be a wall of brick or stone or a good looking high fence. These shut out unwanted views.

In a more typical suburban location the fencing can be open in style —steel mesh or rail, letting in light and affording welcome vistas to other garden backyards. Hedges can be fairly low, yet high enough to give a sense of enclosure and privacy.

A STRAIGHT, narrow path or flagged walk will give an illusion of distance, as will fencing with horizontal panels or rails, and steps that are wide with low risers. Borders that edge the garden, leaving the center open and planted to lawn or paved with bricks or pebbles make the place look larger while yet looking restful, quiet.

To keep the small garden in scale, consider dwarf trees and slow-growing compact plants. Plants that are oversize or rampant can give it a "busy" look. Everything in scale helps to maintain the sense of serenity so enchanting in the small garden.

White and pastel-colored flowers are more attractive, too. A riot of bright colors seems noisy, so use bright colors sparingly.

ONE OR TWO plants with variegated foliage will lend variety and accent.

Plant for fragrance. This is a special bonus of the small garden. Each flower is enjoyed for itself. Soft colors and fragrance are their delight. Also white and pastel flowers are lovely on a quiet summer evening, showing up softly in the moonlight.

What can you plant in shade and partial shade?

There are quite a few shrub and hedge plants that will tolerate shade, but you need to consider your climate and the soil you can provide. Notice what grows well in other people's gardens.

AMONG EVERGREENS are yews, some of the barberries, azaleas and box. There is a dwarf Japanese holly, the handsome Alpine currant, and the Deutzia gracilis which flowers in April.

Mountain laurel can be grown in the North, but farther south its counterpart Sweet Bay. Among deciduous shrubs most of the viburnums will take light shade.

Snowberry will get along almost anywhere and in any soil.

For groundcover lily-of-the-valley is a favorite perennial, now in pink as well as white, and deliciously fragrant. Pachysandra, English ivy, and periwinkle of Vinca minor will also thrive in shade.

Hosta day lilies, white or blue flowered, make good bushy or accent plants. There is a Hosta with handsome green-and-white variegatd foliage.

MANY OF THE lovely Hemerocallis day lilies will tolerate a lot of shade. Their beautiful trumpet-shaped blooms come in different colors and combinations — salmon, pink, coral, rose, mahogany, with contrasting throats, in addition to the more familiar yellow and tawny.

Columbines, violas, sweet violets, foxgloves, and lovely feathery astilbes in pink, white, deep rose, fill the perennial borders of a shady garden, and, of course, ferns, which should not be omitted.

FROM BULBS, tuberous begonias and fancy-leaved caladiums will provide color all summer.

Sweet William (Dianthus barbatus) is a biennial. Planted early or bought in flats at garden centers they can have blooms the same year. They are darling in old-fashioned bouquets (tussie-mussies, Victorian style).

Pansies are called annuals but take a while, so buy some in flower and have an immediate gaiety. They like sun but will keep on blooming if they got only a little each day.

Organic Grower Is Heard

By EARL ARONSON

More and more readers have been requesting articles about organic gardening.

This piece includes the reflections of an old acquaintance, Allan A. Swenson, author of a recent "Practical Book of Organic Gardening."

"Organic gardening," he says, "is the logical application of commonsense toward improved soil productivity through the incorporation of organic matter into the soil.

"When the country was young," he reminds, "most people were farmers or they grew their food in homestead gardens. They had to contend with bugs and blights. Poor farmers depleted the soil; their yields declined.

"GOOD FARMERS and gardeners realized that high yields and continued productivity lay in maintaining soil fertility, building tilth and improving the soil's capacity to grow abundant crops. They rotated their crops, used natural manure effectively and replaced the nutrients needed to provide for the following year's crops."

Swenson holds that these basic principles are still sound, that millions of Americans are realizing that conservation, recycling and organic farming go together naturally.

Organic gardening means utilizing natural fertilizers and recycling what nature grows, through composting many things that will enrich your soil.

THERE IS EVEN hope, friend Swenson reminds, on suburban development land scraped of topsoil, leaving sand or clay soil. All you need is time, muscle, faith and patience and you can reclaim seemingly hopeless land.

Some time ago we read in Organic Gardening about a farm family that had fresh produce year round with the help of cellars built to hold fruits and vegetables, maple syrup, preserves and other items.

The cellar had a spring that flowed across a gravel floor. This helped maintain an equable temperature and moist air. The produce was stored in layers in piles of maple leaves. The leaves were gathered shortly after they fell, while still moist.

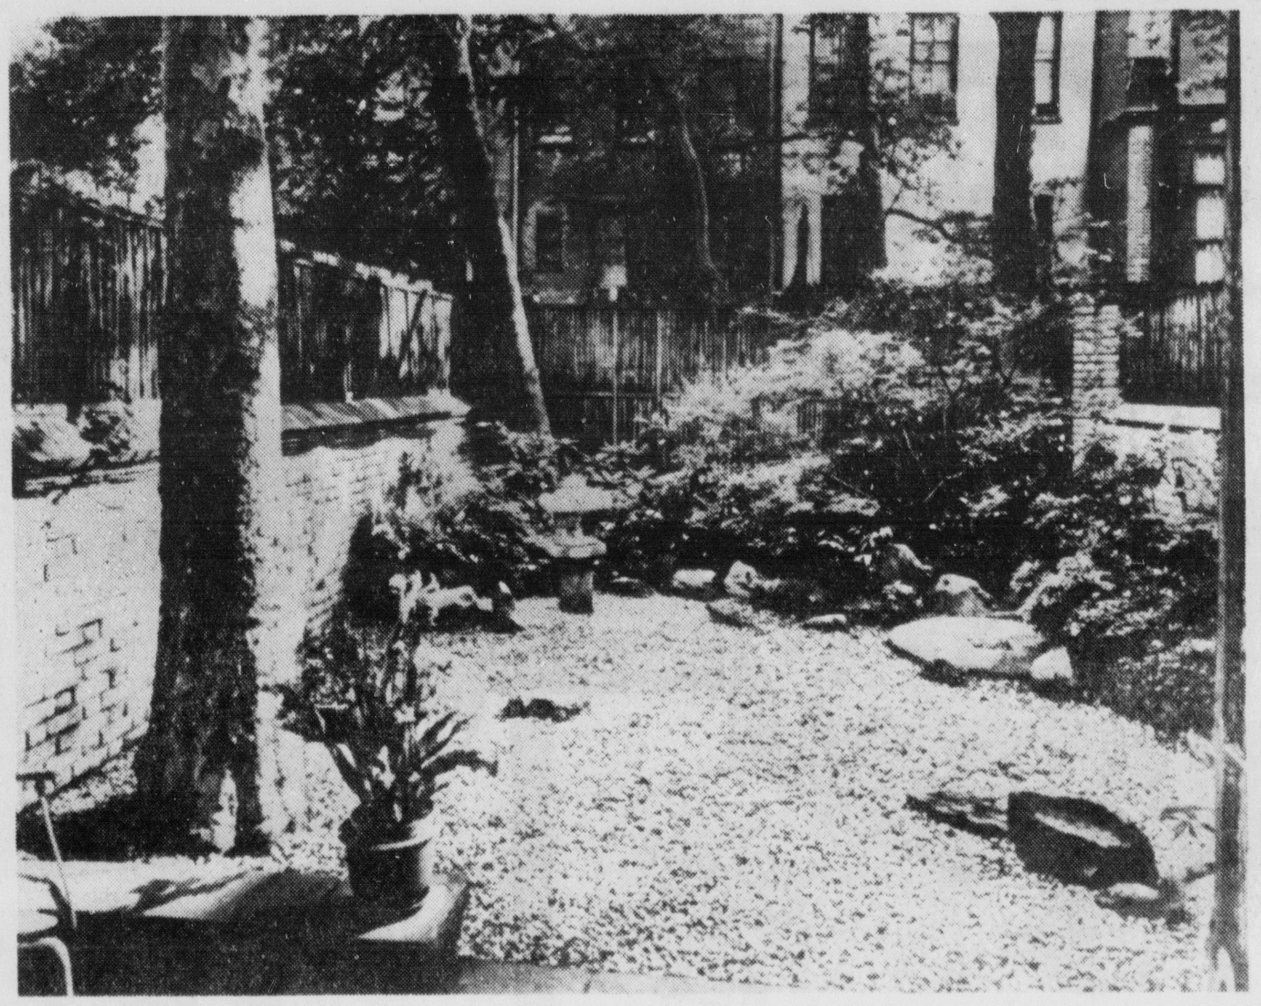

The organic farmer said his family ate crisp carrots, beets, onions, potatoes and apples up to the July following the past autumn harvest.

OTHER HOUSEHOLDERS pack vegetables and fruit in sand.

The sand, one explained, keeps the apples dry and prevents mustiness.

The sand also acts as a preservative from frost and rots, he said.

The fortunate householder with an abundance of cold storage space, of course, has no such problem, and can keep his homegrown produce for months without spoilage. But even if you can't keep the fruits of your garden indefinitely, Allan Swenson says organic gardening is well worth your efforts. Even most skeptics will agree that homegrown, organic vegetables and fruits are tastier even though they dispute the merits of avoiding chemical sprays and fertilizers.

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓Plant roses while they are still available in bareroot stock. It's not too late to plant bareroot shade trees, or fruit and nut trees. But be warned: the bareroot planting season is fast coming to a close.

✓Many shrubs are now in bloom, including deciduous Magnolias, Flowering Quinoes, Daphne and Camellias. These are just a few of the many that you may find.

✓Pinch off the first budding blooms on Pansies. Bushier plants and more blooms, later, will be the result.

✓Primrose plants in full bloom are available for planting now.

✓If peach trees haven't received their second spraying for leaf curl, give it to them — but quick. Your nurseryman can recommend the dormant spray to use.

✓Now is the best time to check the condition of your gardening and lawn care tools for the busy spring coming up. Does the mower need repair? Are the shears sharp? Do you need new rakes or hoes? Are your gloves worn out? Be prepared.

KIRK DOUGLAS is harpooner Ned Land in the Walt Disney version of Jules Verne's "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea."

TONIGHT, 8 P.M., CHANNELS 3 and 4

THE DOCUMENTARY special, "ABC News Close-Up on — Women in Prison," probes the various conditions that lead to the dehumanization of women in prison. The special, featuring women correspondents and an all-woman camera crew, also examines the capabilities of the American prison system to deal with the changing conditions within the institutions and the effectiveness of rehabilitation techniques. At left, news correspondent Ann Medina interviews an inmate in prison, while outdoors on the prison grounds, in the photo at right, sound technician Kay Armstrong prepares to record as Joan Churchill, far right, the camera woman, stands ready at her camera to film the investigative report. The special will be shown tonight at 10 o'clock on Channels 7 and 11.

Producer Needs Diplomatic Skills In Filming Special

Producer Joseph DeCola needed diplomacy to persuade officials at a number of prisons across the country to grant round-the-clock access to an ABC News team filming the investigative report, "ABC News Close-Up on - Women in Prison," airing tonight on the ABC Television Network.

DeCola met the challenge easily. He is a former diplomat by profession.

As a career officer in the U.S. Foreign Service, he was staff adviser to the assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs in Washington and later, political officer in the American embassy in Montevideo, Uruguay.

IN WORKING ON the ABC News documentary special, DeCola, with correspondent Ann Medina and an all-woman camera crew, traveled for more than two months to federal, state and county prisons and jails in such widely different states as West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Arizona and California.

The team often arrived for filming before 5 a.m. and left after midnight to develop a full picture of what daily life is like for women inmates.

The documentary takes a hard look at some of the best women's prisons and uncovers abuses and dehumanizing practices that are sympomatic of an ailing penal system.

The bearded, soft-spoken DeCola is a native of Columbus, Ohio. His interest in people, public affairs and travel, has led him along an unusual career path. An alumnus of Ohio State University where he majored in political science, he was national executive director of the Young Republicans for two years.

He went on to the American Graduate School of International Trade in Phoenix, Ariz. to concentrate on Portuguese and Latin American studies and acquire a second Bachelor's Degree. This training led to posts at U.S. cultural centers in Brazil and his acceptance on examination into the U.S. Foreign Service. But he grew impatient with protocol after nearly four years and moved to New York to work for a giant pharmaceutical company in its international division.

MEANWHILE through friends, he had become interested in filmmaking. DeCola persuaded his company to sponsor his training at New York University and to launch him as a filmmaker — at the top — in the post of executive producer for an industrial documentary.

"By the time we finished production, I was convinced I wanted to make movies," he said. "I knew what I wanted to say. Now I had found my voice for the first time in my life."

As an independent producer, DeCola again drew on his background in the Foreign Service and his acquaintance with diplomats, including John P. Davies, former State Department China expert, to make the documentary, "Mission to Yenan." Dealing with the lives of four former U.S. diplomats, including Davies, who had been in China in the 1940s, the film tells what happened to them during the McCarthy era of the early 1950s.

The documentary has been shown on commercial and public television and in 12 foreign countries.

HIS OTHER documentaries include "Mrs. Cop," the story of a woman police officer on street patrol, and "Volunteers," a portrait of six persons arrested for attempting to bomb a bank and a look at the violence of the late 1960s. The "ABC News Close-Up on - Women in Prison" is the producer's first assignment for ABC News Television Documentaries.

When DeCola turned from diplomacy to documentaries, his wife, Sheila, who had become expert in embassy protocol, also developed an interest in filmmaking. She has worked as an assistant film editor, in addition to operating her own sports clothes design company, "City Kid."

The DeColas and their sons, Michael 6, and Jonah, 3, live in New York City.

Cancelled Trip

HOST JOHNNY CASH is joined in duet by his mother-in-law, Maybelle Carter, on the country music special, "Johnny Cash's Country Music," to be shown tonight at 11:30 o'clock on Channels 3 and 4. Johnny's other guests for the evening include his brother, Tommy Cash, the Carter Family, June Carter Cash, Larry Gatlin, the Statler Brothers and Tanya Tucker.

That Vital Strait For The Oil Users

The shah of Iran for the first time has lifted the secrecy surrounding the most rapid and important military build-up in the Middle East.

He has permitted NBC News producer-reporter Bob Rogers and an NBC-TV camera crew to document it in a report that will be presented on "NBC News Presents: Special Edition" Sunday at 10 p.m. on the NBC Television Network.

In a wide-ranging interview with Rogers, the shah defends his absolute monarchy and discusses the extraordinary growth of its new military power in what is possibly the most crucial area of the world. He also talks about the crude oil price hikes.

Iran now dominates the Persian Gulf and its entrance, the Strait of Hormuz, which, says Rogers, "is probably the single spot on earth that is really vital to all the industrialized nations of the non-Communist world."

THE SHAH OF IRAN
He watches the strait

THE STRAIT, the narrow water route to the oil riches of the Persian Gulf, lies between the South Coast of Iran and the northern tip of the Arabian Peninsula ruled by the sultan of Oman, whose government is already locked at a struggle with insurgents. A steady stream of tankers passes through the strait carrying 20 million barrels of oil a day, including 60 per cent of Western Europe's imports and more than 80 per cent of Japan's.

"Any interruption of this traffic would be catastrophic for much of the world," Rogers says. "The shah has pledged there will be no interruption and is rapidly building the military muscle to make it stick." says, report offers exclusive footage of Iran's American-trained-and-equipped air force, which includes what soon will be the largest force of Phanton fighter-bombers in the Middle East.

"THE IRANIANS also have purchased 30 advanced F-14 fighters and are negotiating for an even larger number of F-15s," Rogers says. "They will be the first foreign nation to be sold these planes, which are the most advanced warplanes in the American inventory."

Rogers and his crew sailed aboard the ultramodern Iranian guided missile frigate Zaal to obtain the first film coverage of the intensive monitoring by Iranian ships and planes of ship traffic entering and leaving the strait. The report also includes the first films of the strategic island of Abu Musa, which dominates the strait.

Included, too, is the first film of the Iranian Navy's hovercraft squadron in action. Iran now has the world's largest operational hovercraft force, with the capability of moving a full battalion anywhere in the Gulf in a matter of hours.

TUNING IN THE TV

By JACK GAVER

NBC's "Go" program, a Saturday half-hour for children that gives them insight to various phases of real life, has been renewed for a second season, beginning next fall.

Norman Rosemont is producing for future ABC use a one-hour entertainment special, "Variety," with a format patterned after the noted trade publication of that title, which covers all phases of show business.

Anthony Costello and Marianne McAndrew will costar in "Mr. and Mrs. Cop," a half-hour series that Viacom is producing for CBS. The two play a married couple working on a police force.

Looking to the country's forthcoming bicentennial, NBC has in preparation six one-hour drama specials based on the notable Carl Sandburg biography of Abraham Lincoln. Three of the specials will be aired during the 1974-75 season and three in 1975-76.

Edward Villella, regarded by many as America's outstanding ballet star, has been commissioned by CBS to create and dance in a one-hour special, "Harlequin," based on the 16th century commedia dell'arte character. Patricia McBride will dance the role of Columbine. The program will be aired at 3:30 p.m. April 10 as the fifth of the "CBS Festival of the Lively Arts for Young People" series.

A 90-minute program development project for NBC is an adaptation of the memorable Betty Smith novel, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," which will star Cliff Robertson as the amiable, ne'er-do-well husband-father, Johnny Nolan, and Diane Baker as his long-suffering wife, Katie, who tries to hold the family together. Nancy Malone will play Katie's sister, who has a checkered romantic background.

The Very Versatile Maestro

LEONARD BERNSTEIN
His 'Mass' on Channel 9

A musician of prodigious and varied gifts, Leonard Bernstein is conductor, composer for the concert hall and musical theater, pianist, teacher and author.

Bernstein's most discussed recent composition, "Mass," a theater piece for singers, dancers, and players, is a presentation of "Theater in America," the major new drama series. "Mass" will be telecast Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. over the Public Broadcasting Service (Channel 9.)

Born in Lawrence, Mass., Bernstein grew up in Boston where he studied piano with Heinrich Beghard and Helen Coates. After graduation from Harvard, he spent two years in Philadelphia at the Curtis Institute where he studied conducting, orchestration and piano.

ACCEPTED AS a student in conducting by Serge Koussevitsky, Bernstein spent the summers of 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood, where he met Arthur Rodzinski, then music director for the New York Philharmonic, who engaged him as assistant conductor for the 1943-44 season. Bernstein's historic debut with the Orchestra came on Nov. 14, 1943, when he substituted for the ill Bruno Walter.

Since then, the many talents of Leonard Bernstein have been in evidence throughout the world.

After his dramatic debut, he accepted a three-year term as conductor of the New York City Symphony. He continued as guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic and in 1957 was named one of its two principal conductors. The following year, Bernstein became music director, the first American, born and trained in his own country, to hold this prestigious post.

IN 1969, ANOTHER title was conferred on Bernstein, that of conductor laureate of the Philharmonic which assures his life-time association with the orchestra while permitting him to pursue his many other interests.

Somehow between conducting, playing the piano, and teaching, Bernstein manages to concentrate on still another career — that of composer in many idioms. His compositions span the musical horizons from symphony to musical comedy, ballet to religious pieces.

His works include three symphonies: "Jeremiah," "The Age of Anxiety," and "Kaddish;" others are "Serenade for Violin Solo, Strings and Percussion," "Chichester Psalms for Chorus and Orchestra," "Prelude, Fugue and Riffs," an opera, "Trouble in Tahiti," and the ballets "Fancy Free" and "Facsimile." His well-known theater scores are: "On the Town," "Wonderful Town," "Candide," and "West Side Story."

HE ALSO COMPOSED the score for the award-winning film "On the Waterfront."

When Bernstein conducted the Metropolitan Opera's opening night "Carmen" in 1972, he transformed an old dream into reality. For years he argued that Bizet's masterful score with his spoken dialogue is superior to the grand opera form with its recitatives added by Ernest Guiraud after the composer's death. When presented this way on television in 1962 and again in 1972, the responses of the audiences supported Bernstein's theory.

In 1972, Kennedy Center was the locale for the first Leonard Bernstein Film Festival. Six full-length films feature Bernstein conducting the Vienna Philharmonic, London Symphony, Israel Philharmonic and the Boston Symphony. One of them, "Beethoven's Birthday: A Celebration in Vienna" won an Emmy.

AS BOTH teacher and performer, Bernstein uses all media from the traditional classroom to television for communicating musical experiences. Beginning with his first television appearance on "Omnibus" in 1954, Bernstein became "music's most articulate spokesman."

He taught at Brandeis University and Tanglewood, where he is presently an advisor.

His televised "Young People's Concerts" developed new international audiences for the world of music. He is also the author of three books: "The Joy of Music, "Leonard Bernstein's Young People's Concerts for Reading and Listening," and "The Infinite Variety of Music."

In 1953, Bernstein made his operatic debut at La Scala conducting "Medea." Once again, he made history as the first American-born conductor to appear at Milan's celebrated opera house.

HIS METROPOLITAN Opera debut occurred in 1964 when he conducted a new and greatly admired production of Verdi's "Falstaff."

In the fall of 1972, Bernstein returned to the scene of his undergraduate days at Harvard as the Charles Eliot Norton professor of Poetry, one of the most distinguished chairs in the academic world. His predecessors include Igor Stravinsky, Paul Hindemith, and Aaron Copland.

'Hello, Dolly' Offers A Really Big Parade

"Hello, Dolly!," starring Barbra Streisand and Walter Matthau, which debuts as a CBS-TV movie special Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10, was filmed in large part on a two million dollar set constructed around existing administration buildings on 20th Century-Fox's home lot.

The set, perhaps the largest and most expensive in film history, was designed by John De Cuir to fit around existing buildings without interfering with their utility. Eleven such buildings, including the Administration Building, the studio's nerve center, were surrounded by the new construction.

A COMPLEX of 60 buildings, involving reproductions of intersections of Manhattan's Fifth Avenue, Broadway and Mulberry Street, with subsections for Madison Square Park, 14th Street and the Bowery, had to be faithfully reproduced in the limited space available.

This huge set formed a background for the most stupendous effort ever attempted by a film company. Sixteen units, comprised of 675 persons, were in the parade which passed an audience of 3,108 extras.

Perhaps the size of the operation can be explained by stating that two sound stages and three circus-style tents were used for makeup with 122 specialists assigned to the period wardrobe and makeup for the crowd extras alone.

FIFTEEN SPECIAL assistant directors were pressed into service to handle the crowd with most of them in costume so they could function within view of the cameras. There were 35 uniformed police directing traffic and providing crowd control. The more than 150 horses used in the huge parade scene had to be specially trained not to panic because of the blaring band music and crowd noise.

Other interesting statistics:

Used on the exterior sets alone was enough paint to cover every house in a town of 5,000; more than 10 tons of nails and 858,000 board feet of lumber, which would stretch to 117 miles; more than enough plywood to build all the houses in a town of 5,000 and 183 telephone poles and 22 miles of wire simulating telephone cables.

The huge set for the spectacular film adaptation of "Hello, Dolly!" still stands at 20th Century-Fox.

KQED Plans Art Auction

Paintings and prints, collages and crafts by top Bay Area artists will be sold at public auction, when Channel 9 broadcasts its 20th annual fund-raising telethon this year, June 1 through June 9.

On June 2 (designated as "Art Sunday"), nearly 1,000 pieces of art will be sold in 11 continuous hours of auctioning.

Highlights of this year's art aucton include:

A two-week showing of 50 selected works at the Crown-Zellerbach Gallery from May 13 through May 24;

A preview at the Cow Palace of all the art to be sold, beginning on May 27.

This year two of the top donating artists will be singled out for recognition in another half-hour television special to be aired on KQED following the auction. In addition, three "second prize winners" will each be featured in one of KQED's Emmy Award-winning station breaks, "Spaces Between Programs."

Sam Groom Is One Of Last Of TV's New York Actors

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sam Groom, who stars in the title role of "Police Surgeon," is among the last of a disappearing species, the prime-time television actor who still makes his home in New York.

In order to star in the nationally syndicated adventure show it is necessary for Sam to spend four months a year in Toronto, Canada, where the series, seen in the Bay Area Tuesdays on Channel 4, Fridays on Channel 10, is filmed.

It's a case of living two lives in two different cities.

Groom is a handsome, rugged young man in his early 30s, personable and relaxed. He likes to talk about sports. Better still, he plays tennis, baseball, swims and jogs to keep his six-foot, two-inch, 175 pound physique in top-notch shape.

He and his wife, Kate, have been married a dozen years and moved to Rye, N.Y., three years ago when their family outgrew their two-bedroom apartment in Manhattan.

They are the parents of three husky, robust young sons: Sam, Jr., 11; Patrick, 9; and Chris, 6.

From cramped quarters in the big city, San and the boys now frolic around their suburban colonial home which has five bedrooms, large chambers of all kinds and high ceilings.

Previous owner of the house was an elderly woman who planted trees and other vegetation around the property to attract wild birds. The half-acre now is something of a neighborhood bird sanctuary.

Kate and Sam have kept the wood floors uncarpeted except for some oriental rugs.

One piece of furniture is a real treasure. It is a four-poster bed, now located on the third floor, which once belonged to Sam's great grandfather.

The general decor of the 75-year-old house is a mixture of furniture combining the traditional with the modern. The attitude around home can best be described as casual.

A dog named Andy and a huge black rabbit who answers to Blackjack scramble around the house. And the boys collect turtles, frogs and other delights.

Sam spends as much time as possible with his sons when he is in Rye because he must be separated from them for weeks at a time when he is filming the series in Canada.

He makes no attempt, however, to even establish a temporary base in Toronto.

He stays in a hotel room, eating hotel food and working from dawn until dusk at a variety of location sites when the show is in production.

Sam says it is only about 500 miles from Toronto to New York, just far enough to prevent him from commuting. He does take three-day weekends as often as possible to jet home to his family.

Because the show is in Toronto from July to November, the boys manage to spend a month or so of their summer vacation with their father.

More than anything else Sam misses Kate's home cooking when the series is in progress. She does things with a beef stroganoff that makes Sam's mouth water.

For the eight months when he is not involved with the show Sam busies himself looking for good movie properties and does occasional guest shots on other television shows.

On weekends he and his sons play football, soccer and go to ball games. He and Kate also take them to the circus when it's in town. While the Grooms make their home in Rye, their friends still live in Manhattan and they frequently drive to New York for visits, dinner and a Broadway play.

Sam likes the life he leads, but he would be happier if he could work in the same city in which he lives.

An Award For Perkings

Marlin Perkins, host of the syndicated television program, "Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom", has been named to receive the American Education Award for 1974.

The award is given annually to a man or woman who has made outstanding contributions to the cause of education.

Perkins, known by millions, young and old, for his nearly three decades of television presentations has probably the largest "classroom" of any American educator today — over 34 million.

HELEN BENTLEY, one of the more popular Bay Area TV personalities, now hosts Channel 44's "Live From the City" talk show each weekday from 1 to 2:30 p.m. with a variety of news-making guests plus a phone-in feature for viewers.

CLORIS LEACHMAN and Michael Brandon star in "Hitchhike," a suspense movie of a predictably punctual woman driving to San Francisco who unwittingly picks up a fleeing murderer and establishes a relationship with him that places her life in jeopardy. Cameron Mitchell and Henry Darrow also star in the motion picture to be shown tonight at 8:30 o'clock on Channel 7.

Jack Lord Replies To His Detractors

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Six years ago, Jack Lord confidently predicted: "This show is going to make it. I don't see how it can fail."

Before that first season in 1968 was half over, Lord nearly had to eat those words.

"Hawaii Five-O" was going down the tube.

But at Christmas time, CBS pulled a schedule sleight-of-hand. It switched the show from Thursday, where it was being slaughtered by "Ironside," to Wednesday. There, it killed off the opposition, Burt Reynolds' "Dan August," and the rest is ratings history. CBS has since moved the series to Tuesday.

THE POINT IS that Lord, on the mainland for a brief vacation with his wife, Marie, is a supremely confident man. A few disgruntled voices have intimated that it is more than just confidence.

Over the years, reports have wafted over the waters that all is not milk and honey on the island paradise where the series is filmed. That Lord is possessed of a large ego and once rewrote his network biography in terms that would have flattered a Greek god. That his fellow actors are a bit rankled that Lord retains exclusive right to be called "star."

The credits read: "Starring Jack Lord, with James MacArthur, Kam Fong and Al Harrington."

I ASKED LORD about these rumors and put to him the question of ego and star billing. His blue eyes seemed to ice for a moment, and he considered his words carefully.

"Someone once said anyone who's spoken about is spoken against," he replied.

"I had a deal with the network going in that called for star billing. There was a reason for that. I don't know where the criticism began. It's mostly about Jimmy MacArthur.

"BUT HE WASN'T even in our pilot. I congratulated him when he was hired. He's a marvelous actor, but I don't see why any actor who had nothing to do with the pilot or selling it on Madison Avenue should be handed star billing. Stardom is something you earn.

"The two shows I starred in, 'Hawaii Five-O,' and 'Stoney Burke,' I helped sell them on Madison Avenue. So, you may call it ego. I call it good business sense."

Lord said he did not know of any open friction on the show.

"HAWAII FIVE-O" is a flamboyant show and one of the consistently better detective shows on the air. What's interesting is that while the show's production values are a little flashy, Lord's style is not, and it works out well.

The lush locations, the exotic faces and the snap and crispness of its color — Lord credits this to Hawaii's nearness to the Equator — impart a special look. Add to this the bizarre crimes and the frentic pace and you have a very stylized show.

JACK LORD

On the other hand, as Steve McGarrett, the head of the Five-O unit, Lord's performance is sturdy, almost dour. His chiseled face wears a troubled, no-nonsense expression. It plays off well against the flamboyance of the show. He definitely is not lost among the flora and the fauna.

AFTER SIX YEARS on the air, Lord's McGarrett still remains a mystery man. We see only one side of him — the business side.

"Not knowing him works for us," said Lord. "We get letters from people wanting to see something of his personal life. I think the mystery piques people. I think it also annoys them."

Lord feels that he is actually not a mysterious or secretive person. But he admits that he is a very private person.

He said that living in Honolulu, where he intends to remain once the show leaves the air, doesn't give him a sense of isolation.

"EVEN WHEN I was in Hollywood I was never of it," he said. "I never ran with the crowd. I'm a loner, with the exception of a few people I grew up with on Broadway — Paul Newman, Tony Franciosa, Steve McQueen, Darren McGavin. I didn't have many contacts with Hollywood. I wanted to spend my time with my wife."

He is an accomplished painter. He majored in fine arts while on a football scholarship at New York University. His works hang in the Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan Museum in New York and the Smithsonian Institution.

Despite his confidence and the success of the show, he said: "No one in television who cares about his work is totally satisfied. You have to make compromises. It's the sonet form. You get 14 lines and that's it."

A Doctor Answers Your Most-Asked Dieting Questions

Which Celebrities Do You Like Best? It's Voting Time!

Mr. Benny photographed especially for Family Weekly by Roddy McDowall

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR HELEN HAYES

I keep reading that you are going to retire from acting, and then I see you appear in another part. When will you* really *retire?—J. D. F., Indio, Calif.

● For the last several years I have been trying to retire by burning all of my bridges. That's why I made so many announcements that I wouldn't act anymore—to embarrass myself sufficiently so I wouldn't go back to work! But it hasn't succeeded. All along I've had this inner feeling that the theater is not good for me anymore, because whenever I've appeared in a play recently, I've become ill. The last time, I got so sick that I ended up in the hospital. The doctor told me that I was allergic to theater dust. Now, at least, I've made up my mind that I will no longer act in the theater. But I do plan to continue acting in television and movies.

FOR JACK NICKLAUS

Many experts say you're a greater golfer than Bobby Jones and point to the fact that you've won more titles than he did. What's your reaction?—Michael Mathewson, Austin, Texas

● Bobby Jones won his major titles in a much shorter period of time than I did. There's no way of telling how many he would have won if he'd taken as many shots as I have.

FOR PAT MORROW,
Rita Jacks Harrington of "Peyton Place"

I read in Family Weekly that you are interested in politics. Isn't this unusual for a woman—especially an actress on "Peyton Place"?—M. N., Columbus, Ohio

● I come from a family of lawyers, and when I was a little girl my grandfather had us watching "Meet the Press" every Sunday. At the dinner table, we children were not allowed to talk. While the adult conversation went on, we listened—so my political ambitions began early. Besides, I was taught I should pay back to America what I was blessed with.

FOR JULIET PROWSE

How do you keep such a marvelous figure? Do you keep dieting all the time?—F. S. S., Watsonville, Calif.

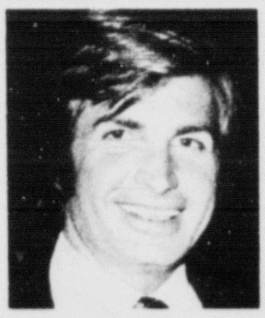

● I used to. Whenever I was on layoff between television shows or films I put on weight. Once I even put on eight pounds in two months! But since I had my baby a year ago, I no longer have any such problems. Don't ask me why, because I don't know.

FOR MONTY HALL of "Let's Make a Deal"

Is the money you give out on the stage real or fake?—James R. Schlegel, Dubuque, Iowa

● It's real. But in case you're wondering if I carry lots of money in my pocket during the show, the answer is no. Between deals, an associate backstage gives me the money I will use in the next deal, and then I return what is not used when the deal is completed. For very large amounts, we use checks.

FOR GEORGE HAMILTON

I saw you in "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing," and you played such a weak-spirited, foolish character. How does it feel to play character parts after having been a leading man for so long?—N. Koenig, Ft. Mitchell, Ky.

● It's true I've been a leading man since I was 18, but I like playing the heavy. In fact, I think I'm better suited for it. Besides, Burt Reynolds deserved to play the lead.

FOR SEN. SAM J. ERVIN (D-N.C.)

I hear you want to make the Department of Justice independent of the Executive branch. That sounds good in light of Watergate, but would it be constitutional?—B. Foustin, Cedar Falls, Iowa

● Yes. The office of Attorney General was established by the Judiciary Act of 1789. It was not until 1870 that the Department of Justice was established by act of Congress. The time has come for Congress to seek ways to improve the administration of justice and to insure its independence and fairness.

FOR SUSAN DEY, Laurie on "The Partridge Family"

Do you think the new morality has made you freer than your mother?—D. A. A., Appleton, Wis.

● Yes, of course. But if I had lived in her day, I'd probably have been as she was. I hate to use the phrase "society dictates," but it seems to be true. Society does change. And because of changing attitudes, I am probably less restricted than my mother was at my age.

FOR SEN. BARRY GOLDWATER (R-Ariz.)

I keep hearing we've got too many generals and not enough troops in our armed forces. Just how top-heavy are we?—Thomas Lang, Canton, Ohio

● We aren't at all top-heavy. Of the leading military countries of the world, with the exception of the Soviet Union (material cannot be gathered on them), the U.S. has 54 generals and admirals per 100,000 active-duty servicemen. Only one country in the world has fewer, and that's West Germany with 47.

FOR SEN. THOMAS F. EAGLETON (D-Mo.)

Fuel shortage or not, I thought we had some sort of price controls. What's going on?—G. G. S., Logansport, Ind.

● Some increase in the price of fuel was predictable in the wake of the Arab oil boycott and the general increase in the price of imported crude oil. But I can't find any reason for the kind of increases now being freely passed to the American people. I think the Administration should order an immediate rollback of the latest round of price increases, followed by a top-to-bottom investigation of possible profit-gouging by the oil industry.

Can you spot the Camel Filters smoker?

© 1973 R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

1. Sorry. Meet "Clean Ed" Mealmangel, discount diner owner. Gimmick: Leaves his thumb print in mashed potatoes. Smokes ABL's "Any Brand Left" in the ash trays. 2. No. And no. Tex'n'Tilly, icky-poo radio-TV personalities. Gimmick: If it moves, interview it. They once even used a stethoscope to talk to a mole. 3. Jerry Jibroni. Spends so much time setting up, he never sees parade. Smokes cigarettes so super-long he almost needs binoculars to light them. 4. He's Tom Thump. His bass drum really is a gimmick: Can't stand the noise, but he likes to wear it. Puts cotton in his ears and in his cigarette filters. 5. Right. He enjoys the passing parade, without any gimmicks. That's why he smokes Camel Filters. They're good tasting, easy and honest. His kind of cigarette. 6. He's "Sweeps" Streate. Hopes mounted police won't parade. But they always do.

Toyota introduces ESP.

ESP is a built-in feature located above the driver.

Toyota created ESP to monitor 11 key service areas. If just one of them needs attention, ESP pops a light on to let you know. Before you find out the hard way.

So if your brake pads are wearing thin, or your brake fluid level is low or your brake vacuum booster is losing pressure, ESP tells you. If you need oil, or water in your battery or radiator, ESP warns you. And if one of your stoplights burns out, ESP is the first to let you know. Even in the daytime.

ESP works constantly when the car is running. And it gives you advance warning. So you can correct the problem before it becomes critical.

ESP is standard equipment on the Corona Hardtops. It's a built-in feature located above the driver. To check the system, turn the key, and ESP lights up momentarily to show you that it's working.

We designed ESP to save you both time and money. But there's more. We feel that ESP takes a lot of the worry out of caring for a car. And to us, that's important. A real innovation. But then, that's what you'd expect from Toyota.

How Not to Raise Your Kids

The Candid Confessions of a Permissive Parent

By Sloan Wilson
Especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

FAMILY WEEKLY/Elizabeth Gee

Sloan Wilson, surrounded by his children, David, Rebecca, Jessica and Lisa. He says, "My three daughters and my son survived and prospered by the grace of God, their mother and their ability to ignore almost everything I said."

Any library has shelves bulging with books by people who claim to know everything about how to raise children. But I am probably the only self-proclaimed expert on how not to do it. My credentials may in some ways be suspect, since my four children, who range in age from 27 to nine, are doing surprisingly well, but that's not because I didn't make every mistake in the book. My three daughters and my son survived and prospered by the grace of God, their mother and their ability to ignore almost everything I said.

Now one big mistake you can make when you raise children is to believe you know what you're doing. Young educated women who read a lot of books on child psychology often make this mistake, and so do old ladies with dozens of grandchildren, and so do writers like me. The truth is that the development of a child, like its birth, is fundamentally a mystery that has to be approached with awe and respect, not brash self-confidence. What works for one child may not work for another, and what works for one parent may not work for another. The reason that children are not born with sets of directions for raising them is that the emotions of human beings are too complex to be put into words.

Another big mistake you can make is to admit you don't really know how to raise them. Fathers cannot just go around blurting out the truth all the time, because children expect them to have some sort of wisdom and self-confidence. If you spank a child, you have to pretend that you're dead sure that that is the right thing to do, and if you let little Johnny smash his sister in the face with a toy train without anything but a gentle reprimand, you have to pretend that you're dead sure that this is the best way to teach self-discipline. Parents by nature have to be fakers, and that's why children are created in such a way that they really remain quite stupid for five or six years at least. If kids realized how little their parents know and how little self-confidence any intelligent mother or father has, they would be too scared to grow up at all.

"I was extremely thankful for the fact that my children turned out to be rebels, not against society, but against me, and all the permissive fathers like me. Somebody, they said, had to set the rules, and if I couldn't, they would."

Almost everybody knows nowadays that one of the worst mistakes a parent can make is being too strict. This is the way my parents ruined me. Back in the twenties, when I was raised, mothers were warned by doctors to avoid spoiling their children. Following the best scientific advice of her time, my mother gave me a bottle of milk every four hours when I was an infant, and if I got hungry before feeding time, I was just forced to cry it out—a process that, I am told, almost drove my parents and the neighbors crazy.

Cuddling a baby a lot was also supposed to spoil it. And devoted mothers spent a great deal of time keeping everything that might touch their infants surgically clean, because they knew about germs, but had not yet heard much about antibodies.

Toilet training became a grim struggle between every conscientious mother and baby. There were no sugarcoated pills in those days. When my mother decided that I needed castor oil, which the unfortunate young of that period were supposed to require frequently, she held my nose until I had to open my mouth for air and then jammed in a tablespoon of the horrible stuff. Later I had a nursemaid who washed out my mouth with soap whenever I said a bad word. When I was rude to adults, I got spanked with an ivory hairbrush, the back of which was carved with garlands of flowers I still remember vividly. When, at the age of 12, I went hunting with a shotgun my father had told me not to touch, he hit me hard with his belt. I never did that again.

My education about sex consisted almost entirely of the word don't. My father was the descendent of eight generations of New England preachers and schoolmasters, and he strongly felt that sex was for married people and nobody else. All a boy had to know, he thought, was the dire results of sin. He didn't talk to me about it much, but he used vivid language, and I got the general impression that if I kissed a pretty girl, she would have a baby on the spot and I would turn blue and drop dead.

When I got married some years later, it seemed clear to me that though my parents had been well meaning, my early youth had been unduly miserable and their methods simply had not worked. Despite my mother's valiant efforts to avoid spoiling me, my wife kept saying I was the most spoiled man she had ever met. The strict emphasis on cleanliness in my early youth had left me with an unabashed love of sloppiness. I read a lot of the new books on child care and thought I found authority for doing in reverse almost everything my parents had done.

My children were allowed to eat whenever they wanted to and almost anything they desired. It had been discovered that children toilet train themselves and that a child's body is good at fighting the germs that scared my mother so much. The medicines my children took were made to look and taste like candy. When they said dirty words, I knew that was natural, and sometimes they sounded sort of cute, so I just laughed.

Permissive Parent

As my children grew older, I gave them so many clinical details about sex and prattled so much about the beauty of it all that they soon begged me to stop. There must be something else interesting to talk about, my son said when he was about 12, and I found myself calling him a prude.

In my permissive plan for bringing up children, I had a lot of support from most of my friends in the suburbs where we lived, and some went a lot further than I did. One physician I knew was proud of equipping his 16-year-old daughter with birth-control materials and advising her to enjoy love and youth without guilt. My faith in permissive parenthood began to be shaken when his child went from promiscuous sex to heavy drugs to a serious breakdown, all before she was 20. I was also shocked when the son of another friend of mine was hit on the head by a policeman when he was caught trying to burn down a college building. It wasn't the crime or the punishment that astonished me so much as the young man's surprise. He apparently thought he could express his political beliefs by trying to burn down a building and could attack a policeman without anyone saying no and forcibly restraining him. The discovery that the world was not as permissive as his home seemed profoundly unfair to him.

Of course many of the children of the permissive parents I knew turned out fine, but there was more trouble in those suburbs where so many of us had moved for the sake of the kids than I ever could have imagined. Despite the much-advertised advent of the Pill and sex education, the local schools reported an alarmingly high rate of juvenile pregnancy and venereal disease. We started being scared by reports of marijuana in the high schools and ended by being terrified by reports of elementary school students experimenting with LSD. I was extremely thankful for the fact that my children turned out to be rebels, not against society, but against me, and all the permissive fathers like me. Somebody, they said, had to set the rules, and if I couldn't, they would. Some of their friends called them stuffy little squares, but my older children went on to good colleges and careers.

The fact is that a parent can ruin his children by being too strict and also by being too permissive. I have never found a way to map out a middle ground. Doctors and experts on child care are of almost no help because they follow as well as create the fashions of their era. My mother was following the best scientific advice available when she was so strict. Thirty years later the experts emphasized the need for love so much that my wife hardly dared to put our first daughter down long enough to cook a meal. Now the pendulum seems to be swinging back. Dr. Benjamin Spock once told me, when I interviewed him, that mothers follow the dictates of their hearts, not their heads, and he doubted that any book could change a woman's conduct. The fact that some people are too hardhearted and others too softhearted is a problem he did not answer.

"If kids realized how little their parents know and how little self-confidence any intelligent mother or father has, they would be too scared to grow up at all."

Now that I have, in the person of my nine-year-old daughter Jessica, a second chance at fatherhood, I find that I don't know much more than I did with my firstborn 27 years ago. I try to avoid the crime of vacillating unpredictably between too much strictness and too much permissiveness, but when Jessica makes me angry by making too much noise when I'm working, I'm much tougher than when she annoys somebody else. Jessica has already begun to suspect that I have no idea what I'm doing, but her mother feels that one hug is worth more than a thousand words, and when I make mistakes, Jessie goes to her. The child recently said that she always knew I loved her, because when she did something bad I yelled so horribly, but then I always came in and said I was sorry. No book on child care could recommend such a procedure, but sometimes even the mistakes work.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

IN THIS GRIND-EM-OUT WORLD, IS THERE SUCH A THING AS A QUALITY CIGARETTE?

If the cigarette is Kent there is.

We try to get rid of any taste-robbing imperfections before a Kent ever sees the light of a match. (Over 200 different quality checks in the manufacturing end, alone.)

But Kent quality goes beyond that.

We go to 3 continents, 4 countries and 10 states to find the right kind of tobaccos for the milder Kent blend.

To complement this blend, we even invented our own filter, the famous Micronite filter—to smooth the flavor of Kent.

Why are we such sticklers about how Kent is made?

Because, that way we can give you the mild, smooth taste that makes Kent what it is: America's quality cigarette.

King Size or Deluxe 100's.

Micronite filter.
Mild, smooth taste.
America's quality cigarette.
Kent.

Why Models Stay Young Till Sixty!

Revealed at last! By the world's most beautiful women—who make their living by being, and staying, young! What they really do to:

—add not a single pound to their figures, even though they add five, ten, twenty or thirty candles to their birthday cakes!

—rinse so much shine into their hair that it has to be powdered down so it doesn't glare into the TV cameras!

—smooth out ugly veins from their hands and feet, in exactly the same way that they smooth out ugly lines from their necks and faces!

These Beauty Secrets—And Dozens More Just Like Them—Earn These Women Up To $100 An Hour! Now They Are YOURS For Only A Few Pennies Apiece!

What we are offering you, in fact, is the world's first "inside" manual on how ordinary women (with perhaps a slightly better face and a slightly better figure than yours) are transformed overnight into stunning beauties! With pounds carved painlessly off their figures! Years smoothed effortlessly off their faces! Every good feature perfected, and every bad feature either corrected or disguised!

And then—when the absolute exquisite face-figure has been created out of the raw girl who first came into the studio—this dazzling physical beauty is then "frozen" against time and weight-gain-of-even-an-ounce for ten . . . twenty . . . even forty years!

For great models are not born; they are made! (On page 10 of this eye-opening volume, you are taken behind-the-scenes in the most glamorous "sorority" in the world, and you are shown that there is scarcely a model alive who did not need to have ten or twenty pounds whisked off her figure, and a major transformation made on her face, before a top model agency offered her a contract!)

But these women made themselves slim, and made themselves radiant far more cleverly and easily than you have ever dreamed. Let us prove that to you right now:

Take Slimming, For Example! How Would You Like To Eat What You Want, When You Want It—And Still Get And Stay Slim Forever!

Let us just quote one of the models whose "forever-young, forever-slim" secrets are revealed here! She says, quite frankly, "I positively adore food. And I never, but never, starve myself. Yet I weigh the same today as when I started modelling more than ten years ago." (Italics ours.)

Why? Because she uses the "Self-Maintaining Diet"! The diet that's fun, that's the happiest of adventures! That actually tames, overnight, those sudden wild urges that destroy your figure! That re-educates your taste buds and your metabolism, so that you find yourself able to eat what you want, when you want it, without gaining so much as an ounce—and (at least at the beginning) losing as much as a pound a day!

Using this diet strategy, food becomes an ally rather than an enemy! It fills you up, but never out! Using this strategy, one model went from 140 pounds to 123 pounds in well under a single month—and she still ate what she pleased on weekends!

Using this strategy, every other model (with the exception of one or two) who faithfully followed it for ten days lost ten big pounds—to start! Another (a perfectionist) went from 133 to 97 pounds! Another, who was bottom-heavy, not only shed ugly pounds all over her body—but spot-exercised the flab right off her bottom so perfectly that she now does bathing suit ads!

For example:

Of all women, a successful model must always be a healthy, sexually vibrant, powerhouse of energy! She must be able to "turn on the dazzle" at a moment's notice—despite the fact that she has been dashing all over the city, toting pounds of clothes, a make-up kit, and often a wig box! Here are the "glamour vitamins" that turn on such amazing stores of physical vitality—ready to go to work for you within seconds after you read page 42!

Nor can an $80-an-hour model afford the slightest trace of dandruff! After trying all the expensive treatments and preparations, here's how they simply rinse the ugly flakes away, at home, in seconds—for pennies! (Page 63.)

And glasses are out too! Weak eyes, aging eyes, dull eyes can cost a model her career! These top models believe that most women take to spectacles simply because of lazy eye muscles, just as most women take to girdles because of lazy body muscles! And if you want to escape the "eyeglass-prison"—perhaps far faster than you've ever dreamed—check page 68 the moment you get this book!

And how about strong, sexy teeth! Did you ever hear, for example, of the new sealants that can be applied to your teeth in seconds, to shield them from harmful bacteria! (See page 73.)

SPECIAL BONUS SECTION: Tips from top hand models that may solve your rough, red problem forever! They say bluntly that there is simply no excuse any longer for hands that are anything else but silken smooth—and nails that are as strong as steel! One glance at the "magic" hand exercises on page 81 may convince you, for good!

PLUS, of course, the same "million-dollar know-how" for your feet as well! Including a natural-fruit way to keep their skin exquisitely white and fine-pored! And a simple little action that builds a natural-shield against calluses right into them!

Just MOVE the way you're shown on pages 89 to 103 . . . and watch inches seem to evaporate into thin air—as though you could practically "smile" them away!

Here are special, super-effective slimmers for the stomach, legs, hips, calves, derriere, arms, bosom—and especially that embarrassing "below-stomach bulge" that otherwise grows larger and larger! Also two startling "firmer-uppers" for neck lines and for bags under your eyes that you must try at once if you suffer from either one!

How to achieve the illusion of a near-perfect face (for example, if you have a receding chin, how to "add" to it in seconds) . . .

And Much, Much More! But Read Them All—Prove Them All, From Cover To Cover—Without Risking A Penny!

This book is for people who want to get things done! You owe it to yourself to try it! We take all the risk! Why not send in the coupon—TODAY!

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

The last time I saw Jack Benny was in his beautifully furnished, immaculate Beverly Hills mansion. This time I faced him across his cluttered desk in his Beverly Hills office. He turned 80 on Valentine's Day, and we began talking about his proposed retirement.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Tell the truth now—could you ever think of yourself as not working?

BENNY: Let me put it this way. I could retire up to a certain point. And I'll tell you what that point is. If I made a business of my concerts—and you know I give concerts for charity all the time—if I could do enough throughout the year, then I could probably retire. You see, I LOVE to play the violin. But I also love to get laughs. And I love to talk. So when I give a concert, I can do everything I do in Las Vegas. The difference is, the people who come to concerts are pretty sophisticated—the same people who maybe come to hear Isaac Stern, or Heifetz. In fact, Isaac Stern acts as an agent for me because he tells me where they need the money. I always say he gets ten percent of nothing.

"Everybody knows my stinginess is a joke. But in order to compensate, it costs me a bloody fortune!"

FW: What do you think of today's permissiveness—particularly in movies?

BENNY: It's too bad. Producers are taking the easy way out. And the fact that the films are rated means nothing to me. I mean, either a picture should be permitted to be shown, or not, and not have an X rating or a G rating, or however they rate them.

FW: During the last election there was a Proposition 18 in California that, if passed, would have prohibited the showing of a lot of films. What did you think of that?

BENNY: I voted no because while I don't like obscene films, I don't want censorship. Of any kind, anywhere. Otherwise someone can suddenly say, "Well, we don't want this Jewish joke!" or "We don't want this Italian joke." If a proposition like that went through, there's no telling how far censorship would go!

FW: As you grow older, are you growing more conservative?

BENNY: Not if conservative means stingy, careful with money. This I have never been. Neither has my wife. If I had, I should be the richest actor in show business. But politically—well, I am not a party man. I've never been a Democrat or a Republican. I don't want to get hooked, I guess—I just want to vote for who is right.

FW: You say you aren't stingy. How did that joke start?

BENNY: By accident. In one of my old shows there were a couple of jokes about my being stingy. The audience laughed. A little later, when I did a weekly show, we used the same gag and it worked again. All of a sudden I became a stingy character. And then I realized how humorous it was, an element that is easy to laugh at. It's easy to relate to.

FW: Has this ever gotten out of hand?

BENNY: Sometimes when I do guest shots, they plan on doing too much, and I'll say, "Hey, wait a minute, fellas! I can't be stingy throughout the entire show! There must be other things to do." I'm so identified with it now that I don't have to spell it out anymore. For instance, on the Dean Martin show I walk into a restaurant and a reporter comes out and says there's a big comet in the air and it's going to hit the earth in about five minutes and the earth will be destroyed. I don't say a word, but I go to the phone, and I say to the operator, "Who do I see? I just put a dime in the phone box. . . ." I don't have to go any further. Just my going to the phone gets the laugh.

FW: Did anyone ever take your stinginess seriously?

BENNY: No. Everybody seems to know it's a joke. But in order to compensate, it costs me a bloody fortune! Even with charities. I'm forced into giving a lot more than I can afford sometimes.

FW: How about your insistence that you are 39 years old? How did that get started?

"I don't give a hoot how much people liked me on radio or in vaudeville. That's gone."

BENNY: I kept the year 37 for a couple of years. When I was 38, I kept that up for about another three years. Then when I got to be 39, for some reason or other we thought 39 was a funny number. Also, a lot of little kids think that when you are 40, you are an old man. And who wants to be old?

FW: Did anyone ever object to your growing older than 39?

BENNY: Well, once we decided, for the publicity, to have a big 40th birthday. You can't imagine the letters I received, including one from The Christian Science Monitor, begging me not to do it. The Monitor's letter wasn't humorously written, it was serious. They said that most people know my right age [Jack was born Benny Kubelsky on February 14, 1894]; but the people say, "Well, if Benny stays 39 and keeps working, I can keep on working, too!" So I stayed 39. But we don't play that bit much anymore. Or the Maxwell car joke. That's old stuff now—it's become corny.

FW: You don't look much older now than you did 20 years ago. How do you manage to stay in such good shape?

BENNY: Luckily I don't care much about eating. I love breakfast, but after that I can go on practically nothing. And I play golf—not as much or as well as I used to. But I think the most important thing is to do things mentally. I love to work.

FW: You once told me that one of the reasons you stayed young was because your grandchildren kept you young. Is that still the case?

BENNY: Maybe that was right at the time, but today I feel it's my work that keeps me young. I like practically everything I do, and I don't delve into myself. I don't give a hoot how much people liked me on radio or in vaudeville. That's gone. And when somebody asks me, "What did you like best, radio or television?" I say, "When I was in radio, I liked radio. But I couldn't wait to get into television. If there is something after television, that's what I will like!" You don't live for yesterday or even today. You live for tomorrow.

FW: Did the fact that you and Mary worked together for such a long time help your marriage?

BENNY: Yes. But you know, it was quite by accident that we became a team. When I met her she was selling ladies' hosiery at the May Company. In those days a lot of comedians would bring a girl out onstage to work for them. They were supposed to be dumb girls. All the comedians had dumb girls. Well, one day the one working for me became ill and Mary knew the part, and I said, "You know, you could do this beautifully!" And she did.

FW: After that, did you teach her a lot about the business?

BENNY: Mary's knowledge about show business is absolutely amazing. She claims she learned certain things from me, which she probably did, but there are certain things that you instinctively have to do correctly to succeed. Like she would know enough not to try hard for jokes, that if it was written correctly on paper all she had to do was read it. That's why Ronald Colman and his wife were great on my show. They were dramatic actors, but all they did was read the comedy lines exactly as they were written.

What Happened In Palliser Bay!

The growing fields of Southern Auckland are located in Palliser Bay and there New Zealand's Horticulture Experts married Brazil's tree tomato to the fertile rain forests of New Zealand.

South America's luscious tree tomato was discovered by Brazilian Indians; brought to richest, fullest flavor and lushness by Portuguese missionaries; and hybridized to a super-resistant super-easy-to-grow variety.

There are 30 different varieties of tree tomatoes in South America but only one is the lushest, most delicious and easiest-to-grow of them all! And that one was made over after four years of hybridizing at Palliser Bay — working with various universities — discarding weaker, keeping stronger strains — until the final super variety was ready for you.

Each seedling grows to 3 or 4 ft. indoors or up to 8 ft. outdoors or you can stop the growth of the tree at any height you wish between 3 and 8 feet. It is super disease-resistant.

Imagine stunning exotic-shaped leaves up to one foot long! Imagine the constant changing show. First the lovely leaves — then a shower of delicate, fragrant flowers — and finally a beautiful array of juicy luscious tomatoes.

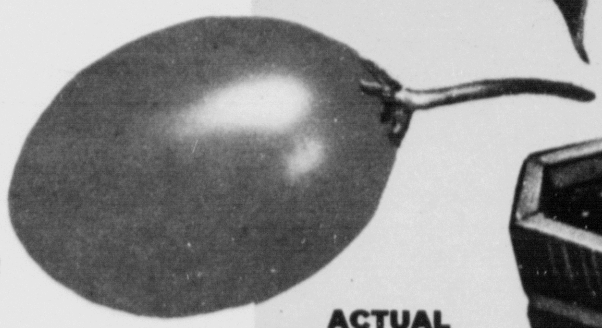

And so prolific that as one crop ripens, Mother Nature sees to it that another crop is taking its place, and this fruiting period goes on for five months.

16 Answers To The Questions Dieters Ask Most

Answered by the Doctor Behind The "Computer Diet" Program

By Evan Frances

If you are like most Americans, you are currently on a diet, you have recently abandoned a diet, or you are considering going on a diet tomorrow (or next week, or next month). And, if you are like most Americans, it has not worked, is not working, or will not work.

How come? We asked a renowned medical authority on obesity, Georgina Faludi, M.D., Director of the Obesity and Diabetic Clinics at Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital in Philadelphia. The Hungarian-born Dr. Faludi has studied the cases of thousands of frustrated dieters in the course of her distinguished career. She knows just about every reason (and excuse) for failure in the book. She also knows the nutritional hazards of dieting. And she has invented what she feels is the answer—a new individualized diet program wherein the dieter's regimen is mapped out by a computer capable of making 600,000 separate calculations a second!

Marvin Koner

Dr. Georgina Faludi

Here are some of the most-asked questions Dr. Faludi encounters—the kind that helped her formulate her program—plus more facts about how the computerized program works:

1. Do you think most fat people eat from loneliness, lack of self-esteem or frustration?

Yes—from one or more or a combination of all. The trick is to do something about it. Join a club, change your job, or if you can't do that, learn a new skill or hobby or craft. Start a weight-whittlers group, meet once a week and weigh in "publicly." Don't spend the evening talking about weight. Once the weighing is over, plan to go to a movie or have a discussion about a best seller or a headline story. Then reward your top-loser by paying his or her movie ticket or by giving him or her the best seller.

2. How can I keep myself from midnight-snacking?

If willpower alone won't do it, keep sliced carrots or celery in ice water in a see-through glass jar up front in your refrigerator so they're the first thing you see when you open that verboten door. Also—wrap no-no's in opaque paper and keep them way back in the refrigerator.

3. Must I stop using salt?

No, but use it sparingly. There's enough salt in food without you adding it. If the taste is flat, try lemon-pepper, onion powder, garlic powder, basil and other herbs. They add fillip to foods without adding calories. In any case, promise not to add salt before tasting your food.

4. I never eat breakfast. Must I?

Skipping meals is not good practice. You may not notice it, but you build up an appetite for the next meal and overeat then. If you skip breakfast, your daily consumption will usually be higher than normal. And, although skipping may make you feel noble at the time, by the end of the day you'll be irritable and mad at yourself. This kind of thing is destructive—does terrible damage to a diet regimen.

5. How much should I lose?

There's no general rule. Statistical tables are for the majority. It's a good idea to ask your doctor what he considers an ideal weight for you. When you begin to diet, you'll lose weight

320 almost secret ways to get something back for your tax dollars right away!

by Gary Halbert

Dear Taxpayer:

What do you get?

The "poor" get federal housing, food stamps, and other welfare benefits. The rich get oil depletion allowances, lower interest rate loans, and expense accounts.

What do you get?

The answer to that one is easy. YOU GET TO PAY TAXES! Isn't that nice? It is a bit depressing, isn't it? To work so hard for your money and then each year give Uncle Sam a bigger and bigger share of it.

What can you do about it?

Well, you could always cheat. Or move to another country.

But seriously, if you are already claiming all of the legitimate deductions you are entitled to, there is still something you should do. And that is...MAKE SURE THAT YOU ARE GETTING EVERY PENNY'S WORTH OF GOVERNMENT BENEFITS THAT YOUR HARD-EARNED DOLLARS ARE PAYING FOR!

Millions of Americans just like you are already collecting on them. For example, RIGHT NOW, you and your family may well qualify for one, several or all of these government benefits:

- $5,000 in government loans at below market interest rates—if you know how to apply for the loans!
- Full scholarships and other financial assistance for education. Uncle Sam is paying good money just to locate deserving students!
- Low cost insurance. You can save hundreds of dollars with special government policies!
- A 5-acre vacation hideaway for you and your family. Prices begin as low as $25 an acre!
- Social Security benefits before you reach your sixties. One and a half million children receive social security checks each month!
- Free employment assistance if you are having trouble finding a job because you're not a youngster anymore!
- Free help from the U.S. Secret Service to protect you against counterfeit money and forged checks!
- Free plans and architectural designs for 12 different structures—from a 3-bedroom house to a boat landing!
- A $25,000 start-your-own-business loan, with 15 years to pay it back!
- Free aptitude tests (that would cost you up to $25) to find the job you are best suited for!
- 25% to 75% of your rent paid by Uncle Sam—if you qualify and know how to apply!
- Free government land to stake your claim when prospecting for gold, silver or other valuable minerals!
- Free government service to help you locate lost marriage or divorce records!
- Free protection for your children against hazardous toys provided by the government Office of Consumer Affairs!
- The right to enter a fabulous government sweepstakes—a public drawing to claim oil and gas rights to public lands. Profit potential ranges from $5,000 to $75,000!

You know, a person could fill an entire report just listing little-known government benefits that are available to every U.S. citizen. I know, because with the help of a friend, I did. It's titled "HOW TO GET WHAT THE U.S. GOVERNMENT OWES YOU". It has 320 government benefits that most people have never heard of. But it doesn't just list them, mind you, it tells you how to get them! It tells you how to qualify, who to contact (including all necessary addresses) and what to say.

I am thinking about publishing the report in a hard cover edition selling for around $8.95. Perhaps I will. But this has been a labor of love for me. And right now I'd like the satisfaction of immediately getting the information into the hands of as many short-changed taxpayers as possible. So I've had a local printer reproduce the manuscript in report form and bind it with a soft cover. And I am offering it, personally, direct, by mail, for only $3.00.

If you are interested, please let me know right away as I have only ordered a small press run.

P.S. If you don't take advantage of these benefits, you are only cheating yourself. After all, you've already paid for them. So, order today and see for yourself the hundreds of FREE and inexpensive things the government has for YOU and your family!

P.P.S. The government comes out with new benefits nearly every day. To keep you up to date, I will send you information on them every other month for the next 12 months. This information comes in a small special publication called The Good News Hot Line. There is no extra charge for this.

Dieters' Questions

rapidly; then, as you continue, you'll probably slow down to two pounds a week. Later still, you may only lose a pound or so a week. Don't forget: A pound a week is 52 pounds a year!

6. I've been told fish is a dieter's best friend. Why?

Because pound for pound fish has far fewer calories and just as much protein as choice beef. And by the way, another "best friend" is water. You can't drink too much of it. Drinking water not only helps ward off constipation, but taken before meals, a glass of water inhibits your appetite. Sip it slowly—in fact, learn to sip all liquids and chew all foods slowly.

7. If I eat healthy food, why do I have to control my portions?

Because a properly balanced diet means eating the correct portions of food from each of the food groups.

8. Is saccharin safe to use?

It has been used for many years. If you must sweeten your coffee or tea, saccharin is the best bet.

9. Can I include margarine in my diet instead of butter?

They have precisely the same number of calories. But diet margarine has more water and therefore fewer calories. Whenever possible, avoid butter, margarine or diet margarine. Use non-stick coated pans for frying.

10. Why is buttermilk okay if butter isn't?

Buttermilk is what's left over when the butter is taken out. It is an excellent source of protein and has fewer calories than either butter or milk. Try to cultivate a taste for it.

11. Can I use a cream substitute in my coffee?

No. Most such substitutes are made with vegetable oils and have as many calories as cream. Learn to like black coffee or tea with lemon. After two weeks, you'll never miss the cream or milk.

12. Must I do without ice cream forever?

No—not after you reach your ideal weight. For now, substitute ice milk or give yourself a "malted" treat before bedtime by electric-blending one cup of modified skim milk with two ice cubes, a powdered-sugar substitute and/or two rings of canned, unsweetened pineapple or four fresh strawberries or a tablespoon of instant coffee or a teaspoon of vanilla extract.

13. If I try your computer diet, do I have to eat everything on it?

No, but in order to keep a balanced nutrition you should eat at least a part of everything prescribed. Try not to make up for the difference you missed. Just because you skipped something at lunch does not entitle you to a bigger dinner.

14. Do I have to count calories?

No—the computer has done that for you. We just want you to make certain you measure amounts prescribed and adhere to them.

15. Why is this diet better than the "new revolutionary" no-carbohydrate diet I read so much about?

Because any diet that deprives you of essential food ingredients or nutrients is unhealthy. There is a certain amount of protein, carbohydrate and fat needed for your general well-being and maintenance of health. It is possible to lose weight faster in the beginning on a crash diet, but there is no diet that is safer for you than our individually-computed-for-your-needs diet. Besides, our diet alters your eating habits for life.

16. Can my friend go on the same diet I go on?

No—this computerized diet is tailored for you. Your friend would do better to get a diet calculated for her—one that takes cognizance of her food preferences, her bone structure and her life-style.

Why haven't you gotten the message?

There were a lot of people ready for Vantage when we were ready with Vantage. And you wouldn't believe how quickly they began buying them up.

Apparently, many smokers were concerned about 'tar' and nicotine and wanted to smoke a cigarette that reduced 'tar' and nicotine without reducing flavor.

And that's the idea behind Vantage Filter. It gives you the flavor of a full-flavor cigarette. Without anywhere near the 'tar' and nicotine. And it does that better than any other cigarette on the market.

With one exception. Vantage Menthol.

But the problem with Vantage Menthol is that a lot of smokers don't even know that there is a Vantage Menthol.

And there we failed.

In our effort to let smokers know about Vantage, we allowed our menthol to play second fiddle.

Vantage Menthol has the cool fresh taste all menthol smokers go for, and at the same time reduces 'tar' to 11 milligrams and nicotine to 0.9 milligrams.

Now we don't want to fool you. You will find a few menthol brands with lower numbers, but you won't find one that you'll enjoy smoking as much.

Vantage Menthol is here.

If you're ready for us, we're ready for you.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Filter: 10 mg. "tar," 0.8 mg. nicotine, Menthol: 11 mg. "tar," 0.9 mg. nicotine—av. per cigarette, FTC Report Sept. '73.

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen makes a pot roast in plastic roasting wrap. Marilyn says: "Cooking in the heat-proof plastic keeps in moisture and vitamins, and makes cleaning up easier, too!"

Lemon Wedge
Dinner Special Pot Roast*
Buttered Green Beans*
Assorted Pickles
Whole Wheat Bread
Butter or Margarine
Baked Apples with Raisins*
Coffee Tea Milk

*Recipe given

Ready for the family: Dinner Special Pot Roast surrounded by vegetables makes good eating. Other go-withs are whole green beans, baked apples and whole wheat bread.

DINNER SPECIAL POT ROAST

Clear cooking wrap with foil edges
3 lbs. beef, brisket or round
1 envelope from 2¾-oz. pkg. dry onion-soup mix
1 tablespoon flour
1 lb. carrots (about 4-5), quartered
2 lbs. potatoes (about 4-5), peeled
1 green pepper, seeded and slivered
¼ lb. fresh mushrooms, rinsed and sliced

1. Preheat oven to 400°F. Line a large 1½-2-inch-deep roasting pan with cooking wrap long enough to enclose Dinner, plus 3-inch overlap.
2. Trim meat of excess fat. Center meat on wrap in pan, sprinkle soup mix and flour around it.
3. Surround with vegetables.
4. Double-fold wrap, leaving 3-inch overlap, and seal foil edges; pierce wrap on top with meat fork 6 times.
5. Bake 1¾ hours, or until meat is tender and vegetables and potatoes are cooked through.
6. Unfold wrap carefully. Serve Dinner from wrap if you like or arrange it on platter. Makes 6 servings

BUTTERED GREEN BEANS

Clear cooking wrap with foil edges
1 lb. fresh, stemmed, whole green beans
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
4 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, if desired

1. Place green beans on sheet of cooking wrap long enough to loosely enclose vegetables, plus making a 3-inch overlap. Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with water; dot with butter.
2. Double-fold plain edges of cooking wrap and foil ends to form package.
3. To cook in oven: Pierce top of wrap with meat fork a few times. Place package in pan and cook with meats about 30-35 minutes, depending upon oven temperature for meat roasting.
4. To cook on range: Place package in skillet with 1 inch boiling water. Cover; cook about 15-20 minutes, or until tender. Keep water boiling in pan at 1 inch throughout cooking time. Makes 4-6 servings

Editor's note: We don't suggest cooking more than 1 lb. beans in package. To cook more, use another package.

BAKED APPLES WITH RAISINS

Clear cooking wrap with foil edges
6 (2½-3 lbs.) medium Rome Beauty or Greening apples, washed and cored
6 tablespoons brown sugar
6 tablespoons raisins
6 teaspoons butter or margarine
¾ cup orange juice, apple juice or cider

1. Preheat oven to 400°F. Line a 2½-inch-deep baking dish with enough cooking wrap to enclose apples, plus 3-inch overlap.
2. Place apples on wrap; fill centers with 1 tablespoon each of brown sugar and raisins, and 1 teaspoon butter. Pour orange juice over all.
3. Double-fold plain edges, making 3-inch overlap; double-fold foil edges to seal; pierce top of wrap 6 times with meat fork. Bake 25-30 minutes, or until apples are fork-tender.
4. Serve warm with syrup from pan. Makes 6 servings

an expert answers your questions about muscles

Our files show that thousands of readers like yourself want to build bulging muscles and achieve real physical power like their favorite athletic champions. How to go about it? We decided to ask an expert, Dave Prowse, 3-times British Weightlifting champion and leading fitness expert. Here are his answers.

Q. What does it take to build muscles?

A. Basically, it takes exercise. Almost any exercise will help to develop at least some of your muscles if you keep at it long enough and hard enough.

Q. Isn't there an easier way?

A. Yes. There is one outstandingly effective training method that is also fast and easy—the one I use and recommend—the new Bullworker system.

Q. What's that?

A. The Bullworker is a revolutionary new muscle-building exerciser based on Isometrics, the science that increases strength up to four times faster than conventional methods. In my opinion, it's the most advanced training system in the world today. Many leading athletes use it: World-famous Heavyweight Boxer Muhammad Ali, World Heavyweight Judo Champion Wim Ruska, and Cycling Champion Eddy Merckx, to name only a few.

Q. How long does Bullworker training take?

A. Bullworker provides absolutely the fastest kind of exercise possible. In fact, an introduction training program takes only 70 seconds a day. No other system—weightlifting, pulleys, or strenuous calisthenics—can give you results so quickly and easily. On the contrary, many old-fashioned methods take hours of sweaty, boring work each day . . . and it's often months before you begin to see improvements. Busy professional athletes and champions don't have time for that. Nobody does.

Q. How long does it take before you begin getting results?

A. With the Bullworker, you can actually begin to see and measure the positive results right from the very first day! Thanks to a built-in measuring device called the Powermeter. After every exercise you just check the reading to see exactly how much your strength has increased from the day before. There's no guesswork involved. Isometric Bullworker training can increase your power at the amazing rate of up to 4% per week! That means a 50% increase in strength in the first three months alone. And I've known many young men who have gone on to double and even triple their strength.

Q. What do those figures mean in visual terms?

A. They mean that in as little as 14 days you can actually begin to see muscle growth in a mirror and verify it with a tape measure. Every week thereafter brings ever faster growth.

Q. But to get such impressive results, don't you have to work very hard?

A. Absolutely not. That's the outstanding advantage of Isometric training . . . it's so amazingly easy! Each "Static-power" Isometric exercise takes only 7 seconds, and you barely have to move. It's not even necessary to disrobe. The Bullworker is so light and compact, it can be used at home, in the office, anywhere . . . even while watching TV! It's a great improvement over bulky, expensive weights, bicycle machines, pulleys, etc.

Built-in Powermeter
You can actually measure your musclepower g-r-o-w-i-n-g from the very first day.

Q. Can Bullworker training even develop bodies which are weak and skinny, or fat and flabby?

A. Definitely! It's been proven by thousands of men of every shape, size and age all over the world. Bullworker training helps transform weak, thin arms into rippling, muscular pillars of strength, build broad, powerful shoulders, turn flat, shallow chests into deep, manly ones, forge loose stomach flab into steel-hard, well-defined muscle . . . build that "V" shape of a real athlete, develop sturdy, contoured thighs and calves. . . . And all this in record time!

What's more, I've known skinny, shy fellows who, after just a few short weeks with Bullworker, turned into real go-getters . . . every inch a man . . . bowling girls over with their dynamism, confidence, and new found power! You really have to see the remarkable effects of Bullworker for yourself to believe them!

Q. How can our readers find out more about the Bullworker, perhaps actually try it for themselves?

A. I understand that the Bullworker distributor in the USA is now making it available—free—on a two week home-trial basis in order to introduce it to the general public. If your readers are interested in developing their bodies, in building muscles and strength faster than ever before possible, I suggest that they contact the US distributor for full details.

A-Line To Catch The Eye

Dress silhouettes are continuing to move closer to the body, like this definite eye-catcher. The wrap V-neck and top stitching, along with button detail, do their part to give this design an elegant finishing touch. You might make it in long or short sleeves in a stretch fabric or a jersey blend.

Size 12 takes approximately 3¼ yards of 44-inch material in long sleeves, 3 yards for short. Standard body measurements for size 12 are: Bust 34, Waist 25½, Hips 36.

The Doctor Lets You In

Why You Can Feel Pain In a Leg That's Not There

Perhaps you've heard that when a person loses an arm or leg, he often still feels pain in the amputated limb. This is called "phantom pain" or "phantom limb." The person does not imagine the pain—it is really there. But it is produced psychologically. How? Subconsciously, everyone has an image of how he looks—a "body image," if you will. This image tells us we have two legs, two arms and other structures. But suppose we lose the lower part of a leg. Now, nerve endings at the knee feel sensations and relay a message of pain to the brain. Our brain, patterned to keep our body image intact, interprets the sensations as coming from the missing foot. There is no successful way to treat such pain, except perhaps by suggestion, hypnosis or acupuncture (although eventually changes may take place in the central nervous system and the pain will go away by itself). It all goes to prove that the mind and the body are very complex in their interrelations.

Don't let the Spirit of '76 pass you by.

Plate Illustration Reduced. Actual Size 9"

First in a series of four superbly sculptured plates to be minted in honor of our nation's 200th anniversary in Solid Pewter and 24 Kt Gold on Pewter.

The year was 1773...and in colonial America small bands of patriots gathered together in what was to become America's Colonial Army of Independence. Now, more than 200 years later, patriotic Americans everywhere are celebrating their nation's Bicentennial of freedom.

And what better way to join in the celebration than by bringing "The Spirit of '76," struck in high bas-relief, proof-finished Pewter, into your own home. Display it with pride on your wall, mantle, or table, both as a mark of your patriotic feeling, and as an artistic masterpiece.

An Outstanding Collection

Master Sculptor Alfred Brunettin has re-created four of the most significant events in our long struggle for independence: "The Spirit of '76"; "Paul Revere's Ride"; "Betsy Ross Creates the First Flag"; and "Washington at Valley Forge." Each plate measures a full 9" in diameter.

Group them side by side on your wall. Or showcase them on the attractive custom easel that comes free with each plate and display them on your mantel or table. Together they are a living re-creation of the American Revolution which your friends and neighbors will admire and envy. You can hand them down with pride to your family for generations to come.

Your first plate, "The Spirit of '76," will be sent to you as soon as your order is received. Please remember, your order must be postmarked before July 4, 1974. No orders will be accepted after this date. Then every three months thereafter you will be notified by mail of the availability of the next plate in the series. You will be under no obligation to order. It is important to remember, however, that only those individuals who order "The Spirit of '76" Bicentennial Plate now will be given the opportunity to collect the remaining plates in this historic series.

Available in Solid Pewter and 24 Kt Gold on Pewter

Pewter has traditionally been the metal of America's finest craftsmen for over 200 years. Our first American Continental Dollar was actually fashioned from Pewter. Therefore Pewter has been selected as the most appropriate metal for this collection. It uniquely reflects the finest details of the designs struck into its surface. And its brilliance resembles fine silver.

This Plate Collection is available in your choice of Solid Pewter for just $25 per plate and 24 Kt Gold on Solid Pewter for only $40 per plate. If you prefer, you may order and pay for all four Solid Pewter plates now for just $90 complete (you save $10), or the four 24 Kt Gold on Solid Pewter plates for just $145 complete (you save $15).

Each plate in the series will be individually minted by The Hamilton Mint. Each subscriber will receive a registered Certificate of Authenticity attesting to his status as a collector of this limited edition series, as well as a free easel for display.

Remarkable Investment Opportunity

Even though prices in the International Metals Market have soared greatly during the past few years, The Hamilton Mint will commit for a sufficient quantity of Pewter and Gold to fully cover each subscription. Therefore, you are guaranteed that these prices will not be increased for any plate in this series...no matter how high the price of Pewter and Gold rise in the months ahead.

Limited edition collector plates have traditionally represented a fine investment opportunity. Certain limited edition collector plates, during the past several years, have soared in value from their original issue price. We urge you to ensure yourself of this opportunity. Your order can be accepted only if it is received before the 4th of July, 1974. Take no chances on delay. Send in your order today.

Remember, only those who subscribe to the first plate in the series—"The Spirit of '76"—will be entitled to collect the remaining three plates in the series.

Deluxe Version: 24 Kt Gold richly layered on Solid Pewter. A limited quantity of these plates is available for just $40 each.

SCAMPY
Super-mutt

"If all humans had the good qualities she has, the world would be a wonderful place to live in." This was the letter and the dog that won the hearts of the judges who recently chose "Scampy" Mutt of the Year—a title we think this floppy-eared bundle of fuzz certainly has earned. Her entry was submitted by the Marlfield Old People's Home in Hampshire, England. Scampy, who is nine years old and who lives at the Home, was awarded this handsome silver trophy and a year's supply of dog food.

What do you do if you are a middle-aged woman who has gone back to work after the children are out of the house and your new boss makes a pass at you? "Frankly at my age, I'd like to be flattered by the thought, but I would be more likely to think that he needed a new pair of glasses," says Nancy Cory of Asheville, N.C., an author of "The Kelly Girl Second Career Guide"—a new source of information for women who want to return to work (Little Brown, $3.50). For Mrs. Cory, the hardest thing to face when she embarked on her second career was "suddenly finding myself taking commands instead of issuing them. Most women are so used to running husband, children, volunteer organizations, etc., it's hard to adjust to 'not being the boss.'"

Wide World

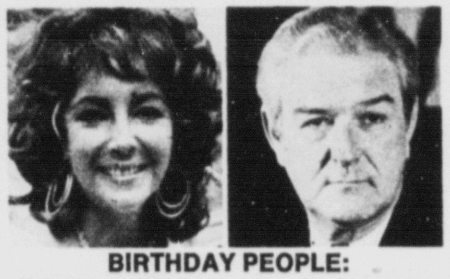

ALEX KARRAS
Like reaching for an apple . . .

What did the Detroit Lions' former defensive tackle, Alex Karras, used to think about while the quarterback called the signals? "Well, if it was fairly sure to be a pass play, he was the one I thought about. The quarterback. He's the guy I had to get to. I couldn't think about the man in front of me; I had to get around him as quickly as I could. One could say that the offensive lineman has no more significance than the fence you climb over to get an apple off the neighbor's tree. The apple is what has all your attention. Any time I began to think about killing the man in front of me, then I was not going to be able to rush the passer." From "Mad Ducks and Bears" by George Plimpton (Random House, $7.95).

NEW TWIST

They've bottles, now, for medicine
That have a special lid.
They can't be opened, it is said,
By any prowling kid.

This special lid or top is safe
It will not yield to childish yank
Or common twist or turn.

I have a bottle full of pills
I keep upon a shelf.
The top's secure—I've tried, and I Can't open it myself.

Middle age is that time of life when you finally know your way around, but don't feel like going.—Lane Olinghouse

Did you read about that trucker who parked illegally in the middle of the road and walked away, backing up traffic for 15 miles? So the cops arrested him—for impersonating a doctor.

—Robert Orben

All that stands between us and a home of our own is our teenage daughter. —Thomas LaMance

The pedestrian had been standing on the corner for hours, while cars and trucks streamed by continuously. He couldn't get up enough nerve to risk a crossing, but finally spied a man on the other side of the street and called to him. "Hello! How in the world did you get over there?" The other man cupped his hands to his mouth and shouted back: "I was born over here!"

—Thomas LaMance

Nothing gets you into debt faster than trying to keep up with people who already are. —Lucille J. Goodyear

When our marriage didn't work, my husband and I decided to get a divorce. Sometime later, I was quizzing my six-year-old son to see if his father was planning to remarry. He looked thoughtful for a moment and then replied, "Yeah, I think so. His first wife died, you know."

—Mrs. Claudia Parry
Ontario, Calif.

When the husband exclaimed, "I've just discovered oil on our property!" his wife said, "Wonderful! Now we can get a new car!"

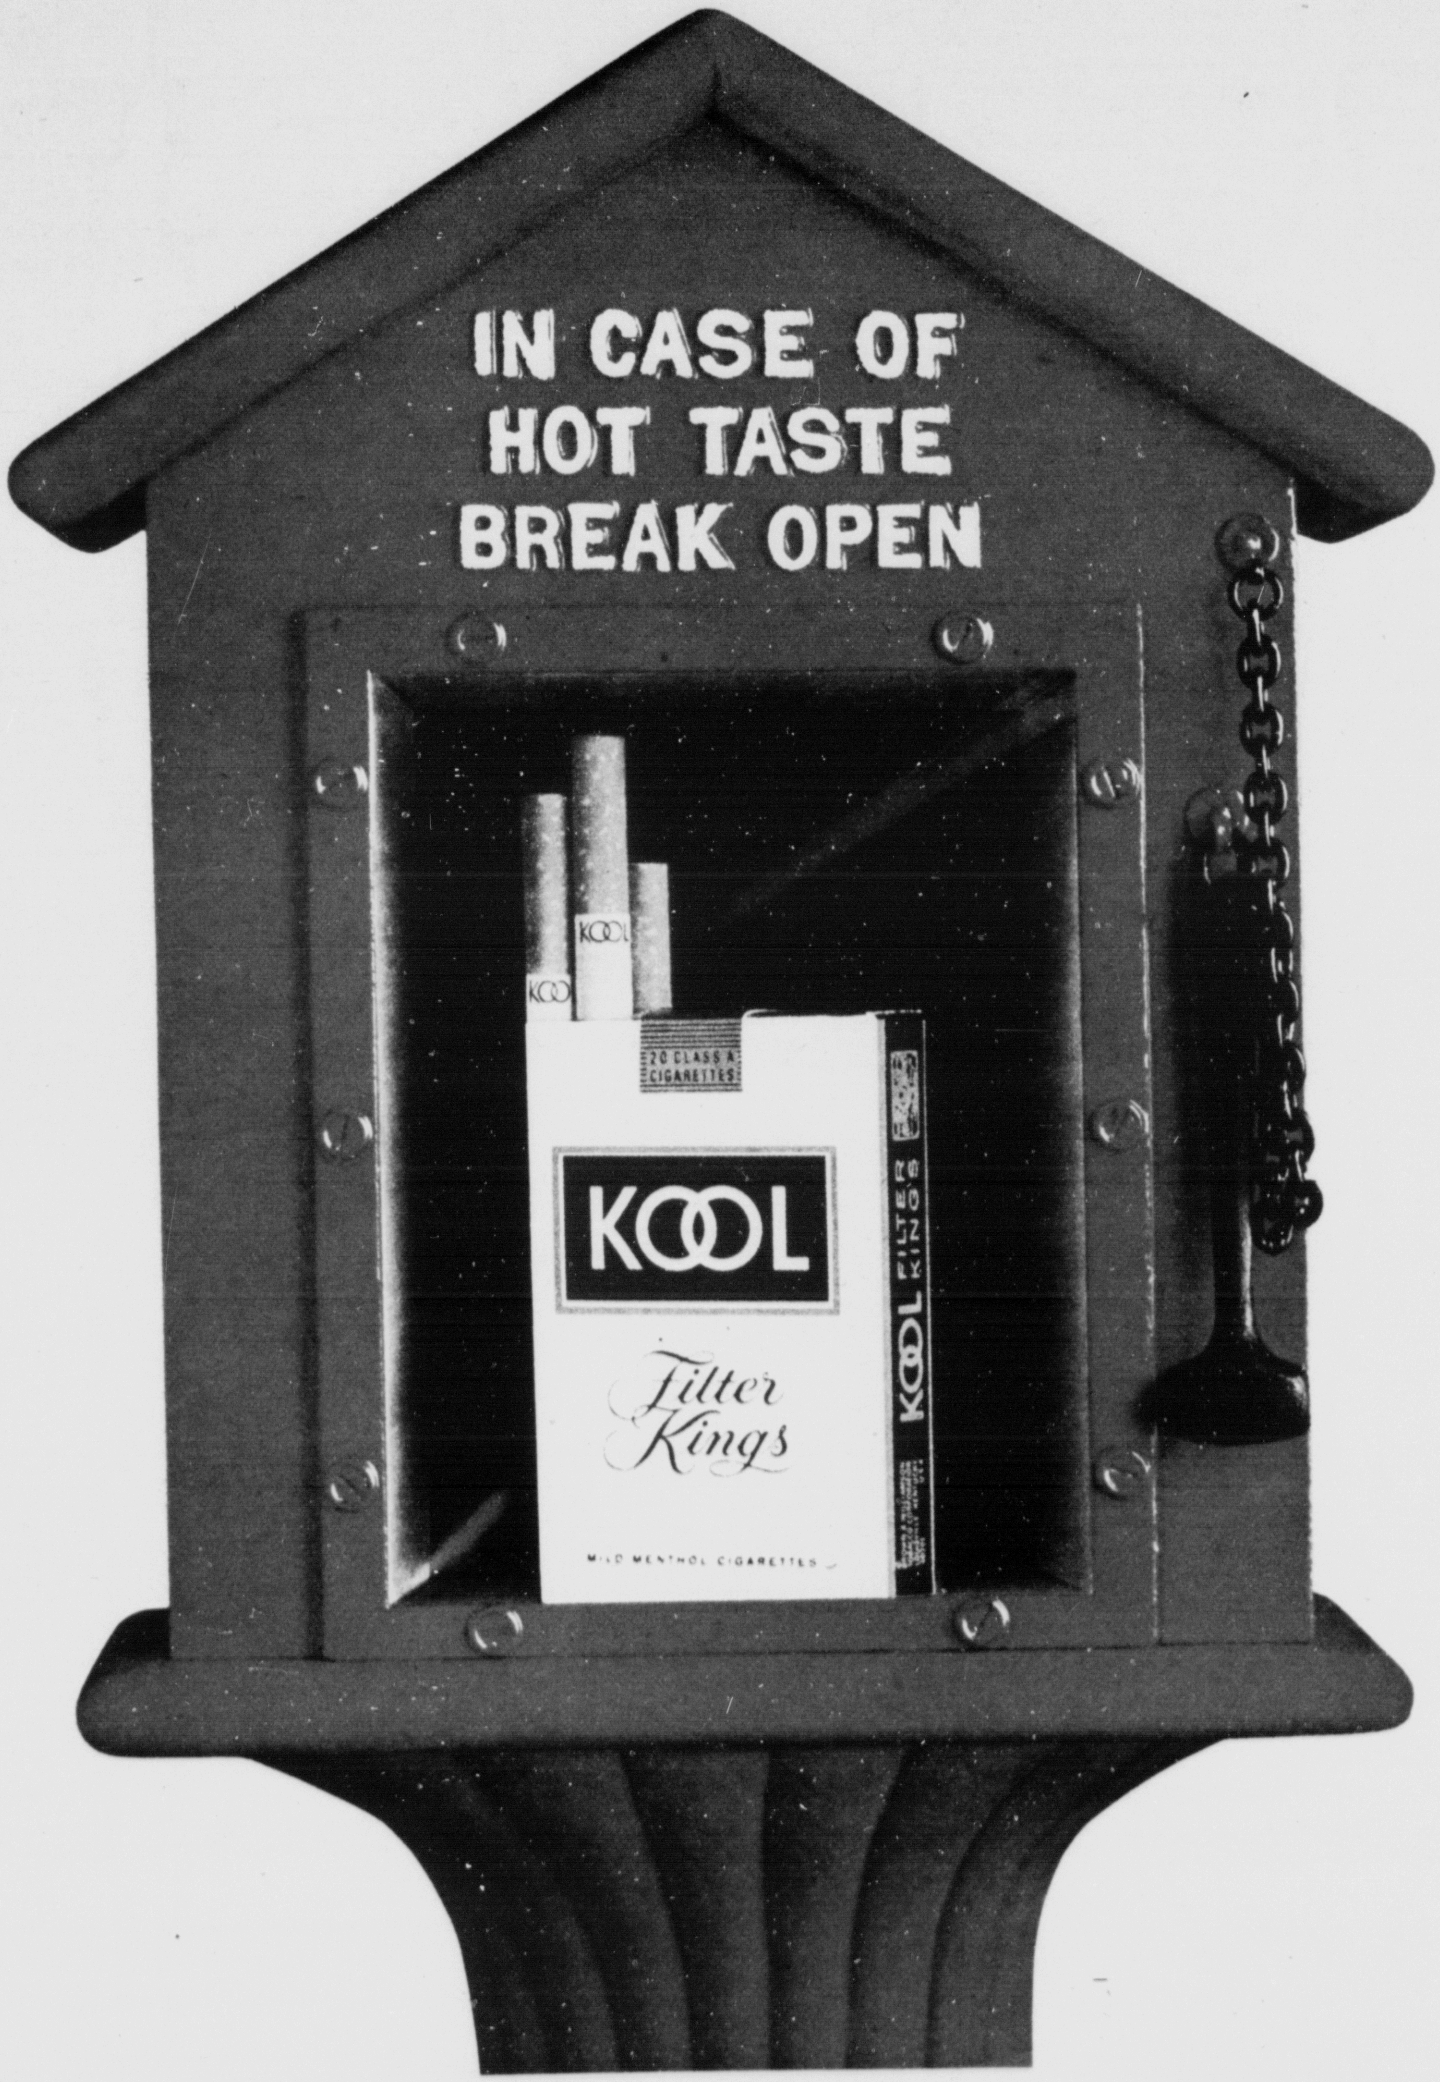

"We'd better get the old one fixed," responded the husband. "That's where the oil's coming from."—Dorothea Kent
